Today´s hispanic heritage month highlight is Pope Francis: On May 8, 2025, Cardinal Robert Prevost made history with his selection as the 267th pope of the Catholic Church. Taking the name Leo XIV, the 69-year-old became the first pope from the United States and only the second from the Americas after Pope Francis. Prevost was born in on September 14, 1955, in Chicago to parents Mildred Martínez, of Spanish descent, and Louis Marius Prevost, of Italian and French descent. After graduating from Villanova University with a mathematics degree in 1977, he was ordained a priest then relocated in 1985 to Peru. He spent more than a decade serving the church there. Leo has dual citizenship in Peru and the U.S. and is fluent in five languages, including Spanish and Portuguese.
