Proof Roseville Roots Run Deep: Former Oakmont Parent is the MVP of Giving

Roseville, CA – Beth Frkovich, a dedicated Roseville resident and parent, has announced a generous donation of over $100,000 to Oakmont High School. Inspired by the dedication of OHS faculty and a desire to give back to the community, the gift is specifically designated for campus modernization and increasing the visibility of the school's high-quality academic programs.

Frkovich, whose daughter Nicole (Class of 2020) benefited significantly from the Health Academy program, emphasized her deep appreciation for the teachers. "I truly appreciate the job that teachers do," she stated. "Seeing exactly where the donation is going to make a difference is important to me."

The funds aim to upgrade and modernize specific campus areas, ultimately elevating the school's prestige. Frkovich hopes the gift will help highlight the "heart and soul" of OHS, its people and its programs, arguing that the school's depth of offerings, like the early exposure students get in fields such as medicine, deserves more recognition.

A devoted supporter of public education, Frkovich credits the diversity and socialization of the public school system with profoundly impacting her daughter's development. This act of giving back, which is managed through her foundation, is intended to inspire others.

"If they are in a situation like me, they can give back," she noted, hoping the community will become more aware of how fulfilling it is to support public education. Frkovich will be kept up-to-date by the OHS administration on how the funds are being used, ensuring the donation makes a visible, lasting mark on the community.
