Looking Where I'm Going

Sometimes people walk fast when they are in a hurry.

When people are walking, they need to look where they are going so they don't step or run into things or other people.

When people look where they are going, they will be safe. They can avoid bumping into things or people.

When I am walking, I will look where I'm going. When I see something or someone, I can move. I will try to avoid bumping into it.

Standing in Line

At school, we do not sit at our desks all day long. We go to a number of other places, both inside and outside of the building.

Some of the places we go are: to Specials, to the cafeteria, out for recess, and to and from our buses.

Most of the time, when we go from place to place in school, the students are in a line.

Students in line stand pretty close to each other.

When I am getting in line, it is important not to run into other students.

When I am standing in line, it is important to be careful so that I do not bump, hit, or poke other students.

When I am in places such as the classroom, the hallway, or at recess, it is important to be careful so that I do not bump, hit, or poke other students.

If I run into other students, or bump, hit, or poke them, they will not be safe, and neither will I.

Someone could get hurt.

Also, if I run into other students, or bump, hit, or poke them, my classmates might get upset with me because I am not being careful and considerate.

Being careful and considerate when I go from place to place with my classmates is a safe way to behave.

My classmates, my teachers, and my parents will be happy that I am acting in such a responsible way.

Walking Down the Hall

I usually go to recess with my class.

A bell will usually ring to tell my class that recess is over.

I will try to walk down the hall slowly and I will try to keep my hands to myself and my voice quiet.

I walk in the hall at school with my class almost every day.

When we walk in the hall, we walk in a line.

My teacher usually walks at the front of the line.

When our class walks in the hall, the students try to stay in the line. This means that the students try to stay behind each other.

My teacher is happy when the students walk in the line in the hall.

Standing By People

When I am at school, I like to be with my friends.

We like to play together. Sometimes we like to talk.

When we talk, we usually stand by each other.

My good friends and my family like me to stand by them when we talk.

Sometimes if I stand too close, it might bug them.

It is a good idea to stand about 12 inches apart from other people.

My friends feel comfortable talking to me if I do not stand too close.
