

Why did the chickens cross the road?

To get to Principia School, of course.

What better place to be than on 360 acres in Town and Country with kind and curious students? From outdoor classrooms and trails to a beehive and gardens—the outdoor experience at Principia is second to none. The fifth grade "Chicken Keepers" gather eggs and care for their feathered friends—learning responsibility while connecting with nature.

Whether Principia students are making observations and connections to the world around them, learning entrepreneurship skills, or harvesting for local food pantries in the Principia gardens, students love getting their hands dirty and giving back. One moment you might find them climbing to new heights on the ropes challenge course and the next, presenting to local cities about observations and research to help a community thrive.

Here, students get the advantage of interconnected travel, outdoor, and classroom experiences.

They also learn and play sports in state-of-the-art facilities, with friends around the globe to connect with each day.

If you are looking for a world-class school that is approachable and innovative, with a spiritual foundation that sees them as infinitely capable, come check out Principia!
