

(The King wears a crown and a sign around his neck saying, "KING GEORGE III." The subjects wear a sign around their necks saying, "SUBJECT.")

King: (enters, wearing crown) Where are my subjects? I am the King. They should be here.

(subjects enter, running in)

King: Come here immediately. I have a job for you.

Subjects: Yes, your highness. (Bow to the king.)
What can we do for you?

King: You must put this puzzle together. I need to know what it is. Now, get to it!

(subjects begin to place pieces)

King: No! No! Not like that! Do it like this. (He puts part of it together.) Do it my way! You are here to do what I say. You have no choice in this. I AM THE KING!

(The king walks off muttering "I am the king. I am the king." The subjects finish the puzzle.)

Skit for George Washington

(George enters wearing a sign around his neck saying, "GEORGE WASHINGTON."
The citizens enter wearing a sign saying, "CITIZEN.")

George: (enters with a puzzle) Let's see. I do not know how to do puzzles very well, so I will call on my puzzle experts. It is much better to let the people solve this problem. (walks over to citizens) I need you to put this puzzle together.

(citizens begin to put it together)

George: I know that many of you, my fellow citizens, wanted to remain British subjects with the king telling you what to do. It seems to me that you should have a say in how you do things. I am only the president. I am not here to force my ways upon you. You are responsible for sharing your ideas with me so we can all do this together.

(citizens finish the puzzle and leave)
