[Joel] I think our culture, is special in the sense that, everyone comes from, you know, diverse background, experience or, and has diverse interests. Yet we all seem to have good relationships with each other. I think, I truly feel like all of my co residents care about me and they care about my education. You know, they all know my kids names, I know their kids names. And we seem to have good friendships at work and outside of work.	Resident with dark hair combed over his forehead. [Kevin] I think it's family vibe that the residents share. And so we're at each other's weddings. We're hanging out with each other on the weekends. If there's anything that needs to be done for each other, we go above and beyond because we really do care for each other. You know, it's one thing to say that you're a family, but we actually live that every day in, day out, within program. [Mackenzie] My co residents are the funniest people that I've ever been, like in a friend group with. And that's probably my favorite part about this whole part of my life. And I feel like I just wake up and I'm laughing at work all day long, and it's a real treat as somebody who's not always the funniest herself, it’s really nice to be around people who challenge me in that way, too. Tickles a different part of my brain than surgery and clinical things, which are also happening all day long.	Resident with long blonde hair pulled over her left shoulder. [Kevin] Honestly, the thing that stood out most for me is the people. The culture is unmatched. You'll get outstanding training, sure. But I think the relationships that you have with your attendings and your co-residents is something that's completely unmatched anywhere else.	Kevin on camera
[Mark] Looking back on residency here at LSU Health Shreveport, I couldn't have chosen a better place to go. The family, the community, the learning opportunities, the people here. It's un-comparable to anywhere else. You can live close to where you work. You have all everyone right around you. The experience here is is incredible.
