COVERAGE DEFINITIONS

Coverage Type and Carrier rating

Admitted carriers are insurers that have been granted a license by a state's department of insurance to do business within that state. Admitted Carriers contribute to their state's guaranty fund which provides relief for insureds, based on state specific limits, in the case of an insurers' insolvency.

Surplus lines insurers are referred to as non-admitted carriers because they are not licensed in the state of the insured's principal place of business or residence. While the surplus lines market is regulated differently than the admitted market, in order to provide the flexibility necessary to cover the hard-to-place risks, it is a regulated marketplace. State surplus lines insurers' capitalization requirements are generally higher than admitted carriers which allows for greater protection for policyholders.

AM Best uses a letter grade scale ranging from A++ to D in order to rate an insurers financial strength. A rating of "A" or higher means that the insurer has "excellent ability to meet their ongoing insurance obligations."

Limit

Air-Gapped

Air gap means offline and not connected to your network or the Internet. An air-gapped backup is a copy of your data that is kept offline so that it cannot be accessed by a hacker. This protects it from almost any type of cybersecurity threat. They are also called an offline strategy. This is designed to protect you from almost any type of ransomware.

CLAIMS SCENARIOS

Ransomware

A company that manufactures metal product components was the victim of a cyber-attack that stole control of their industrial control systems. This completely halted their production line, creating a massive business interruption and delaying distribution schedules for their partners. The hackers took control of the robotic equipment in the factory and forced the hardware to inflict damage to the equipment and destroy the components in the midst of production. The extensive business interruptions and physical property damage would have been an incredibly costly situation for the manufacturer, had they not had a cyber insurance policy. Their cyber policy covered the business interruption expenses, financial demands made by their production partners whose processes were also delayed, and costs to repair the damaged factory, totaling almost $1M in losses.

Social Engineering

A bad actor impersonated the head of accounting for a manufacturing company and sent an email to two existing vendors to change the wiring information they had on file to receive payments. When the vendors did not receive their payments, they alerted the manufacturer. After being alerted about the fraudulent email, the manufacturer was able to enlist their cyber security insurance to remedy the situation. The carrier covered the costs of wire transfers and provided social engineering training for all employees with a company email, for a total of $250,000.

Privacy Related

A clothing manufacturer was the victim of a data breach when a hacker bypassed the security system on their online ordering platform. The manufacturer only discovered this when they were notified by the federal government that a hacker had been arrested and had accounts linked back to the manufacturer that showed he was in possession of credit card information for 5,000 of the company's customers. The company enlisted the help of their cyber insurance carrier to hire a forensics team, which determined the hacker had been in their system for four months, steadily stealing customer names, addresses, credit card numbers and account passwords. Extensive measures were needed to remedy the situation, including notifying all affected customers, paying for a free year of credit monitoring, as well as hiring a public relations team to repair their damaged public reputation. Without cyber insurance, the company could have expected to pay $300,000 in legal fees, $200,000 in investigation and forensics costs, $150,000 in fines and penalties, and $40,000 in customer notification, reimbursement and crisis management.
