BR. RICHARD CAREY, FMS

CENTRAL CATHOLIC'S NEW PRESIDENT

Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame, defines leadership in this way, “The very essence of leadership is that you have to have a vision. It’s got to be a vision you articulate clearly and forcefully on every occasion. You can’t blow an uncertain trumpet.” Central Catholic’s astounding success as a school has been deftly steered by the vision, courage and determination of its leaders, past and present, Marist and Lay. These men and women clearly exemplify Hesburgh’s leadership maxim, and as a result, the School has become one of the premier Catholic secondary schools in New England.

This legacy of leadership continues today in the committed and experienced hands of Br. Richard Carey, FMS. On September 16, 2013, Br. Rick Carey assumed the presidency of Central Catholic, succeeding Br. Thomas P. Long, FMS ’73 who served two terms as school president. Chairman of the Board, Michael Torrisi ’92 stated in making this announcement, “The School is very fortunate to have Br. Rick return and bring his vast leadership experience to the role of President of Central Catholic.” As Principal of Central Catholic High School from 1991 – 1999, Br. Rick deftly led the School’s transition from its 61-year history as an all-male school to a vibrant, sought-after co-educational Catholic college preparatory institution.

Following the principalship at CCHS, Br. Rick served as President of his alma mater, Marist High School, Chicago for nine years. In addition, Br. Rick has served in administrative roles at Marist College, NY and with the Institute of the Marist Brothers, Rome, Italy. Br. Rick entered the Marist Brothers in 1982 and professed vows in 1984. He is a graduate of Bradley University in Illinois and holds advanced degrees from Loyola University, Chicago and Boston College.

Br. Rick shared some of his thoughts in a brief October interview with the Emblem.

Q What attracted you about returning to CCHS in this new role as president?

A: Central Catholic has always been a place I would have loved going to as a student myself. I felt the same way in my years as Principal. The School’s family spirit and welcoming environment, its ability to celebrate and give expression to the many and varied gifts of students make Central Catholic a community that nurtures and supports young people and challenges them to be unafraid to take risks.

Q What have you seen in the first weeks on your return to CCHS?

A: I have sensed and seen, in the faculty and staff, an extraordinary amount of new life and energy blended with the outstanding commitment and dedication that has always been part of the school’s tradition of excellence. This is at the heart of Central’s spirit.

Q What has been your focus since your arrival, and in due course, in the months ahead?

A: I am meeting with people in various leadership roles to understand the important conversations that have been ongoing at the School as they pertain to the goals for the near and distant future. After a period of time, I will be fully engaged in the process of assessing objectives and assist in bringing the most critical of these into reality. These objectives will be focused on enhancing the character of the school today and developing new areas of excellence in the years ahead. Also, in my earlier years at CCHS, I met outstanding young people, and now as alumni, they are business and professional leaders. I hope to engage them as a resource in assisting CCHS in new and exciting endeavors.

Q What is Central Catholic’s most pressing challenge at this time?

A: The cost of tuition to many families is a significant sacrifice and a difficult hurdle to overcome. To be true to the School’s founding mission, Central Catholic must find more financial strategies to keep our tuition affordable while continuing to build the quality of our programs.

Q When you have a little free time, what are your favorite ways to relax?

A: When I have the time, I like playing golf and always have. I enjoy watching our students compete in athletics, on stage, or in any activity in which they are passionate. Do-it-yourself projects at the Brothers’ Residence in Lawrence are relaxing for me. It’s an old house and there’s plenty to do.

Please join the Central Catholic community in welcoming Br. Rick Carey, FMS!

“As our class moves forward in life, we must maintain within us the core values that united us at Central Catholic. We advance not as separate entities but as a powerful collective force of faith, kindness, fortitude and ideological strength.”

- Simon A. Serrano '13, Valedictorian

“Central Catholic has taught us how to excel in and out of the classroom, given us the guidance to strive and persevere for our dreams. It has even given us the ability to discover who we truly are and who we are meant to be.”

- Emily L. Round '13, Salutatorian

The Class of 2013 will go down in Central Catholic history as one that established enviable milestones and set the bar high for all future CCHS classes. Comprised of 314 graduates from 26 cities and towns, many ethnicities, cultures and faith traditions, the Class of 2013 is now embarked on the road to personal and educational fulfillment so conscientiously paved by their achievements at CCHS.

Milestones were set by the Class of 2013 academically. 98.5% of 2013 grads are enrolled presently in higher education with over $14 million in college scholarship aid awarded for their undergraduate years in college – a total unsurpassed by prior graduating classes. 53% of the members of the Class of 2013 were enrolled in AP Classes and took 351 Advanced Placement exams from a variety of 21 different disciplines. Their AP Exam results exceeded national averages by nearly 40% and the MA state average by 15%.

The Class of 2013 was among the first 2 classes to participate in the CCHS & Syracuse University Dual Enrollment program, to graduate with academic credits from Central's Virtual High School online classes, and sent the very first graduates of the School's International Student Program on to US colleges and universities.

"Serving the least favored" is one of the foundational pillars of a student's Central Catholic education. The Class of 2013 set a new standard for compassionate service to others with over 13,300 hours of community service at over 100 regional sites, working with the very young, the physically and intellectually challenged, the sick, the homeless, the hungry and the lonely. Over their four years at CCHS, the Class of 2013 helped to raise over $105,000 for cancer research at Dana Farber Cancer Center and the Jimmy Fund through the Catwalk 4 Cancer Fashion Show and nearly $50,000 for needy local families through the CCHS Christmas Project.

As for Raider spirit and success in athletics, 2013 saw the Raider Girls Basketball team lead the way by raising a banner as Massachusetts Div. 1 State Basketball Champions! The Raiders also captured MVC League Championships in Girls Soccer, Girls Softball, Girls Indoor and Outdoor Track, Football, Boys Basketball and Boys Ice Hockey. On the same weekend in May, the Raider Boys & Girls Outdoor Track Teams earned Div. 2 Massachusetts State Championships, while Raider Softball became Div. 1 North Champions. The Raiders were also crowned Massachusetts Decathlon Champions. The Raider Varsity Baseball team won the MIAA Sportsmanship Alliance Award and was honored at Fenway Park by the Boston Red Sox. In the arts, the Class of 2013 delighted audiences with their theatrical talents in performances of "The Man Who Saved Christmas" and "Crazy For You" and with seasonal concerts by Central Harmony – A Capella Singers, the Concert Chorus and the Concert & Jazz Bands. The halls of CCHS became a vast and colorful gallery featuring all dimensions of student artwork during the Spring Fine Arts Exposition.

The Class of 2013 celebrated its Baccalaureate Mass on Thursday, May 23 at St. Mary Church and the 75th Commencement Exercises on Friday, May 24 took place in the Memorial Gymnasium in front of nearly 3,000 jubilant family and friends.

NEIL MULCAHY '77 ON TOP OF HIS GAME

Neil J. Mulcahy '77,
Executive Vice-President, FOX Sports Media Group-Sales

THE POWER OF ONE

As Neil Mulcahy '77 headed out the door escorting the young girl to his CCHS classmate's party in 1976, the words thundered in his head. "If you so much as hold my sister's hand tonight, you will answer to me and God's Love, and you know what that means!" bellowed CCHS Assistant Principal, Brother Thomas Petite, FMS.

To this day, Neil Mulcahy credits Br. Thomas Petite with being the most important person in his life beyond his family – and it was not at all about fear. "Br. Tom was an incredible influence on my life. He taught me there are four principles of true happiness and success in life: be respectful to everyone, work hard, put your energy into doing good and always have a sense of humor." Those lessons have been indelibly learned and daily lived by Neil Mulcahy '77, Executive Vice-President of FOX Sports Media Group-Sales.

A PLACE TO CALL HOME

The demands of Mulcahy's father's job led to a number of moves by Neil's family during his youth and adolescence. With the family moving from Connecticut to Salem, NH, Mulcahy's father hoped to see Neil continue his elementary Catholic school education by attending Central Catholic for high school. A solid academic student his first two years at CCHS, Neil, a sports lover, played for the Raider's junior varsity football and basketball teams. In February 1976, his junior year, Neil's dad was transferred again and the family moved to New York where Neil spent the remainder of the school year at North Rockland High School in Stony Point, NY.

Unhappy at leaving CCHS, though his family remained in New York, Neil Mulcahy returned to CCHS in September of senior year. Until he could find a permanent living arrangement with relatives, the family of Mulcahy's best friend and CCHS classmate, Joseph Hadad '77, opened their home to him through the month of December. "I will always treasure Joe's friendship and the generosity of his family, for without either, I would not have had the great privilege of being an alumnus of Central Catholic," affectionately states Mulcahy.

For a period of two weeks subsequently, Mulcahy lived with the Marist Brothers at their residence while his cousins, Ann and Dan Healey, readied a place for him in their home. Neil's love for Central Catholic and the Marist Brothers deepened as he witnessed the fraternal camaraderie among the Brothers, and saw them, not as authority figures, but as hospitable men who delighted in many a good laugh and mutual pranks now and then.

Academically, Mulcahy blossomed in his final year at CCHS in honors level classes and his football talents earned him Merrimack Valley Conference All-Conference honors. The nomadic journey had paid great dividends scholastically, athletically, and most importantly, personally!

Uncertain on a definite path after graduating Central Catholic, and reuniting with his family in New York, Neil attended St. John's University where he concentrated on studies in Media & Communications. Finding joy in sports as he always had at CCHS, and especially football, it is not surprising that Neil played for four years as a tight end on the SJU football team. "One of the greatest thrills of my life," smiles Mulcahy, "was scoring a touchdown in the Meadowlands against St. Peter's University."

THE MAIL AND THE SALE

Legendary football coach, Vince Lombardi was famous for saying “The dictionary is the only place that success comes before work. Work is the key to success, and hard work can help you accomplish anything.” Neil Mulcahy’s career is undeniable proof of this wisdom. Starting literally in the mail room in 1981 at CBS in New York, sorting and delivering mail to various offices, Mulcahy impressed every superior and executive he met with his intelligence, common sense, strength of character and his exuberant and affable nature.

In 1987 several CBS sales executives joined the team responsible for launching the FOX Network. Having witnessed Neil’s dedication and energy in the opportunity he was given in sales at CBS, the executives recruited him to join the new network in sales and commercial coordination. Mulcahy fondly recalls the early years of FOX Network and the intense efforts of the commercial sales team to keep the network financially and commercially viable by successfully encouraging sponsors to purchase commercial time for such programs as, “21 Jump Street”, “Married With Children” and “Mr. President.”

As the FOX Television Network grew in viewer popularity and gradually evolved into a media force so did Mulcahy’s critical role. His success in presenting FOX’s expanding programming to vendors and potential sponsors world-wide convinced many of the opportunities it provided for their products, and they signed on big-time!

SUCCESS FOLLOWS SUCCESS

Rung by rung, Mulcahy ascended the corporate ladder from Salesman, Sales Planner, Manager of Sales Planning, Vice-President of Marketing, to Senior Vice-President for Eastern Sales for FOX Sports & Entertainment. At each step along the way, Neil has built honest, trusted and mutually beneficial business relationships with colleagues at the network and with a multitude of sponsors who, through Mulcahy’s efforts, have come to highly value the FOX Sports brand.

Today, 26 years after joining FOX, Neil is the Executive Vice-President of FOX Sports Sales responsible for sponsors on the entire network, as well as all cable programming and on FOX.com. This includes sponsorships for Major League Baseball, NASCAR, UFC, College Football, College Basketball, Soccer, the NFL and the new FOX Sports 1 Channel which launched in August. For his remarkable marketing acumen, Neil was recently honored by Ad Week magazine as one of the “Top 50 Executives Who Make The Wheels Turn” in the industry.

FAITH AND FAMILY

Mulcahy attributes his personal and professional success to his years of education in Catholic schools, and notably to Central Catholic. “At CCHS I developed a strong relationship with God, prayer and Central Catholic’s patroness, Saint Theresa. And I needed every ounce of faith I developed at Central Catholic,” says Mulcahy, “to successfully get through the ordeal of a diagnosed brain tumor and the onset of multiple sclerosis four years ago in 2009. My faith served me well, I feel so lucky and positive in my life today in both my fulfilling work with colleagues and sponsors at FOX Sports and to be able to fully enjoy every day with my very close and beautiful family.”

Every non-working moment of Mulcahy’s life today finds him enjoying evenings and Sunday dinners with Helen, his wife of 31 years, his two daughters, Lindsay and Briana, both of whom are elementary school teachers, and his son, Neil Jr., an editor at Sports New York and FOX News Channel. Neil and Helen now relish every moment with their first grandchild, Riley Rose.

In the community, Neil expends his scant and precious free time helping in the fight against cancer by fundraising for ongoing cancer research fellowships and the work of Dr. Stephen Forman at City of Hope Hospital, CA and with “Ocean of Love”, a non-profit agency which provides personal and financial support to help cancer-stricken children and families in Tom’s River, NJ.

As one can easily see, Neil Mulcahy clearly understands the meaning of God’s Love. Br. Tom Petitte had no reason to worry at all!

“ Br. Tom was an incredible influence on my life. He taught me... be respectful to everyone, work hard, put your energy into doing good and always have a sense of humor. ”

the iPad initiative

& One-to-One Computing:

More than Meets the i

iTeach and iLearn

In September 2013, Central Catholic inaugurated what has come to be known as “one-to-one computing”, a computer in every student’s hands in every class – the iPad.* The freshmen class, the Class of 2017, and each succeeding CCHS class, will experience a revolution in teaching and learning! With the iPad as a teaching and learning tool, CCHS adopts a model of interactive education which ignites a higher level of student engagement, interest and understanding.

Young students of today expect to use technology to explore any topic and learn what there is to know. In the decision to opt for one-to-one computing, Doreen Keller, CCHS Principal, states, “It has always been true that good teaching meets students where they are at in their knowledge and skills, and then increasingly challenges them to build upon this foundation. This maxim remains true today and certainly will be just as true into the future.”

Central Catholic’s mission statement confidently professes “to prepare hearts and minds for college and for life.” In the 21st century this requires students to be expertly versed in critical thinking and the wise use of technology, says CCHS Chief Technology Officer, Jodi Linnehan Kriner. Colleges and universities fully expect students to use online tools for completing assignments, doing research, writing and submitting term papers, and even taking exams in electronic form. “We would not be giving our students the best preparation possible for their future studies and their professional lives without the one-to-one computing experience. Employers of all kinds, seeking the next generations entering the work force, expect young people to be fully adept in the multiple uses of technology,” asserts Linnehan Kriner.

The i’s Have It

After several years of examining a variety of technology gadgets for this purpose, Linnehan Kriner and school leaders chose the iPad for its convenience, long-life and breadth of educational applications. The initiative began as CCHS teachers received iPads in 2012. Linnehan Kriner, along with members of the CCHS iPad Evaluation Team, comprised of teachers and students, piloted the program with select classes in 2012 and trained teachers in the use and educational applications of the iPad.

“Apple continues to develop great educational applications in a large number of areas of the CCHS curriculum. Apple has done this efficiently and at a manageable cost for students and the school,” explains Linnehan Kriner.

With more than 1,000 digital devices using Central’s wireless network, the school boosted its wireless capacity with significant expansions to wireless access points and bandwidth. Students and faculty can use the information network from anywhere on campus: classrooms, labs, hallways, cafeteria, library, gymnasiums. iPads are not alone in technology devices for learning. Smart phones, digital projectors, Apple TV, “Smart Boards”, Virtual High School – offering over 100 online curricula, are among the technology resources which enhance teaching and learning. Tools are important, but tools without the necessary skills can be idle or under-utilized. Linnehan Kriner, Library and Media Director, Kristina Keleher, along with Assistant Principal for Curriculum, Andrew Nikonchuk ’98, assist faculty daily with the integration of technology to create interactive classroom lessons and applications.

iTeaching and iLearning Edges

Central’s iPad initiative brings a host of advantages to students and teachers.

- Digital textbooks include images, videos and resources which engage students interactively. For example, Mrs. Fran Cook makes dynamic use of Pearson’s Biology iBook in freshmen biology class with interactive 3-D virtual animal dissections. Textbooks on the iPad cost only a fraction of the print versions, saving as much as 80% on the textbook costs.
- Teachers can enrich ideas, expand the walls of the classroom and demonstrate concepts with real-world applications through “apps” which allow students to manipulate and experiment with data.
- Students can include their own notes in their iPad textbooks as well as classroom notes on the iPad. Everything is in one place on the iPad.

- With the iPad, students have their daily planner, class schedule, assignments, due dates, school and activity calendars in their hands allowing them to stay organized and responsible.
- Students take quizzes and tests on their iPads and teachers “collect and correct” them electronically.
- Students develop facility for online research and learn to critically evaluate the reliability of sources of information.

The iPad creates the “flipped classroom” as it has been called. Students watch lectures, read textbooks, do research, develop their questions at home, while spending their time at school with teacher-facilitated, hands-on applications of concepts and methodologies with the teacher as a critical resource to smooth out difficulties and create connections and lasting understanding.

The iWord on the Street

Initial reactions to the CCHS iPad initiative have been highly positive. “Students jumped right in enthusiastically, truly enjoying the interactive learning environment and feeling classroom instruction come alive”, says Linnehan Kriner. To be sure there have been some early technical glitches which CCHS continues to address as they arise. The commitment of the entire CCHS community to this initiative has been wholehearted and inspiring. To this end, CCHS has also introduced its Technology Integration Team, one member from each academic department, to evaluate new technologies and pedagogical strategies for respective departments.

Teachers are discovering inventive ways to use the technology to enrich learning with every passing day. Parents have been very positive about having their children well-prepared for educational and professional lives in the digital world. Alumni are proud that CCHS is among the small number of schools in New England on the leading edge of providing these 21st century skills.

Principal Keller reinforces the importance of this innovative model of teaching and learning, “In the ever-expanding demands of the digital age, we must give our students every knowledge and tool necessary to bring them to the places they dream of getting to in the future.”

The 2013-2014 Central Catholic Fund – Investing in Excellence: Peterson Pledges $50,000 to Challenge New & Increased Gifts to CCHS Fund

Never far removed from the halls of Central Catholic, Albert C. Peterson '50 is one of Central's most loyal and supportive alumni. "Al" has faithfully served the School in a myriad of influential capacities that, to this day, continue to benefit Central and its students.

In hopes of inspiring others to make a difference for Central and its students, Peterson has pledged a challenge gift of up to $50,000 that will match any new or increased gifts to the 2013-14 Central Catholic Fund. Every new gift or increased gift received through June 2014 will be doubled through the Peterson $50,000 Challenge!

Peterson asserts, "Central alumni often speak with gratitude and affection for the influential role Central has played in their lives, but I'm amazed that just a small fraction, only 6%, actually give to support CCHS and its students. I believe our Central community can do much better, and I hope my gift challenges all Central's alumni and its many friends to make a gift to CCHS for all that Central has done for them and the local community."

As a CCHS student and class officer, member of the Raider championship baseball team, UMass Lowell graduate and Manager of Production Engineering Planning at Raytheon, Al's life is a model of integrity, concern for others and the pursuit of excellence. The Peterson $50,000 Challenge is shaped by these personal traits and his devotion to CCHS.

Last year's Alumni $35,000 Challenge Grant awarded by the Catholic School's Foundation achieved its goal as $38,400 of new and increased gifts were made by alumni. Alumni & friends are asked to play a part in repeating this success by helping to put the Peterson $50,000 Challenge over the top!

Gifts to The Central Catholic Fund – "Investing in Excellence" in response to The Peterson $50,000 Challenge can be made using the postage paid envelope enclosed in this issue or at www.centralcatholic.net/give

Restocking the Woodpile: Classes of 2009 and Beyond

A weary traveler hoping to find a warm and safe place to stay on a cold winter's night happened upon a lonesome cabin. The traveler enters and finds a sign next to a lantern that says, "You are welcome to our hospitality, stay as long as you need, warm yourself by the fire, stay until you are ready for the balance of your long journey. All we ask by way of thanks is that you re-stock the woodpile for the next traveler who needs the warmth."

Is there a teacher, faculty or staff member at Central Catholic who made a real difference in your life, whose influence has stayed with you even to this day? You can say "thank you" by "re-stocking the woodpile."

Alumni from the CCHS classes of 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013 and beyond are invited to make a 4-year pledge in any amount of $5.00 to $20.00 per year to honor a special teacher or faculty member who made a difference in your life. The honored teacher, faculty or staff member will be notified of your gift in a surprise visit to their classroom or office and presented with a certificate of gratitude in your name. Your grateful gift will keep the fire of dedication burning hot in your chosen honoree – for all those who follow you.

To honor a teacher or staff member, you can make your pledge to "re-stock the woodpile." It's simple and takes only a few minutes. Go to www.centralcatholic.net/give and click on "Recent Graduate Giving Program." Inspire our faculty and keep the fire burning for those who come after you.
