Teacher Professional Development

By Nellie Ríos-Parra, Director of State Preschool

Yesterday, we had our last professional development meeting of the year. We reflected on the opportunities and challenges we encountered this school year. We acknowledged the strengths and assets we possess, while reflecting on who in our sphere of influence assisted us. We shared our reflections with each other to uplift one another as we continue to move forward to conclude the school year while looking ahead to the new school year.

In addition, we discussed how parents who completed the end of the year parent survey expressed high levels of satisfaction with student outcomes and support. We recognized the importance of parent partnership along with making the most of the remaining school days so that each child can further develop. We watched a portion of the following video to remind us of how our work influences students for years to come. Here is the link to see how a former Lennox School District student, Adan Acevedo, a graduate of Harvard is still reaping the rewards of a solid beginning, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BLiywx0xBUQ

Lastly, we acknowledge staff that had perfect attendance in May and those that served on various committees that enhance our program. We know that working together we can accomplish greater outcomes.
