Eleanor and Park by Rainbow Rowell

EDUCATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE:

- This novel supports the BCSD's mission, vision and goals by giving students a choice and voice in the selection of recreational reading materials from a well-develop, diversified library collection that reflects the community, culture and age of patrons that it serves.
- This novel contributes to the social-emotional learning and well-being of the learner. Learners need access to literature that resonates with them – their background, home environment, school environment. Correspondingly, learners need to develop empathy and compassion for those different from them in terms of social background, ethnicity, etc. This can be done through literature such as Eleanor and Park.

QUALITY, CONTENT, MANNER OF PRESENTATION

- The author presents 2 characters growing up in the 1980's – high school students who are as different as day and night on a variety of levels: ethnicity, traditional nuclear family vs. non-traditional family, abuse in the home, bi-racial marriage, social targeting (fat, red-headed girl, Asian kid, new student in a school, kids who are different in dress, attitude, etc. from the accepted norm of a group, profiling, etc.
- What was the author's true intent in writing this novel? She seemed a bit scattered – multiple themes: young love/romance, racial profiling, developing relationships.
- She left the reader hanging in the end. Building up the plot to when Park takes Eleanor to her uncle's in Minnesota and then drops the ball big time – seemed to lose things in having an incomplete ending unless she planned to have this as a series.

AVOIDANCE OF PERVASIVE VULGARITY

- The author tiptoed her way through profanity – sprinkling it here and there. What was the purpose of that other than to give the reader the notion that this was the norm of the school culture and society in general.
- She tread lightly in the area of sexual exploits – opened the window so to speak with the making out scenes that increased in intensity as Eleanor and Park's relationship developed (252-258, 271, 278-279, almost as if she was reluctant to go in this direction – testing the reading market so to speak.
- The author even hinted at gender identification with Park using the eyeliner, etc. and role reversals with Eleanor – very subtle.

APPROPRIATENESS

- Eleanor and Park is a Young Adult novel suitable for high school and older readers. Therefore, it belongs in a high school library – 9-12 for recreational reading.
    - Main characters are high school students 15-16 years of age.
