Access to electronic information systems (including Internet) is now available to students and staff in the Highline School District. We are very pleased to provide this access, because vast, diverse and unique resources will be available to users, contributing to educational excellence in our schools. We believe that this access will significantly enhance creativity, collaboration, communication and the sharing of resources.

The Internet is an electronic information resource connecting thousands of computers all over the world and millions of individual subscribers. As examples, students and staff using the Internet have access to:

1) Electronic communication with groups and individuals on such topics as culture, environment, the arts, government, etc.
2) Information and news from various sources such as NASA, university libraries, and the Library of Congress.
3) A vast number of research resources from all over the world.

With access to people all over the world comes the availability of material that does not contribute educational value in the context of the school setting. On a global network it is impossible to control all materials. Highline School District has taken the following precautions to attempt to restrict access to inappropriate materials:

1) District supported hardware and software to filter Internet content.
2) Staff and student training in acceptable use of electronic information systems will be provided.
