Christopher F. Sullivan '81

Named President of Central Catholic
High School

After a national search and evaluating a number of highly qualified candidates, Central Catholic chose its new President from among the ranks of its own faculty and alumni. Christopher F. Sullivan '81 was appointed as President of Central Catholic. Chris, a graduate of Merrimack College and with a Master's in Education from Rivier University NH, has been a member of the faculty for 31 years, serving as an English Teacher, Coach, Admissions Director, Assistant Principal, and most recently as the Director of Religious Studies and Spiritual Life. After nine months in the President's role, Central's new President shares his thoughts in a recent interview with The Emblem.

EMBLEM: Central Catholic was founded by the Marist Brothers. You are the first lay person to be named as its full-time President. What do you see as your primary role as President?

SULLIVAN: One does not have to be a Brother to be truly Marist. Being Marist means looking to Mary as a role model who will lead us to her Son. Mary is this model for me. I consider myself to be a Marist, so the President of Central Catholic is still very much a Marist. My role is to continue the mission of Central Catholic – making Jesus known and loved - in the spirit of St. Marcellin Champagnat, founder of the Marist Brothers, and insuring all we do as a school is a true reflection of the Marist charism.

EMBLEM: What inspired you to seek the position of President of Central Catholic?

SULLIVAN: The word "vocation" came up in my reflection and prayer as I considered my candidacy. I have always felt I was called to be at Central Catholic. In every role I've had at CCHS I've tried to live out and express my vocation - to bring young people to Jesus in one way or another. I know Central Catholic is where I'm meant to be, where God has called me. I am confident that many other faculty & staff would say the same if you asked.

EMBLEM: How have the various roles you've played in your Central Catholic career prepared you to be the school's President?

SULLIVAN: I really believe I am particularly qualified to relate the stories and experiences that make up the history of our extraordinary school and the lives of our students. I can realistically remind our alumni of the quality of their experiences here and demonstrate the many ways their legacy fills the school with the inspiration and energy to continue to grow into the premier high school it has become.

EMBLEM: As a Catholic school in the rapid-paced world of young people in the 21st century, how do you see Central's role in the educational mission of the Catholic Church?

SULLIVAN: Central Catholic is a place where students and our adults are encouraged to both develop and actively share their Faith. Through programs in campus ministry, retreats, masses, daily prayer and our service learning program, our students form and actively express their Christian faith in ways that are personally meaningful and relevant to their lives. Our hope and goal is this active Faith experience will inspire them to fully own and carry their Faith into their evolving personal lives, and that as adults it will encourage them to active and meaningful participation in the Church.

THE Class OF 2016

Faithful to Our Marist Heritage

The Class of 2016 took on the challenges of leadership in the student body with an indefatigable energy powered by "Red and Blue" passion, not only for the big events of the 2015-2016 school year, but for every iota of daily life at Central. "Being Marist" becomes a way of life for Central's student body when each graduating class of Raiders demonstrates by its actions, the values of hard work, true family spirit, and responding to God's call to bring Jesus to the world as Mary did so faithfully.

The Class of 2016 passed on this inheritance to younger students. Through their example, the CCHS Class of 2016, in large part, succeeded in transmitting these ideals of our Marist heritage to future generations of Raiders. From top college acceptances, to MVC and regional athletic championships, from creative pursuits in art, music, dance and drama to compassionate acts of service, from seeking a deeper relationship with God while encouraging others to do so, to building diverse and life-long friendships, the 341 members of the Class of 2016 have set a sterling example by challenging themselves outside the "comfortable" to the "scary." Instilled in CCHS grads is the knowledge that it is in the "scary" that each finds the person God calls them to be for the world.

Hailing from 41 different cities and towns, the Class of 2016 continued the CCHS standard of over 98% enrolled in university studies, and in so doing, earning over $14 million in scholarships for college.

64 members of the Class of 2016 were named AP Scholars in recognition of outstanding achievement on the College Board's Advanced Placement Exams. Eight (8) graduates attained the rare achievement of top scores on eight or more AP Exams and were named "National AP Scholars." 89% of the 199 grads enrolled in CCHS AP courses earned national competency scores or higher – a testimony to the efforts of Central's AP teachers and the diligence and initiative of the Class of 2016.

In Creative Arts, the Class of 2016 captured imaginations. The 45th season of the CCHS Theatre Guild was dedicated to retiring faculty member, Ms. Karen Moynihan '69SM. The Class of 2016 were the mainstays, both on-stage and behind-the-scenes, in the classic musical, "Oklahoma" and the original play, "A Year With Roxanne," written by CCHS English teacher, Sharman Merrill '89SM. Also in dramatics, the Advanced Acting and Performance class and Theatre Guild members competed at both the New England Theatre Conference Olympiad and the Massachusetts Educational Theatre Guild Festival, winning awards in acting, set design, costume design and vocals.

The Winter and Spring Student Art Expos have become events not to be missed. Over 100 visual art and design students demonstrated their array of visual arts talents. Additionally, four members of the Class of 2016 earned medals in the statewide Boston Globe Scholastic Art Competition. The Concert Choir and the CCHS Concert Band played to standing room only audiences during the Christmas and Spring performance seasons. Through the efforts of a dedicated staff of editors from the Class of 2016, Visions, the CCHS literary magazine, published its 17th issue, a collection of essays, poetry, photography, and art work of students. The issue was dedicated to Ms. Karen Moynihan '69SM in recognition of her inspirational career as a CCHS English teacher.

13,920 hours of volunteer service with community organizations, locally and regionally, given by the Class of 2016, is an undeniable testament to their boundless hearts and compassion. To this day, Mission Collections, Thanksgiving Food Drives, the Christmas Project supporting 51 local families, continue to be spearheaded by each graduating class and remain a part of the CCHS tradition of "giving." An army of 300 students led by students in the Class of 2016 with the help of local businesses, produced the 9th annual Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show, which raised nearly $21,500 for patients being treated for cancer at local hospitals. Their 2016 efforts bring the nine-year total of C4C funds raised to $246,000.

Class of 2016 leaders in Campus Ministry openly shared personal stories of faith and encouraged younger students to find Jesus in their daily lives at Marist Youth encounters, CCHS retreats, in liturgies, daily prayer and acts of kindness to each other.

"Central Catholic has shown me that the strength of a community or society lies in its diversity, not in its conformity."

Valedictorian

Matthew A. Soucy '16,
2016 class president,
welcomes all to the Baccalaureate Mass

The Class of 2016 challenged the CCHS student body to "think small and change the world" as leaders organized TEDxYouth@Central Catholic. An inspiring group of movers-and-shakers from our alumni, government, non-profit organizations, business and education, were invited to share their insights on very real ways in which youth can make our world a better place. More pragmatically, in the world of finance, a team of 2016 classmates from Business and Investments classes competed in the MA State Stock Market Investing Competition, earning a 28% return and 9th place out of 1,166 high school teams.

It was a "banner year" athletically for the Class of 2016 as they led teams which hung many MVC and sectional championship banners on the walls of the Memorial Gymnasium among these: Raider Football - also Div. I State Finalists, Raider Girls Soccer, Raider Girls Gymnastics - also Div. I North Champions, Raider Girls Indoor Track, Wrestling Div. 2 North Champions, Raider Boys Ice Hockey - MIAA Super 8 participants, Raider Baseball and Raider Softball.

Capping off this "banner year", the Class of 2016 celebrated their Baccalaureate Mass on May 24 at St. Mary Church, preceded by the Legacy BBQ for CCHS & St. Mary HS alumni families whose family members were among the 2016 grads. With more than 2,000 family and friends in attendance on May 26, the Class of 2016 received scholarships, awards and their coveted diplomas at the 78th Commencement Exercises in the Memorial Gymnasium. Classmates of the 50th Golden Anniversary Class of 1966 led the procession of graduates. In a very emotional moment at Commencement, the Class of 2016 dedicated its yearbook, "The 2016 Florentian," posthumously to CCHS faculty legend, Mr. Robert Rooseboom '64.

SHINING

Stars

As the Central Catholic community reflects on the plethora of achievements of the members of the Class of 2016 in and out of the classroom, their vibrant Raider spirit and their compassionate hearts, CCHS can assure its legions of alumni that the Class of 2016 is yet another class of maturing young men and women in whom all our alumni can take pride. We invite the reader to enjoy a glimpse of the Class of 2016 through the achievements, character and words of 12 of its representatives. Everything you see in these young men and women is a true reflection of the nature and spirit of the Class of 2016.

MADISON M. BORRELLI

Hometown: Salem, NH

Saint Anselm College, NH

Major: Engineering Studies

"I was challenged in every possible way to grow as a person in my years at Central Catholic. In the safe and respectful CCHS environment you never fear trying to stretch yourself out of your comfort zone, in fact everyone at CCHS encourages you to be brave enough to take this risk."

Madison Borrelli undoubtedly responded to the encouragement she received from faculty, friends and coaches alike. Her natural passions abounded in the realm of athletics. A four year member and captain of the Raider girls' basketball and softball teams, Madison earned 3-time recognition as a Merrimack Valley All-Star in both sports and always came through in the clutch, defensively and offensively, when the teams needed her most. For her multi-sport achievements, Madison was honored with the Mary I. Kilcoyne Award as the outstanding female student-athlete in the Class of 2016.

In the classroom and other CCHS activities, Madison brought this same passion and determination. She proved a determined achiever in 5 AP courses and a host of Honors Level courses, and recently was honored as an AP Scholar by the College Board. Her leadership extended beyond athletics making contributions as a member in the National Honor Society, the Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show, Cor Unum Meal Center volunteer and as a Student Ambassador.

My advice to younger students has nothing to do with athletics: "Go outside of your circle of friends, become friends with people of different interests, different backgrounds and cultures. You'll not only learn and appreciate more about them, but gain even more invaluable knowledge about yourself." ★

MICHELA A. CAFFREY

Hometown: Andover, MA

Catholic University of America, DC

Major: History & Media Studies

Do you want to know what drives Michela Caffrey? With all she achieved and contributed to CCHS as a student over four years, she tells the Emblem, "My proudest moment at Central Catholic was singing at the Baccalaureate Mass for the final time with our Liturgical Band." It wasn't the spotlight on her, nor the music accompanying her, but it was the opportunity to share the joy that her faith brings to her and invite her classmates to feel this joy.

"I came to Central Catholic knowing nobody. I was not an athlete either. But I had the most amazing teachers who took the time early on to get to know me well. Then they helped guide me and encourage me to take risks, get involved in directions that suited me personally and my CCHS experience really took off from there." Michela's involvement as a Campus Ministry team member, Theatre Guild actor, Encounter Retreat leader, Amnesty International member, the Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show committee and her role in the Liturgical Band and Chorus among others, led her to both discover and display the strengths and passions that transformed a thoughtful, reserved young woman into a confident, positive, sincere and humble force who drew many other classmates into friendship and followed her example in a myriad of faith-inspired activities.

Michela earned consistent Honor Roll grades academically. Her mature degree of personal responsibility insured that she put forth a thoroughly conscientious effort in both her Enriched and Honors level courses.

"Central is such an amazing place because of the wonderful faculty and staff, all of whom truly care about your successes, but more importantly they guide you through the tough times of life." ★

MARGARET R. DEVLIN*Hometown: N. Andover, MAVassar College, NY*Major: PsychologyMinor: Spanish

For Margaret Devlin, the goals are always very humble and compassionate. "I always see myself doing work that positively affects the world around me." It is the mark of genuine humility and selflessness that considering all that Margaret has achieved at Central Catholic, her satisfaction truly comes from working passionately to get important things done well, shirking the spotlight that could easily be hers. The little things tell Margaret's story, from volunteering for six years giving horseback riding lessons to special needs children, to co-chairing a very successful CCHS committee raising funds to support an orphanage in the Dominican Republic, to leading spiritual retreats for underclass CCHS students.

Though Valedictorian of the Class of 2016, Treasurer of the National Honor Society, and recipient of a multitude of academic awards, including being named an AP Scholar with Distinction for her extraordinary success in 6 AP courses, Margaret humbly admits she does not have all the answers. She gratefully states, "Central Catholic was the right environment to give me the freedom to explore and try out my personality and strengths, allowing me to discover the kind of person I want to be. My classmates and teachers have shown me that personal strength and true self-discovery lies in appreciating diversity, not conformity. In the diversity Central offers we were expected to support each other daily, all the while learn about life, love and our own truest natures."

As was true for her four CCHS years, Margaret's future aspirations reflect Central's Marist spirit, "I hope one day to graduate from law school and make a difference in the lives of people. I am prepared to take on the world, quietly making Jesus known and loved in everything I will do." ★

RYAN FERRARA*Hometown: Haverhill, MAUniversity of New Haven, CT*Major: National Security StudiesMinor: Arabic

"I definitely benefitted from the confidence that the Central Catholic faculty instilled in me. My teachers and coaches always pushed me to be and do my best. Whether it was practicing for the AP U.S. History exam or pushing me to shave a few seconds off my 400 meter hurdle time, the faculty at CCHS convinced me of what I was capable of, even if at first I did not see it myself."

The hard work Ryan put forth has paid real dividends. Membership in the National Honor Society, Academic Excellence Award in Social Studies, named an AP Scholar with Honor by the College Board, LeMoyne College Academic Scholar Award, MA State Outdoor Relays qualifier in the pole vault and 100m hurdles and member of the 2013 Div. 1 MA State Raider Football Championship team, gives a clear picture of the effort, self-discipline and determination Ryan brings to any challenge.

Ryan aspires to serve as a commissioned officer in the U.S. Army. He begins this path by being honored with a full National Army ROTC Scholarship for his college studies and start his officer training. With Ryan's unswerving focus, academic work ethic and the confidence in his ability to rise to challenges, can anyone doubt that, after his selfless military service, he will reach his ultimate goal of serving our country in the counter-terrorism division of the F.B.I.?

"If you are willing to put in the time and effort, your success is sure to follow." ★

CARINA M. IMBORNONE*Hometown: Methuen, MABoston University, MA*Double Major: Economics & English

"Teachers at Central are awesome people to get to know, and they have shaped my personal education both during and outside of class. I always knew that grades were important, but they brought me to appreciate that learning, ideas, and thinking critically, are far more important if you wish to make a difference in the world." The power of ideas, especially examining and evaluating new ideas, drives Carina's natural curiosity, creativity and her future path in life.

Carina's understanding of the power of words and ideas led her to be involved in leadership efforts in Central's Model UN Conferences, its Mock Trial team, the Science Olympiad team, as an editor for the CCHS literary magazine, as a delegate to MA Girls State and her selection for the New England Young Writers Conference.

Carina earned a multitude of gold & silver CCHS academic awards, named an AP Scholar with Distinction by the College Board for her stellar exam scores in 9 AP courses, recognition for animated film making, Boston Globe Scholastic Art awards, the Cretella award for oral and written communication, collectively further evidence the breadth and depth of Carina's learning and talents. It was no surprise that Boston University, recognizing her diverse and impressive abilities, offered her a full four-year scholarship.

Carina, who one day hopes to be a diplomat, writer or entrepreneur, leaves a lasting appreciation in our students of the power of even small ideas. She successfully re-established TEDx Youth @ CCHS and brought guest speakers to challenge students to "think small to change the world." She will always be a woman who pursues interesting ideas and opportunities with a goal of making a positive impact, benefiting a part of the world around her. ★

NICHOLAS J. MCCOOL

Hometown: Methuen, MA

Boston University

Double Major: Communications & Political Science

"From Central Catholic, I learned the power and the benefits of reaching out to new people and the opportunities which can follow. "Raider Nation" is a respected network of faculty, alumni and influential people in the region and across the US; opening opportunities for developing your ideas and interests." Never one to be shy, Nick McCool smartly advantaged the CCHS network to develop his interests in media and broadcasting. He is determined that one day in the not too distant future, his talents will be widely known in the world of mass media.

A high-achieving student with numerous gold & silver academic awards and CCHS activity awards, Nick's academic focus recently earned him the highest award given by the College Board - "National AP Scholar." Beyond the classroom, Nick found or created avenues to develop his interests in media communications and enrich school life. Creating, producing, writing and hosting Central's now well-established podcast, "Everything McCool about Central", Nick has left a skillful legacy for students with digital media interests. So engaging was Nick's venture that it led him to be offered his own regional youth talk show on local AM/FM radio. "I was thrilled to bring something new to the community while giving myself the opportunity to continue to develop my craft. I know there's a long road ahead and dues to pay, but one day my aim is to be an on-air anchor personality on a major media network." Nick's voice and enticing persona were on display as announcer at athletic contests and as co-host of TEDx Youth@CCHS.

Nick's passion and achievements in and out of the classroom did not go unnoticed by Boston University as he was awarded a full four-year scholarship for undergrad studies. "Central did an exceptional job preparing me for college with the opportunities offered in and out of the classroom. Central's teachers and staff do what they do for one reason only - it is their lives' passion. My gratitude is indescribable." ★

MICHAEL T. MERCURI, JR.

Hometown: Lowell, MA

Merrimack College, MA

Major: Sports Management

"As a three-sport, year-round athlete, I look back on my success in the classroom as totally traceable to the time management and study skills I learned and developed at Central. On top of this, my teachers and coaches encouraged me and showed me how to work hard academically, not just on my athletic teams."

Michael's demanding athletic schedule and his desire to be as good a student as he was an athlete, motivated him to readily adopt and faithfully adhere to the organizational skills presented by his teachers. He brought his own athlete's self-discipline to bear on his studies and earned very solid grades in his college preparatory studies. This combination of discipline, effort and talent earned him the enviable recognition at Commencement with the presentation of the 2016 Michael Garvey Award as the outstanding male student-athlete in the graduating class.

A sure-handed, fleet footed and hard-nosed competitor in both baseball and football, Michael was named All-MVC Conference in both sports in junior and senior year. In addition, Michael was named the Merrimack Valley Conference's MVP in baseball and Boston Herald All-Scholastic in football for his senior year. Despite these accolades, Michael notes, "My most satisfying achievement as a Raider athlete was being a member of two Super Bowl football teams, and being part of the team winning the Div. 1 MA State Super Bowl Championship in 2013."

"What I take with me from my years at CCHS that will shape my future life and career though, is the absolute importance of always being respectful of people and to be accountable for your actions in life." ★

CASEY J. ORKNEY

Hometown: N. Andover, MA

West Virginia University, WV

Major: Business Marketing

Minor: English Literature

"There are countless aspects of Central Catholic that I will take into my future life. One important element stands out and has impacted my view of living a life of faith. Central is a community based on Gospel values. As such, as students and later as adults, we are called on to act with love and support for each other and for the least-favored around us."

A glimpse into Casey Orkney's years at Central Catholic will easily confirm the sincerity in his words. He is a young man imbued with the Marist spirit, a spirit which celebrates and welcomes all as members of the one family created by God. He served his CCHS community and classmates as Director of Camp Champagnat Student Leadership Camp, as a Rector for an Encounter Retreat and as a Retreat Leader for 1st and 2nd year students, an elected member of the Student Council Executive Board and Homeroom Missions Representative. When not on the diamond as a four year valuable member of the Raider baseball team, Casey could be found cheering on his classmates as one of the spirit leaders of the "Red Sea" of fans at games.

In the academic realm, Casey challenged himself with demanding coursework in the AP level, Honors level and Enriched level of college preparatory courses. Setting and managing priorities very effectively, he earned a 3.56 GPA over his entire CCHS career and a significant scholarship to West Virginia University.

Casey would humbly tell you the achievement which means most to him was being honored with the Saint Marcellin Champagnat Senior Class Award, named for the founder of the Marist Brothers. "At Central I learned the value of hard work and that it produces great results, what it means to be a servant-leader, and how to live my life in the Marist way." ★

WILLIAM J. PANNOS

Hometown: N. Andover, MA

Middlebury College, VT

Major: Biochemistry

Ask Will Pannos his philosophy for living a fulfilling life and he says, "Just go for it. If you're tempted to try something new, you should absolutely do it. It will ALWAYS be better to look back with knowledge learned from experience, rather than later asking yourself 'what if?'" Looking at the accomplishments Will has racked up in the wake of his personal axiom, can anyone doubt its efficacy?

Carrying 6 AP Courses and a host of Honors Courses and 8 school activities, including swimming competitively for the Raiders and another out-of-season swimming club, one can see he follows his own counsel. AP Scholar with Distinction from the College Board, Retreat and Encounter leader, Student Ambassador, National Honor Society – all this tells only part of his story.

Will's diligence, self-discipline and talents made him one of the top competitive male swimmers in MA. He capped his outstanding career as a Raider swim captain by winning the Div. 1 MA State Championship in the 100 yd. butterfly. "Seeing the number 1 next to my name after a hard fought race was one of the most gratifying things I've ever seen. Earning a state title in swimming left me with the most incredible feeling."

Putting all the accolades aside, Will is focused on expanding his next horizon as a biochemistry major at Middlebury College where he will also swim collegiately for the Panthers. "What if?" are two words Will Pannos will likely never utter when it comes to carving his path in life. ★

ROSA R. REYNOSO

Hometown: Lawrence, MA

Worcester Polytechnic Institute

Major: Management Engineering,

Biomedical Concentration

Minor: Global Studies

When a young man or woman is selected as the recipient of the Brother Florentius FMS Memorial Award at Commencement signifying that he/she is the "outstanding graduate who exemplifies the highest ideals of Central Catholic," it usually comes as a complete surprise because she/he does not see herself/himself as any more special than other classmates. For Rosa Reynoso, also chosen as "Lawrence's Youth of the Year" by the Boys & Girls Club, the humility, joy and shock were very real. "I felt an amazing wave of happiness and love coming from my classmates and teachers. Why me, when so many of my classmates have accomplished so much at Central?" One possible answer: Rosa's is the story of many immigrant families who for decades have come to Lawrence for a better life.

Despite coming to the US from the Dominican Republic as a youngster, knowing little English, but blessed with a contagiously positive attitude, an understanding that success in life is accomplished through hard work, Rosa infused her every effort and activity, in and out of the classroom, with an infectious and grateful joy that came from valuing, respecting and learning from every classmate, teacher and activity. Unafraid to take many of CCHS' most challenging AP Math and Physics courses, she says, "I could have taken a bit easier road, but I knew that teachers at Central Catholic would provide me with lots of wisdom and support if I was serious and let them know when I needed help. I knew I was never alone! Now at WPI, I am confident in my ability and knowledge – and who knows? – maybe shatter a glass ceiling someday."

When her apartment burned down in sophomore year, losing everything she and her family owned, Rosa and her family had to start all over again. A Montagne Scholar, a determined Rosa came to school the next day ready to re-build her life. "You can face all the obstacles in the world, but the only thing that matters is that you continue to move forward."

Rosa, who could not run a half mile entering Central, earned captaincy of the Raider Girls Cross Country Team and ran for the Varsity Raider Girls Track team. A lasting impact Rosa has had on Central lies in her example of faith and hope put into practice through service to classmates and community in Campus Ministry, as Co-chair of fundraisers for an orphanage in the Dominican Republic, as Coordinator for Freshmen Orientation and as a member of Project Rebuild with Habitat for Humanity NY.

Rosa reflecting on her CCHS experience sums it all up, "I am so glad I strengthened my relationship with God, and found my true self and the importance of giving love and respect to everyone, no matter their place in life." ★

ELLA M. SHEEHAN

Hometown: Methuen, MA

Providence College, RI

Major: Biology

"Central changed me for the better in lots of ways. Academically, the challenging courses and passionate, caring teachers taught me to push myself beyond any dreams I had for myself. Central made me a better version of myself than I would ever have become in another environment. I want to do all I can to improve people's lives." Ella Sheehan's transformation now is centered in a desire for advanced study in biological sciences in hopes of one day working at St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, conducting research to advance new treatments of childhood cancer.

Ella openly admits, "I had never been involved in service to others before CCHS. These activities have become my favorite memories and also gave focus to my love of sciences." A National Honor Society member, earning AP Scholar status from the College Board, Ella responded strongly to every challenge academically and found time to be a 4-year member of the Raider volleyball teams and on Raider track teams for 3 years. Even with this, Ella stretched herself in new directions taking on roles in the Campus Ministry team, first attending then leading retreats for underclass students, and embracing leadership in major CCHS service projects, including the Christmas Project - serving 51 local families annually, with Project Rebuild and Habitat for Humanity, NY and as a regular volunteer at the Methuen Senior Center.

Ella received the Saint Theresa Award as a CCHS senior. She states the greatest lesson she learned from her experiences at Central Catholic is: "Be Kind, have Faith and strive to become your best self." ★

MATTHEW A. SOUCY

Hometown: Methuen, MA

University of New Hampshire, NH

Double Major: Musical Theatre &
Business

"I felt humbled to be elected class president each of my CCHS years. I always tried to be myself, to be a good listener and earn the trust of my classmates by trying sincerely to have my words followed by actions that matched my words. Central's teachers were great mentors for me in gaining this character and the people skills."

Hard-working and conscientious, Matthew recently was named an AP Scholar. "Central teaches you how to set priorities and effective time management, so while staying on top of my challenging academics, I was always able to branch out and try new things." "Branch out" he did on the Executive Board of Student Council, as a Camp Champagnat leader, Student Ambassador, Project Rebuild member, Retreat leader, Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show member, and athlete on junior varsity teams in three sports. However, where Matt is most at home, where all his talents are on impressive display, is on the CCHS theatre stage. Matt has played key roles acting in six productions: Oklahoma, A Year with Roxanne, Once Upon a Mattress, Scrooge: The Musical, Back to the 80's and Valentines and Mistletoe.

"Central gave me the confidence and opportunities to stretch myself academically, to figure out who I am, and then to be comfortable putting "me" out there. When push comes to shove this is a great foundation for success. I'll take these lessons to college and beyond. Whatever I choose to do in life, I hope to affect people positively." ★

EMBLEM: What do you believe are two of the most pressing challenges facing Central Catholic in this era?

SULLIVAN: The School must make every effort to keep the Central Catholic educational experience as affordable and accessible for families who wish their children to be at Central Catholic. This challenge must remain Central's highest priority, and it will require a commitment from every member of the CCHS community. In addition, there is always a need for growth of our physical facilities; being land-locked in the center of the city is a challenge that continues to require creative solutions over time. I'm confident we will answer these challenges successfully with the help of God and all those who care so very deeply about Central Catholic.

EMBLEM: For 81 years Central Catholic has made its home and thrived in the City of Lawrence. What does this mean to you?

SULLIVAN: As a native of Lawrence, it is clear there are legions of really good and wonderful people in this city, and I'm proud CCHS is a valuable asset to this community. God wants us to be exactly where we are to serve the children of the Merrimack Valley. CCHS is a very unique learning community, a school where a student from a million dollar home in the suburbs will study, befriend and shares daily life with a student who lives in the heart of Lawrence. The great result is that our students understand, appreciate and respond maturely to different ways of thinking, varied ethnicities, cultures, worldviews and life experiences. Students are exceedingly well-prepared not only for college, but for the challenges and blessings of diversity required to live successfully in today's world.

EMBLEM: Central Catholic has over 16,000 loyal alumni, what do you wish to say to them?

SULLIVAN: If you haven't been back to Central Catholic in some time, I invite you to come back, have a conversation with a student and get a glimpse into his or her life here. While the school and its programs have evolved dynamically over the years, you will quickly see and feel the impact of your legacy on the experience and achievements of our students today, and that the founding mission of Central Catholic is as truly alive and relevant today as it was in 1935 and the decades that followed.

EMBLEM: When you recall your own experience as a CCHS student, what are the influences which stand out for you?

SULLIVAN: I had great teachers and mentors as a Central student. Education became my vocation because I wanted to inspire young people to look at the world thoughtfully and differently, as Mr. Warren Hayes '54 inspired me. Br. George DiCarluccio, FMS was more than a teacher, he was a friend and confidant who allowed us to laugh and grow and be comfortable as we figured life out. Karen Moynihan '69SM taught me the value of trust. As a teacher, she had confidence in me when I didn't have confidence in myself, and she instilled a sense of purpose in me that has carried me through life. Today, I walk the halls of CCHS and witness our faculty doing these same things every day. I continue to work alongside some of the best people I have ever known. People who love kids, love teaching, and love Central. ☪

ON THE FRONT LINES of the Cancer Wars

During his 2016 State of the Union Address, President Obama called on the smartest minds in the medical and health field to collaborate on a new, national “moonshot” initiative to eliminate cancer as we know it by 2020 and dedicated $1 billion to jump start this ambitious effort. As did President John Kennedy’s bold vision lead to Neil Armstrong’s walk on the moon, why should we all not hope for the same ultimate success with the “cancer moonshot”? Approximately 1.6 million new cases of cancer are diagnosed in the United States annually, and National Institute of Health studies project that 39% of men and women in the U.S. will be diagnosed with some form of cancer in their lifetime.

Herein are the stories of just four Central Catholic alumni devoting their expertise and professional lives to cancer treatment and research. They are on the front lines as members of teams passionately caring for patients, while others seek to rid humanity of the disease by advancing effective cancer therapies.

Bruce Minsky, '73 M.D.

Director of Clinical Research
Division of Radiation Oncology

MD Anderson Cancer Center - Houston, TX

For over 30 years, Dr. Bruce Minsky '73 has intensely studied, conducted critical oncology research to improve cancer therapies, trained young oncologists, and treated thousands of people stricken with renal, gastro-intestinal and rectal cancers. Currently he is Director of Clinical Research, Division of Radiation Oncology at the University of Texas, MD Anderson Cancer Center, in Houston. MD Anderson Cancer Center, with 28,000 employees, is ranked as the #1 Cancer Center in America in the US News & World Report "Rankings of Best Cancer Hospitals." Dr. Minsky oversees 70-75 clinical trials for scientific quality and assessment of outcomes and measures the degree of positive impact on current clinical knowledge. Aside from research efforts, he treats cancer patients with the newest innovations in radiation therapy as part of a team of surgical, radiation and chemotherapy oncologists.

A 1973 graduate of Central Catholic, Dr. Minsky completed medical school at University of Massachusetts Medical School after earning his B.S. in Biochemistry from Worcester Polytechnic Institute. He specialized in Radiation Oncology as a resident at the Joint Center of Harvard Medical School, soon after serving as an Instructor of Radiation Oncology at Harvard Medical School.

"Among the most satisfying chapters of my work was the 20-years spent in both research and patient treatment at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City. I was part of a talented team in both research and treatment that developed combinations of radiation and chemotherapies applied collaboratively before surgical interventions to preserve the functionality of organs. This was a novel concept in the field of oncology."

Over and above Professorships in Radiation Oncology at the University of Chicago Medical School and Cornell University Medical School, Dr. Minsky's membership on innovative research teams has led him to be invited to lecture internationally in this field. Currently, he is intensely involved in a joint research program with MD Anderson Cancer Center and Massachusetts General Hospital, funded by the National Cancer Institute, examining the benefits to patients of a new proton radiation regimen to determine its promise over today's standard proton treatments.

"My days at Central Catholic were invaluable in setting me on this path so successfully. As is the case today, it was also true in the 1970s, Central Catholic teaches its students to be highly self-disciplined and accountable to high standards. Mr. Warren Hayes '54 gave me the basics of how to write well, Mr. David DeFillippo '66 inspired a love of literature. Both of these led me to success in writing scholarly articles in medical journals and in grant-writing for my research. The ethics I learned in Religious Studies classes, most especially the respect and dignity of each human person, helped make me a good person and an even better doctor." ☞

Christian F. Meyer '86, M.D., M.S., Ph.D.

Medical Oncologist, Adult Sarcomas & Instructor

The Johns Hopkins Hospital - Baltimore, MD

There are more than 100 types of cancer. Most cancers occur in the organs of the body, such as lung cancer, brain cancer or breast cancer. With the incidence of approximately 15,000 cases annually, compared to the occurrence of 200,000 cases of breast cancer, sarcomas are among the rarer forms of cancers. Sarcomas are solid tumor cancers that develop in the connective tissue cells that support organs: fat cells, nerve cells, muscle cells and bone cells. Dr. Christian Meyer '86, serves as the lead medical oncologist for adult sarcoma patients at the Johns Hopkins Hospital and its Sidney Kimmel Comprehensive Cancer Center, Baltimore, MD.

When Dr. Christian Meyer '86 reflects on the origins of his professional medical journey, he clearly draws the starting line with the unmistakable influence of several Central Catholic teachers. "Witnessing their intense passion and impressive knowledge in the life sciences, Central's teachers triggered my interest and fostered my curiosity in the sciences. Ms. Jeanne Burns made the study of cell biology come alive for everybody. I felt like she was sharing the basic secrets of life, genetics and mutations with us. My history classes were intellectually stimulating because they took me far beyond facts, emphasizing critical thinking and creating an openness to theories and opinions. The late Mr. Peter O'Sullivan '67, CCHS cross country coach, instilled in us the notion that real success comes from each member of a team making a contribution they are capable of making. I live all these lessons every day in my work at Johns Hopkins Hospital and its Sidney Kimmel Comprehensive Cancer Center."

After graduating Central Catholic, he was admitted to Stanford University where he earned both a B.S. and Master's degrees in Biological Sciences, Cell and Molecular Biology. His desire to be involved in both medical research and direct patient care led him to study in the Medical Scientist Training Program at Baylor College of Medicine, earning his M.D. and Ph.D. in Immunology. On the clinical side, Dr. Meyer cares for patients directly and assists in the development of treatment plans for sarcoma patients as part of a team of multi-disciplinary cancer treatment specialists: medical oncologists, radiation oncologists, and surgeons.

Dr. Meyer is currently involved in research trials at Johns Hopkins Hospital designed to investigate methods of stimulating the human immune system to fight cancer cells. Since 2005, research into the use of immune therapy to fight cancer cells has matured. Dr. Meyer explains, "Since cancer cells are very different from healthy cells, the immune system is able to identify them. A variety of new pharmacological therapies are being tested to trigger the immune system to attack and kill cancer cells. It may not work for all cancers, but with each passing year research is extending its effectiveness to more patients. There is great hope here for the future."

Of all the directions his medical career could have taken, Dr. Meyer chose cancer research and treatment because "At the end of the day, taking care of people with cancer - the lessons they teach you about their courageous experience - it is a privilege to be with them in their journey. They inspire in you a special personal and professional drive to bring every resource possible to help them."

Michael S. Lawrence '94, B.A., Ph.D.

Assistant Professor of Medicine

Massachusetts General Hospital

In-depth research today and also in the future, attempts to investigate the causes of cancer at the genomic level. It is the hope that intensive comparison studies of the DNA in normal cells to the DNA of cells from cancer patients will reveal identifiable mutated driver genes. As genomic mutations of various forms of cancer are carefully mapped, medical science attempts to choose or develop a medication that will give the best results attacking the specific cancerous mutation.

Michael S. Lawrence '94, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital, continues to dedicate his medical science career to discovering what goes wrong with DNA that causes various forms of cancer. "I first began to appreciate the computer-like coding process in every human cell in my Biology and AP Biology classes at CCHS. Mrs. Fran Cook and Ms. Jeanne Burns, devoted many lessons on DNA and how DNA encodes protein strings in human life. Even with an interest in computers from a young age, it never occurred to me that the work of DNA on strings of proteins was so precise. Despite an exact copy of DNA in every human cell, it was the turning on or off of DNA in cells which created cells with different functions: brain cells, bone cells, blood cells, etc. This learning has really defined my life."

Earning a B.S. as a double major in Biochemistry and Cognitive Sciences from Brandeis University, his interest in mathematics and biochemistry coincided with the genomic research being done at Harvard University, where he did post-doctoral research. Accepted into the Ph.D. program at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he began studies and research in the field of computational biology. In his research work at M.I.T.'s Broad Institute, using computers and DNA sequencers, Lawrence examined vast collections of DNA sequence in thousands of cancer patients. Studying mutations in DNA of malignant cells in the body can provide evidence of factors which trigger genes and cells to become malignant. His studies also involved DNA sequencing of cancerous tumors removed from patients as compared to DNA from their healthy tissue to isolate the differences in DNA. The research in this field has led to findings that demonstrate genetic susceptibility to certain forms of cancer.

Lawrence's current research role as Assistant Professor of Medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital is an extension of his M.I.T. research. He is deriving DNA sequencing data from MGH cancer patients to discover what goes wrong with DNA that causes various forms of cancer and to establish new collaborations with MGH oncologists in their search for effective therapies for specific forms of cancer.

Lawrence is clear about the lessons his research has taught those in this field. "Cancer as a disease is so very complex. At the genomic level every person has a different cancer. We are in the early stages of understanding certain forms of cancer. Recent research and clinical trials in immuno-therapies and genetic therapies may lead to significant extensions of life for many of whom traditional treatments prove ineffective."

Dominique Caruso-Murphy '03 at right with sister, Alessandra '09

Dominique Caruso-Murphy '03, MSSc., PA-C

Physician Assistant

Dana Farber Cancer Institute & East Boston Neighborhood Health Center

The motivation for Dominique Caruso-Murphy '03, MSSc., PA-C to pursue her profession and path in the treatment of cancer patients originated very close to home. In her youth, several family members had been diagnosed with forms of cancer, sharpening a desire to pursue medical training in the field of oncology. As she investigated this direction in her early years at Central Catholic, she discovered a dynamic field that was rapidly evolving with promising advances. The question remained: would she be academically and professionally prepared for this path?

Caruso-Murphy's confidence that she could traverse this path successfully was, as she states, cemented by CCHS faculty. "I learned to express myself clearly in writing in English class with Mrs. Sharman Merrill '89SM, Ms. Karen Moynihan '69SM further shaped my confidence in the oral and written communication that I would need to compete and excel in academic and professional environments. Mr. Robert Benedetto '89, my AP Biology teacher, was intensely serious about the subject matter, and most importantly, related it to important challenges in the world beyond CCHS; knowledge was always relevant and practical."

From Central Catholic, Caruso-Murphy was admitted to Georgetown University where she graduated magna cum laude in Human Sciences with certification in International Health. In her final Georgetown semester, she accepted an internship in a teen clinic at a community health center – "All my educational experiences came together, my path to a career in medicine and health proved right to me. The opportunity to see the direct benefit I could render through my care for patients was a great personal reward; it became my passion."

The burgeoning field of Physician Assistant and its opportunities to work as a diverse clinician attracted Caruso-Murphy to Yale University, where she completed a Master of Science and certification and licensure in the Physician Associate program. At Yale, she also chose a clinical rotation serving indigenous peoples in Peru and the Amazon River Basin setting up mobile clinics for people who had no access to medical care.

A PA position in Family Medicine in the inpatient units at Boston Medical Center brought her home to Boston, where the opportunity to work in oncology presented itself at Dana Farber Cancer Institute. As part of the inpatient Medical Oncology team she cares for medically complex adults with both solid tumors and hematologic malignancies. Her work includes, assessment of symptoms, ordering and interpreting diagnostic testing, developing assessment plans, chemotherapy treatments and coordination of discharge services when patients ended in-patient cancer treatments. "Working at Dana Farber as a member of the bone marrow transplant team and with the Women's Cancer Team, specializing in breast, ovarian and other gynecologic cancers was, at the same time, the most challenging and most rewarding. Sometimes this work meant helping our patients to transition back home when recurring cancers left little more than comfort we could provide for them. Yet in other times, our cancer patients responded so positively to treatments they left Dana Farber looking forward to a whole new future ahead."

As a new mother of twin boys, Caruso-Murphy has stepped away from full-time work for a period. Though she continues to serve as an Adjunct Professor in the Physician Assistant program at Tufts University, she knows she shall return to her passion in patient care. "I truly admire the inner strength and resolve of people – treatments and physical suffering can be difficult to both go through and to witness. As a clinician, I truly admire the many ways medical health professionals step up and go beyond their roles to help others get through such trauma. It is why I love my work."

CATWALK4 CANCER

Raiders Annually Join the Effort to Ease the Burden of Cancer

Ten years ago, students at Central Catholic whose families had been touched by a diagnosis of cancer in some form, decided to stand up and join the fight. An effort which began in 2008 with Philip Picardi '09 and his committee of over 150 CCHS students continues annually to this very day. CCHS students plan and organize for months to present the Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show. A dedicated cadre of Raiders put on the "Catwalk" to raise awareness and significant dollars to support cancer research, prevention and treatment, as well as responding to the needs of families facing the challenges that follow a cancer diagnosis.

The student-run Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show held each spring is an event that merges a love for fashion with the ongoing efforts of a number of research and medical institutions dedicated to the elimination of this disease. Five working committees of CCHS students along with student volunteers totaling in the hundreds, faculty members and local businesses of all types, come together for a common cause. The Catwalk4Cancer Show features current seasonal fashions from small boutiques and large retailers, modeled by students, faculty and cancer survivors on a runway constructed in the Memorial Gymnasium. In addition to featuring the latest fashions, medical professionals address the 900-1000 people in attendance on topics of prevention, current research & emerging treatments. Cancer survivors add a sharp reality to the night as they share personal stories of their trying journey through treatment to remission or recovery.

April 1, 2017 marks the 10th anniversary for the Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show, with its theme, "10 Years Tonight, Celebrate the Fight!" Since its inception in 2008, CCHS students have raised nearly $250,000 through the Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show.

Ticket revenue, raffles, silent auctions for generously donated gifts, along with kind business sponsorships have made the "Catwalk" a truly incredible success. Funds raised through this compassionate endeavor over the years have been earmarked for organizations such as the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Research Foundation, Dana Farber Cancer Institute, the Jimmy Fund, and locally for the cancer centers at the Lawrence General Hospital and the Holy Family Hospital, Methuen. The 2017 Catwalk4Cancer Fashion Show supports the Anna Jacques Hospital Cancer Center Newburyport, MA and Lucy's Love Bus, Boston, MA. Featured speakers at the 2017 Catwalk4Cancer were Catwalk4Cancer founder, Philip Picardi '09 and Stephanie Fronduto '11, cancer survivor, who now works at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, NYC.

MARIST BROTHERS CELEBRATE 200 YEARS OF EVANGELIZATION OF YOUTH

The young French priest, Father Marcellin Champagnat, ordained in 1816 and appointed curate of LaValla, traveled the mountainous country of rural France serving the people. In October 1816, Fr. Champagnat was called to the bedside of Jean Baptiste Montagne, who at the age of 17 was dying without any knowledge of God. The young priest sat with the boy sharing the person of Jesus and His Almighty Father, baptizing the young man just before he died. This event spurred Fr. Champagnat into action.

On 2 January 1817, Fr. Champagnat called two young followers to LaValla with seven others to follow soon after. The young French country boys, "Little Brothers of Mary", as Fr. Champagnat called them, were the first Marist Brothers. Fr. Champagnat sent them into the villages to teach children religion and to read and write.

2017 marks the Bicentennial of the founding of the Brothers. Their mission of evangelization and education in our 21st century is as infused with Marcellin's spirit as it was in 1817. Today 3,000 Marist Brothers are dedicated to making Jesus known and loved through the education of young people, especially those most neglected.

Marist Brothers fully embody this mission and share it with the laypeople who labor with them in schools and ministries on five continents – united as Marist educators. Champagnat's golden rule for Marist educators, "to bring up children properly, we must love them, and love them all equally" is the foundation from which flows the Marist style of educating the young: presence, simplicity, family spirit, love of work and following in the way of Mary. For this eternal gift to the Catholic Church and its educational mission to youth, Fr. Champagnat was canonized as St. Marcellin Champagnat in 1999.

Co-Education Turns "20" at Central Catholic High School

As the 1996 -1997 school year opened, a new chapter in Central Catholic's storied history was written when over 100 young women enrolled for the first time and blazed a trail that in 2017 continues to enrich every aspect of school life.

From a school of 630 young men in 1996, Central has grown over 20 years to an enrollment of 1,300, equally young men and women, and added 50 new academic programs, more than doubled its campus facilities and strengthened the meaning of Marist family. Most important, however, young women in the Merrimack Valley, now 52% of the region's high school age population, have the opportunity for a premier Catholic college preparatory education and a multitude of extra-curricular activities, which collectively give them tools to reach their life's goals.

Cheers to 20 ♀ Years!!

50th Golden Anniversary Reunion – The Classes of 1966 Central Catholic High School & St. Mary High School

104 members of the 50th Reunion Class of 1966 of Central Catholic and St. Mary High School gathered together for three days of festivities in celebration of their 50th Golden Anniversary of their graduation. The 1966 classes from the two neighboring high schools decided at the outset for a shared reunion. The three days of events were very well-attended, highly enjoyable, filled with renewing friendships, recalling the memorable and not-so-memorable events, and years spent together as classmates, reminiscing about the “good old days” in Lawrence, teachers, school activities, dances, clandestine schemes, and so much more.

The “golden” festivities coincided with the week of the CCHS 78th Commencement Exercises for the Class of 2016, May 25-28, 2016. On May 25, 56 members of the 1966 classes of CCHS & St. Mary HS attended the “Welcome Home Cocktail Reception” at Jocelyn’s Restaurant, Salem, NH where classmates were greeted with photo ID’s from their CCHS & SMHS years. Classmates were pleasantly surprised at how easily they recognized both the old and new visages. Mr. Warren Hayes '54, CCHS English teacher emeritus, delighted alumni with his presence and his vivid memories of the students in the Class of 1966.

On May 26, 2016, along with special guest and former CCHS faculty member, Mr. Ronald Diss, reunion members were treated to a “golden breakfast”, a tour of the new Central Catholic, performances from “Central Harmony – A Capella,” followed by the Golden Diploma Luncheon, hosted by Br. Rick Carey, FMS, former CCHS president. A 50th Golden Anniversary medallion and 50th Anniversary Golden Diploma were bestowed on each member of the CCHS Class of 1966 at the luncheon. On the evening of the 26th, the CCHS Class of 1966 led the procession of 2016 grads into the Memorial Gymnasium for the 2016 Commencement Exercises.

The Golden Anniversary 1966 Reunion concluded with two events. On May 27, 90 alumni of CCHS and St. Mary HS shared an evening of kinship and fine food at the 50th Reunion Dinner & Music party at the Doubletree Hotel & Conference Center, Andover. On Saturday, May 28, the women of the St. Mary HS Class of 1966 toured Notre Dame Cristo Rey High School, (formerly St. Mary High School). With special guest, Sister John Julie, SND on hand, the “Belles of St. Mary’s” enjoyed catching up with classmates at the Golden Anniversary Luncheon held at the Andover Country Club.

The students of CCHS are very grateful to the men and women of the Central Catholic & St. Mary HS Classes of 1966 as they continued the tradition of many other 50th Anniversary alumni classes in establishing the “Class of 1966 Memorial Scholarship” in memory of deceased 1966 CCHS & St. Mary HS classmates. This endowed scholarship will permanently support a deserving CCHS boy or girl in need of financial assistance. Gifts to the 1966 Memorial Scholarship Fund are gratefully accepted by check or online at www.centralcatholic.net/1966. Photos of the 50th Anniversary can be found on this site as well.

Kassandra Infante - Named New Alumni Associate

Christopher F. Sullivan '81, President of Central Catholic High School, announced the appointment of Kassandra Infante as the new CCHS Alumni Associate.

"Kassie" joined the staff of the Office of Institutional Advancement in October 2016. Chris Sullivan, in appointing Kassie Infante states, "We are very delighted to have Kassie engaging with our Raider alumni. Though not an alumna, Kassie spent her early years in Lawrence, living only a block away from CCHS. She brings an outgoing personality, a genuine enthusiasm for connecting people, and valuable business experience. As each of you get to meet her or speak with her in person, on the phone or through social media, I know you will experience this for yourself."

Kassie is a 2014 graduate of the University of North Carolina-Wilmington where she developed activity programs for campus residents. Kassie adds, "As an adopted member of the Central Catholic family, I want our great alumni to know that the Marist ideals espoused at CCHS, strong Catholic faith, life-long learning and service to others are deeply rooted in my heart as well. I am ecstatic to join the Advancement Office team. My goal is to animate and engage Central's extensive network of over 16,000 alumni, who with their start in life provided at CCHS, have gone on to success in life and work. I'm excited to meet many of you at reunions and other alumni events. If I can assist you in any way, feel free to call or email me at any time." GIVING

R. Kingman Webster
Benefactor

R. Kingman Webster — May 25, 1933 – November 12, 2015 Relentless Advocate for Lawrence's Children

R. Kingman Webster "had a dream," though in reality it would be best described as an unyielding belief in the critical role of education as the path out of poverty for at-risk children. Over his adult life he witnessed first-hand the limited access to educational advantages that befell children from impoverished families. He dreamed one day of being in a position to alter this reality.

Though Kingman Webster grew up in Andover, his family was rooted in Lawrence where his grandfather served one term as Mayor, and where his father was raised in Lawrence's Arlington neighborhood. It was also in Lawrence in 1869 where his great-grandfather founded a feed store, later to be called Blue Seal Feeds. After graduating from Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Kingman went to work for the family business and, through his leadership, grew the business to eight plants, 17 retail stores and $150 million in sales by the time he sold it upon his retirement. Inspired by the efforts of a Louisiana man who provided underprivileged children with activities they could not afford, Kingman and wife, Dee, designed a dream.

Visiting two 6th grade classrooms at the Arlington School in Lawrence, he promised each of the 62 students that he would support their college education if they succeeded in high school academically and were accepted to college. Of the 62 students to whom Kingman extended this promise, 38 went on to graduate high school and entered college, where Kingman kept his financial promise of support, and later attended each of their college graduations. Beyond these dollars, he provided the students with enrichment activities such as after-school homework programs, summer camps, computer literacy tutoring, weekend field trips to museums, and even carpentry instruction. In all, the Websters spent nearly $1 million on his "I have a Dream" program.

30 of the 38 students entered Central Catholic and graduated very successfully. So impressed by the academic preparation, motivation and future focus of the 30 "Dreamers" at CCHS, Kingman gifted Central Catholic with $1 million, establishing the St. Marcellin Champagnat Endowment Fund to support the tuition costs of the most economically challenged urban students at CCHS. To this day, more than 275 young men and women have benefitted from the vision, generosity and compassion of R. Kingman and Dee Webster.

The children of Greater Lawrence lost one of their most passionate advocates with the passing of R. Kingman Webster in November 2015. In addition to the legacy at Central Catholic, Kingman and Dee Webster lent their financial support also to the students in the charter schools of Lawrence. Kingman and Dee's unrelenting mission to give Lawrence's children the best education possible as the means to lift themselves out of poverty will continue to transform the lives of deserving CCHS students, and all those they will touch in their own lives for generations to come.

Annual Anonymous Gift from 1973 Alumnus Advances Education in the Physical Sciences

The faculty, curriculum and resources available to Central Catholic students in the field of Physical Sciences continues, year in and year out, to strongly develop in both breadth and depth, in part as a result of an annual gift from an alumnus and benefactor from the CCHS Class of 1973, who wishes to remain anonymous. The Physical Science Education Endowed Fund, established by an initial gift in the year 2000, and supplemented annually by additional gifts from this thoughtful 1973 alumnus, has both inspired and funded development of the study of physics, chemistry and STEM academic programs.

In the next few months alone, the Physical Science Education Fund is supporting the September 2017 birth of a new CCHS physical science course, "Engineer Your World", open to juniors and seniors. "Engineer Your World" is a curricular partnership between Central Catholic and the University of Texas, Austin. CCHS was invited to join this partnership with the University of Texas in recognition of Central Catholic's witnessed commitment to the teaching of physical sciences, the success of CCHS physical science students on national AP exams, and Central Catholic's commitment to the emerging field of engineering education on the secondary level. The "Engineer Your World" curriculum is hands-on and project based, challenging teams of students to collaborate in solving design problems from many fields of engineering, such as chemical, environmental, electrical, civil, mechanical, and computer engineering. The curriculum, classroom and laboratory materials, as well as the in-depth professional development for CCHS Physics teacher, Mr. Timothy Vaughan, course instructor, will be supported by the Physical Science Education Fund. Mr. Vaughan will study during the summer of 2017 with faculty at the University of Texas, Austin in order to lead this cutting-edge academic program.

Over the last 15 years, there have been a number of significant enhancements to the study of physical sciences at Central Catholic, including: expansion of the AP Physics 1 class, increased use of Vernier probe-ware in chemistry and physics laboratories, development AP courses in Environmental Science, AP Computer Science Principles and AP Computer Science A, as well as the addition of a Video Game Design course.

Central Catholic is endlessly grateful to our anonymous 1973 alumnus. This thoughtful and generous support has helped make the advanced study of physical sciences more accessible to a larger number of students.
