MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

I am very mindful that many of our students' educational experiences could not happen without the generous support of all of you. This year, Prep awarded approximately $2 million in financial aid, which was much needed and allowed many families the opportunity to send their sons to Fairfield Prep.

Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends of Fairfield Prep,

As the snow in the Quad glistens and the New Year settles in, our vibrant school community continues to thrive with numerous activities and achievements by our students and faculty. "Prep leads the way" elucidates our theme of showing the vitality in our school. Dr. Robert Perrotta, Principal, writes about preparing for the coming years, and developing our Jesuit mission for the future by integrating it into our daily school curriculum and student experience. Fairfield Prep has assumed a leadership position with our fellow Jesuit schools on a national level; Prep staff members are working with our Jesuit colleagues to build a framework and self-study plan so that Jesuit schools will continue to maintain their unique identity and Ignatian methodology for learning.

In this issue, Mr. Barry Wallace, English teacher, reflects thoughtfully on his 30 years at Prep. The Prep community recognized him and several staff members for their devoted years of service at our annual Thanksgiving Assembly (see photo inside). We are blessed to have so many veteran teachers as well as new staff members who are engaged with our students daily, providing them a quality school experience. Mr. Jamie Chesbro, English teacher, looks at unique learning styles of his students, which underscores the Jesuit learning motto: "Cura Personalis" — caring for the whole person. Mr. Elliott Gualtiere, Director of Campus Ministry, enlightens us about the important Kairos retreat program, which is a memorable Christian experience for so many Prep students.

Prep sports continue to be an important experience for our young men, carrying our successful legacy forward, building team camaraderie and character. We are in the midst of an exciting winter sports season, and look back on an action-packed fall with many wins and accomplishments. Our students also excel in music, performing and visual arts, as well as the many extracurricular clubs, intramurals, and leadership opportunities in student government and campus ministry. This Christmas season we enjoyed a beautiful "Celebration of Carols" featuring the choirs and bands at the Regina A. Quick Center for the Performing Arts. We also had a wonderful turnout for the Advent Mass and Christmas Tree Lighting which drew families, alumni and friends. All of these opportunities truly underlie the "Prep Experience," which is distinctive to our school.

This issue also contains our 2009-10 Annual Report. I am very mindful that many of our students' educational experiences could not happen without the generous support of all of you. This year, Prep awarded approximately $2 million in financial aid, which was much needed and allowed many families the opportunity to send their sons to Fairfield Prep. Your gifts help to inspire minds, transform lives, and enhance the highly regarded reputation of Fairfield Prep. We are continually blessed by your generosity and firm belief in our mission, especially in these challenging economic times.

May you and your loved ones be blessed with a New Year of health, happiness and love.

Sincerely,

Rev. John J. Hanwell, S.J.

Prep Alumni Lead the Way

The 2010-2011 Academic Year is half way closed and mid-terms have been completed. The fall has been a busy season for Fairfield Prep Alumni.

The National Day of Service welcomed the fall with over thirty alumni participating in eight different sites around the country. Prep also inducted Paul Connelly '48 with its highest alumni honor as the first recipient of the Saint Ignatius of Loyola Alumni Award. Additional service projects at the Merton Center and Columbus House in Connecticut over the Christmas season kept alumni involved.

Prep's own Senator John McKinney '82 spoke at our business breakfast giving us an enlightened look at the political landscape. This event was hosted by Matt Terry '82 at UBS Headquarters. The Alumni Office traveled to Washington, D.C., Boston, Atlanta, San Francisco, L.A. and Chicago. The November Washington reception was a great success and alumni are working on a spring event to host the Prep Rugby team. The Washington trip also included a pizza lunch with Father Hanwell, S.J., where area college students met with their former classmates and friends. For all those that enjoyed the NCAA game watches last year, look out for a bar night in your area to catch all the action in the expanded tournament this year. Alumni just recently gathered in New York City for a holiday reception at SideBar hosted by Joe Gerics '97; John Brennan, Richie Magdon, John Hanrahan, Fr. Ryan, S.J., and Bob Perrotta joined alums for a few drinks and plenty of cheer. At the annual Fairfield Prep Alumni Holiday Classic Basketball tournament, Prep brought the trophy back to the first floor Xavier trophy case where it belongs.

Keep your eye on the monthly newsletters because there is a good chance we are coming to your area. The most enjoyable part of this job has been seeing the Prep name travel far and wide through the leadership examples you have shown. Please continue to share your stories with us. Expect to hear more from Prep on all our news and events as the year unfolds. Prep truly does lead the way.

Go Set the World on Fire

Jesuit education PREP-aring for the future

By Robert Perrotta, JD, EdD, Principal

The Jesuit Context

The Jesuit Secondary Education Association (JSEA) was formed in 1970 to focus the attention of educators in our schools not solely on academic excellence, but also on the importance of the Jesuit mission and identity. Our Ignatian heritage challenges us to go beyond academic excellence and focus on formation, not information, or even better said, the counter cultural transformation of our students into leaders who will make decisions based on principles of faith and justice for the greater glory of God. Thus, the JSEA developed a series of initiatives to help Jesuit educators understand who we are and where we should be going in a future in which the number of Jesuits available to serve in the secondary school ministry will continue to decline drastically. Among these were:

The Colloquium on the Ministry of Teaching – The core message of the Colloquium was that teaching in a Jesuit school is not just a job or even a profession. It is a ministry whose goal is to go beyond academic excellence to form future leaders who will transform the world in faith and justice.

The Graduate at Graduation Curriculum Improvement Process – a collaborative and reflective self-study process designed to identify the components that make up the Jesuit identity of our secondary schools using a common philosophy, common goals and a common vocabulary. The resulting Profile of the Graduate at Graduation defined the characteristics of Jesuit education under five broad categories:

- Academically Competent
- Open to Growth
- Religiously Oriented
- Committed to Doing Justice
- Loving

The process is designed to be on-going to assure that we continually provide students learning opportunities in all of the constituent elements that constitute the core values of our Jesuit mission and identity.

The Ignatian Paradigm Project provides teachers in Jesuit schools with a pedagogy based on the Spiritual Exercises used to form and train Jesuits from the time of St. Ignatius. Through the interaction of broad based learning opportunities carefully reflected upon, students are trained to apply knowledge to real world situations and to go beyond the memorization-regurgitation cycle to true mastery learning.

The 2020 Vision Project challenges Jesuit educators to prepare our students for a future where knowledge is a fungible commodity to be produced and sold. In the midst of this Age of Information, how do we embrace our Jesuit values of going beyond academic excellence to produce men and women of conscience and compassion? And, what challenges will this future world bring?

The World of the Future

All of the futurists point to a world in which a global economy will demand that we know more about the language and culture of others. We are in an age of exploding information and proliferating media exposure mandating that we learn to carefully evaluate the reliability of the burgeoning amount of data available to us. Emotional Intelligence will become as important as the traditional standard of Intelligence Quotient; for, innovation will come about through team work, collaborative efforts, and international cooperation. Thus, the traditional educational paradigm must shift from memorization and regurgitation of knowledge to collaborative problem solving, group projects, and the synthesis, organization, and application of knowledge. Students must be taught to think strategically and to solve real world problems in innovative ways, in addition to working responsibly as part of a team.

Challenges for the Future of Jesuit Education

How will Jesuit education meet the challenges of the future in light of the decline of Jesuits available to serve in our schools, the countercultural nature of our educational message, and a shift to a new educational paradigm?

First, we can no longer rely on the symbol that the presence of Jesuits has provided to ensure the commitment to our Ignatian transformational mission. Instead, our schools are actively engaged in succession planning and ongoing training and support for the laity in Ignatian mission and pedagogy. Thus, Jesuit schools, staffed predominately by the laity, are entering into partnerships with the Jesuit Provincials through formal sponsorship agreements and Jesuit sponsorship reviews to assure that our schools will continue to embrace their Jesuit mission, identity, and charisma.

Second, our schools are committed to the ongoing formation of the members of their Boards in the tenets of Jesuit mission and identity. Thus, our Boards will provide the stewardship necessary to cultivate and maintain our Jesuit heritage and mission even though there may be few or no Jesuits available to serve in our schools.

Third, our schools are developing programs to provide guidance and ongoing formation for alumni and parents to enable them to value and embrace those countercultural qualities that characterize the Jesuit ministry of education.

Fourth, our schools are exploring ways to maximize limited Jesuit manpower by calling upon our Jesuit colleagues to provide us with instruction in Jesuit spirituality, history and a way of proceeding.

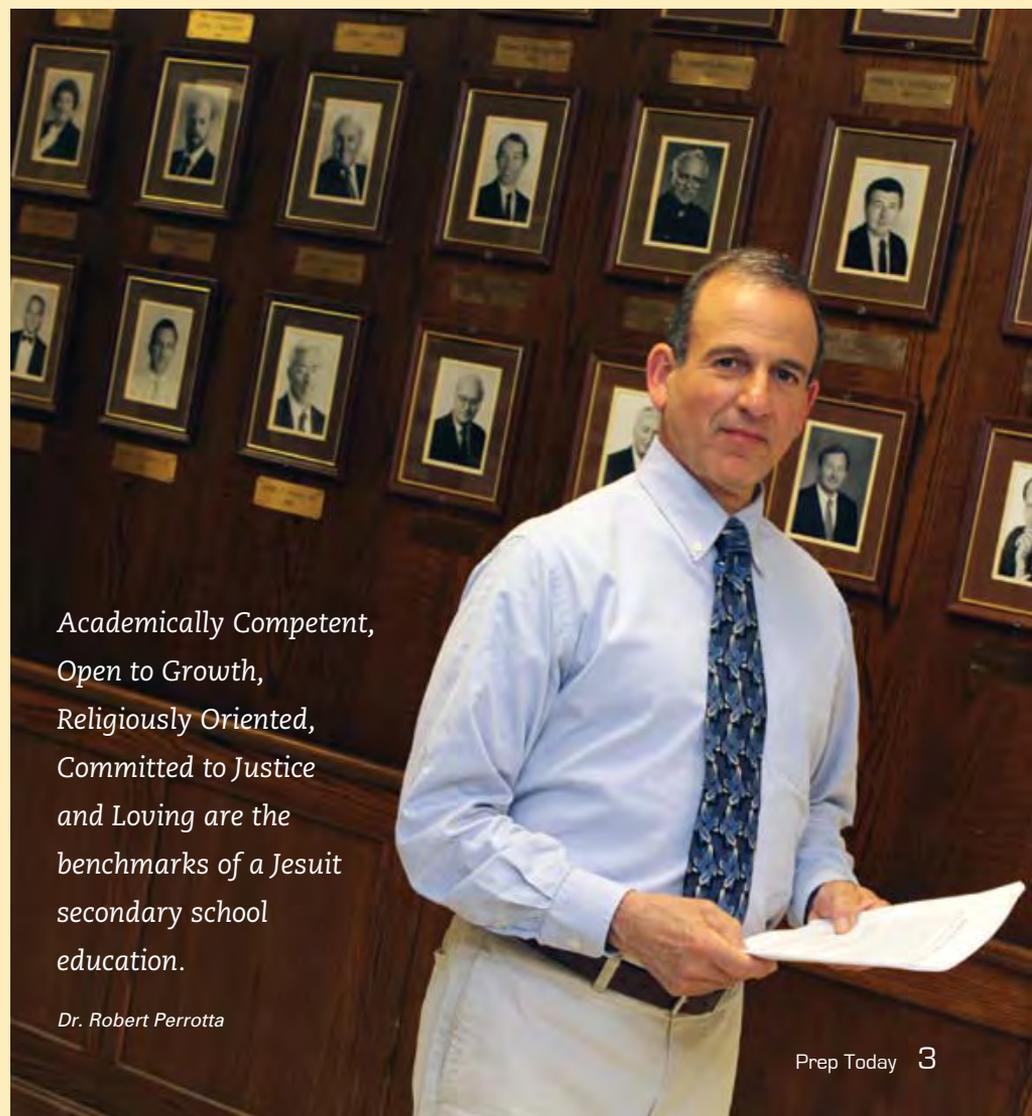

Equally important is the commitment of the faculties in Jesuit Schools to an ongoing review of our curriculum. Specifically, we are focused on the Ignatian response to the educational challenges posed by the Age of Information and Technology so that we are assured that our students:

- Nurture and develop a culture that sees each academic discipline as an opportunity not just to master facts but to embrace:

- Life-long learning
- Creative and collaborative thinking
- Effective interpersonal communicating
- Realize that high school is a time of formation not merely information.
- Espouse interdisciplinary learning which helps see the interconnectedness of knowledge.
- Embrace the study of the arts and humanities as a means to discover the essence of our humanity.

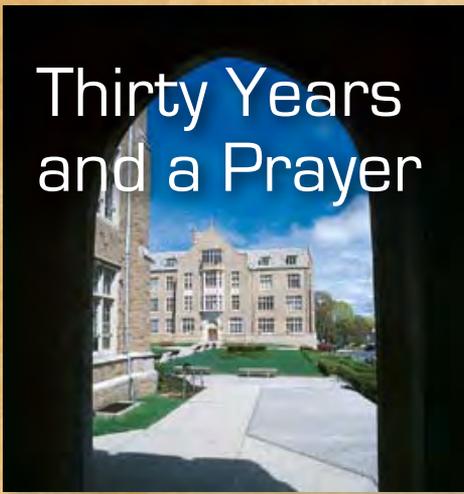

Academically Competent, Open to Growth, Religiously Oriented, Committed to Justice and Loving are the benchmarks of a Jesuit secondary school education. By embracing our Jesuit identity from the classroom to the boardroom, Jesuit educators will continue to honor our past, celebrate our present, and embrace a future of endless possibilities...a future in which Jesuit trained men and women of competence, conscience, and compassion can and will transform the world through faith and justice Ad majorem Dei Gloriam.

Thirty Years and a Prayer

A view forever gone between Berchmans and Xavier Halls

I can recall the trepidation I felt reporting for work on my first day as an English teacher at Fairfield Prep in September of 1980. As I parked I was inspired and intimidated by the huge brick Gothic buildings that I had admired on North Benson Road since I was a boy. The Jesuit high school wasn't just another place in town. It was a legendary castle of higher learning and bruising football teams. I was fated to be here, but I was just hoping to get through the day. When I walked under the arch with "Ad majorem Dei Gloriam" scripted above the door, I didn't know that my life had changed forever.

I felt immediately at home in the antique, cool brown tile corridors. Everything about the Catholic way of life was here, especially the priests who roamed the hallways in chalky cassocks and berets. I knew I belonged, but I would have to prove it. Teaching here was considered an art.

Prep was presided over then by a remarkable intellectual Jesuit named Fr. Jim Bowler. He had a mind full of ideas and was dedicated to Piaget's philosophy of developmental stages of learning. An extraordinarily gifted and young Robert Perrotta was beginning his first year as Academic Dean, mature beyond his years and destined to become one of the great leaders in Prep history. A new fellow with a Long Island accent thick as a Coney Island hot dog was housemaster in Berchmans. John Brennan was a legendary figure who could outrun, outshout and out-whistle any Prepsters who were tempted to bend the rules.

When I shook hands with Earl Lavery my knees buckled. It was like meeting John Wayne. But the Duke was the most unassuming guy on the staff. Then there were the Jesuit luminaries like fathers Bob Sproule, Don Barry, Joe Trinkle, Ollie Nickerson and Charles Munzing. They were joined by a generation of energetic young priests who were putting their stamp on the Prep—Bill Eagan, Ron Perry, Larry Ryan who each became major fixtures in my thirty years here.

How could one ever live up to the work of a Bruce Jaffe and Eddie Rowe? Betty Kachmar, the first lady of Prep, had a queenly presence in the hallways. There were people my own age who were outstanding: the superb Maureen Bohan teaching Math; Billie Brooks making Spanish festive; John Szabs who embodied the revolutionary energy of the '60s; Dave Driscoll with his in-depth knowledge of Japanese culture; Greg Marshall, a masterly young language teacher and the essence of Prep; Colleen Kelts brought us into the computer era; Donna Andrade created the SEED program and became our first woman Academic Dean in her trailblazing career. Richie Magdon was teaching history; Bob Ford and Tony Canuel were beginning to shape the modern science department at Prep. John Hanrahan was hired the next year, and thus the future of Prep was established.

Now inside the hallowed halls I would have to achieve something — being the best English teacher that I could be. Prep challenged everyone to excellence and took you above yourself into regions of education and faith that you didn't know you had. Meeting my all-boys classes was like swimming at high tide. The energy came in continuous waves. I loved the give and take, and learned to keep an eye on the classroom clock. A group of rascals moved the hands ahead and I dismissed class a half hour early praising myself for how quickly the period went.

The English Department was a wild assortment of individuals. The Jesuits marched to their classes declaiming Shakespeare plays that I had never read. They sang and chanted to their classes and were maestros of organized pandemonium. I couldn't sing and the only thing I could recite with any confidence was "Humpty-Dumpty." I had a lot of work to do to define myself in a group of scholars and showmen. I would have to relearn my craft and bring my best every day. For the first time in my career I felt I had the opportunity to teach; I told stories and used my sense of humor and the boys soon accepted me.

My daughter Rose had been born the year before so I stayed up nights holding the crying child in one arm and reading my novel for class in the other. I was JV basketball coach my first year. It was evident after a season of laughs and losses that I wasn't going to join the ranks of Prep's Hall of Fame coaches. I was reassigned as literary magazine advisor which occupied me for years with the students' creative talents. I was finding a home and realizing what I could mean to the Prep and myself. It was a future I wanted and believed in. There was more at stake here than just a job. Teaching became my vocation.

I was also being called back into a faith I had drifted from. At Prep faith mattered; not in a rigid way but as a challenge to discern your heart in the Gospel. The Jesuits became my friends and spiritual directors. My faith was renewed and challenged. I was reminded just how Catholic I really was. We were free to pray and explore spirituality as the center of our community.

Of course, nobody can live up to Prep. The school is bigger than all our dreams and egos. The cross on the peak of Xavier is a timeless symbol of unsurpassable love and sacrifice rooted in a living faith. Thirty years ago, with my new briefcase that my wife Charlene bought for me, I just wanted to survive. Thirty years later there is gray in my red beard and I don't leap up three stairs at a time as I used to. I know that I've made contributions at Prep, and I bask in the favor and affection of my students. The feelings are mutual. Most of all I am grateful for the good fortune to work at Fairfield College Preparatory School.

Now as I watch brilliant new teachers arrive I realize that the tradition will continue long after I and my peers have gone. Besides, a thirty-year career is the work of a mere babe at Prep. Whatever I have given to my students and colleagues has come back to me ten-fold in blessings. I came to educate my students but looking back I would say I got the best education of all.

Witt and Wisdom

Dr. Robert Witt '58, President of University of Alabama, visited Fairfield Prep and spoke to the student body on November 9, 2010. Following is an excerpt from his speech.

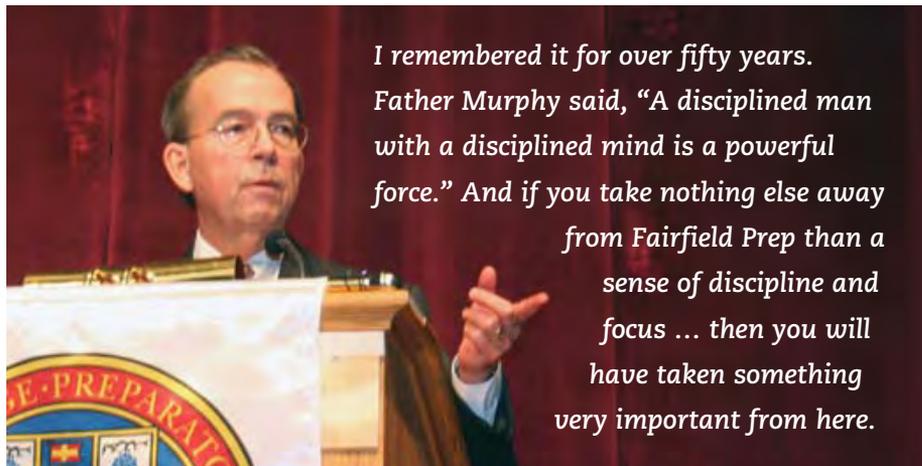

The true impact of Fairfield Prep, that mattered far more than the base skills I was taught, really had nothing to do with the formal curriculum. As I sat on the plane thinking about my years here I literally could recall the faces and voices of my instructors. I'd like to talk to you about just two of them. You've seen their names on buildings and you've probably seen their pictures in halls.

The first one is Father Thomas Murphy. His title was Dean of Students in addition to his faculty responsibility. If I'm allowed to say it without being assigned to JUG today, his nickname among the students was "Little Caesar." He did in fact rule Prep and was responsible for some of the time I spent in JUG.

Out of his busy schedule he would spend time talking one-on-one and I can distinctly remember as I sat in his office — on multiple occasions admittedly — probably complaining about the work load and the discipline and the rigor, asking him why Fairfield Prep expected, even demanded, so much from its young men.

I remember a statement that he made, and I remembered it for over fifty years. Father Murphy said, "A disciplined man with a disciplined mind is a powerful force." And if you take nothing else away from Fairfield Prep than a sense of discipline and focus, discipline in terms of how you behave and how you manage yourself; discipline in terms of how you think, then you will have taken something very important from here.

Our discussions over those years also involved the concept of integrity and honor, which was something that was very important to Father Murphy. Father Murphy, in those days, was fond of handing out 3 x 5 cards with little messages typed on them. Usually the messages were scripture verses. In my case he gave me a card that is now probably over fifty years old, that I still have with me. And it wasn't a scripture verse; it was a verse from a poem, I believe by Emerson, and the verse was, "What you do speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say."

I remembered it for over fifty years. Father Murphy said, "A disciplined man with a disciplined mind is a powerful force." And if you take nothing else away from Fairfield Prep than a sense of discipline and focus ... then you will have taken something very important from here.

What he was trying to tell me was your integrity, how you conduct yourself, will speak far more loudly about who you are and what you value than all you say and all you write.

He said repeatedly, integrity is extremely strong and at the same time very fragile. If you have a strong sense of integrity, a sense of honor, it will carry you through the most difficult times and difficult decisions of your life, but if you compromise your integrity or honor, it is fragile, it will break and when you do that, in most cases, it will be almost impossible to reacquire. His words have stayed with me a very long time.

Another man's words that have stayed with me has his name on the side of one of your athletic buildings, Father Eugene Brissette. He was my chemistry instructor. He had for that era in Prep's history the loudest voice of any faculty member. He had remarkable accuracy. If you were not paying attention, erasers, chalk, anything that wasn't nailed down, would come flying in your direction.

But he was a gifted instructor. I remember talking with him on multiple occasions. I believe it was my junior year and I was not doing particularly well in chemistry, and we sat talking one day about what I needed to work on to try and improve. And I remember asking what I felt was a rhetorical question, I guess I was probably fishing for some words of reassurance. And I said, "Father Brissette do you think I'll be able to earn a good grade in this course?" And he looked me directly in the eye and said "No I don't think so, Mr. Witt."

I was shocked; I was looking for words of reassurance and I just sat there looking and he said something that I also never have forgotten. He said, "Mr. Witt if you don't have confidence in yourself why should I?"

And I've thought about that many times over the years. If you think about what it takes to be successful, to be a leader in any area, the president of a University, an executive in a corporation, an attorney in a courtroom, a teacher in a high school — if you don't have confidence in yourself and in your ability to do your job, why should anyone follow you as a leader or listen to you as a teacher?

As I think back on my years at Fairfield Prep, discipline, the importance of discipline, the reason for the rigor of the program, and why so much is asked of you, the importance of values, and the efforts that were made during my four years here, helped me develop the kind of confidence that would serve as a foundation for my future studies and for my life.

Imagining the Partnering Possibilities of JSEA

Preserving the Ignatian vision and the Jesuit mission for future generations

Matt Sather '93, English Department Chair and Varsity Hockey Coach, spoke at the President's Dinner on Nov. 6, 2010.

My favorite story that illustrates the unique value of a Fairfield Prep education took place in 1999, my second year as an English teacher and only six years after my own Prep graduation. That spring, while helping one of my students on his college essay, a special young man taught me the true meaning of education and showed me why a Jesuit school is a special place. Connor's college essay revolved around a mission trip to Ecuador and a problem-solving challenge placed at his feet.

One of Connor's tasks in Ecuador was to help a young girl with her math work at a school in an impoverished village. Connor was shocked by the poverty, most notably the fact that the school did not even have the simplest of necessities — a roof. The student he was assigned to help was struggling with her multiplication tables, and as Connor started to help her, he realized her aptitude was not the primary problem. Instead, as he squinted through the glare that the morning sun cast through the roofless school house, Connor quickly recognized the real problem — she was having difficulty seeing the page in front of her.

His mind quickly raced to the most obvious solutions. He thought about the cost of building materials in Ecuador and quickly calculated how easy it would be to send money to construct a roof when he returned to his hometown of Darien. Connor imagined this pupil completing subsequent worksheets under the shade of the roof he could provide. But as his mind churned through his rolodex of fundraising opportunities, Connor realized that this solution did not address the primary problem at hand.

So instead, he shifted slightly to his left, arched his back and allowed the strong Ecuador sun beat down upon the back of his neck; his shadow cast coolly over the worksheet.

Problem solved.

The hard truth every teacher must face is that educators face a paradoxical task. We are asked to prepare our students for their future challenges without the faintest idea what that future will look like.

In order to fight the educational frustration such a reality often creates, educators (particularly secondary-school educators) recognize that our lessons cannot be static, and cannot be designed to solve fixed problems, but must be fluid, teaching students skills to solve any problem.

For public-school teachers this recognition is often not echoed in their leadership. Success in the public sector is primarily measured by standardized test scores, achievement levels and curricular benchmarks. Public school teachers are blessed with the seemingly unlimited resources of the state, but cursed by an obtuse administrative vision of effective teaching and meaningful learning.

We speak openly in Jesuit School circles about being counter-cultural, but sometimes we too can be myopic: looking at SAT scores, college acceptances and professional careers as benchmarks of our success. Of course we want our students to do well, but if we are going to ask our students to define themselves by more than their statistics, we need to continue to develop leaders who share this value.

As our mission statement clearly states, we are helping our students approach problem solving by examining their conscience, employing their competence, and deepening their reservoir of compassion.

So what is the next step in Jesuit Education?

For years, our individual schools and individual classrooms have been the proving grounds for future leaders, but perhaps we need to be more aggressive in identifying, training and sharing our leaders and leadership opportunities.

Imagine schools where every adult is (in a large or small, formal or informal way) an educational leader. Imagine a province where these leaders and their lessons are shared and communicated on a daily basis. How much creativity and innovation would that foster?

I believe we are already on the way to this future.

As Jesuit Educators head into the uncertainty of the 21st century our concerns are buoyed by several truths that link us together. Primarily we are supported by our seminal documents and leaders, and the vision they provide. Through the wisdom of a unified mission, Jesuit educators are able to redefine successful teaching in a way not measured by standardized tests, but ...

- by alumni giving back to the communities they emerged from,
- by seeing students change and grow on an immersion trip,
- by listening to our alumni who have found and created lives of meaning.

Furthermore, we are reassured by the cooperative network of Jesuit schools throughout the world, and we are only beginning to understand the power of this network.

Through such organizations as JSEA (Jesuit Secondary Education Association), we have begun to pool our resources through an acute administrative vision to serve our collective mission. It is critical, as we look toward our future that our efforts be collaborative, that we embrace our diversity and model creativity for our students. The new province structure alone can be seen as one opportunity to share our mission and create a unified Jesuit school that is much larger than our individual campuses, cities, states and regions.

In truth, as we shrink the number of provinces in the country, we also eliminate arbitrary boundaries, boundaries that technology and an increasingly global world-view erased years ago. This structure can help us model Ignatius' image of companionship as well as increase the opportunities for our students to broaden their worldly experiences.

Imagine Jesuit classrooms and service projects linked across the country ...

- a student from Fairfield Prep taking an online class at Cristo Rey Jesuit in Baltimore,
- a student from BC High working on a collaborative project with someone from Georgetown Prep,
- a co-ed group from Cheverus on an immersion trip with Fordham Prep boys.

Finally, as the number of Jesuits sadly decreases, this collaborative structure and network can prove invaluable in sharing the resources, wisdom and leadership of the new generation of Jesuit leaders. At Fairfield, we have always been blessed with a strong Jesuit presence on campus. This year, as Fr. Marty Shaughnessy and Fr. Bob Levens move on from our ranks, I have already begun to miss their words of clarity and the stability of their presence.

Perhaps just as important, I will miss the daily reminder of our mission that their faith inspired. It is imperative that we work to maintain a strong Jesuit presence in each of our schools, even if a permanent presence is impossible.

Upon returning from Ecuador, and trying to explain his revelation in a college essay, Connor's Jesuit education taught him (and me) that not every problem has a text-book solution, but that experience, creativity and mission are the true product of the educational process. I have learned from his example, and despite being a Jesuit educator, I can't stop being educated.

Indeed, Fairfield Prep's future will be defined by our experiences, our creativity and always our mission. We can't be stifled by outside expectations, nor can we be constrained by blindly following tradition. As a Jesuit educator and a product of Jesuit education, I still fully understand the educational paradox.

When I was a student at Fairfield Prep, no one teacher prepared me to do research on the internet or showed me how terrorism would shape our world. But those same teachers did not measure me by a number or test score either. They cultivated a human spirit capable of adapting to any permutation the future might cast my way.

As I consider my own career choice, I am sure this certitude in the face of uncertainty brought me back to teach and lead at Fairfield Prep and is the largest reason for this dedicated congregation tonight.

So, on behalf of the Fairfield Prep community, I want to sincerely thank each of you for your continued dedication to the mission of Jesuit Education and your generous faith in Fairfield Prep.

Know that your commitment is going each day to support our efforts in helping to develop future generations who are equipped to creatively and compassionately tackle the challenges that will inevitably arise.

Notre Dame Vision

Reflection by Tim Culligan '11

My first summer here was an amazing experience that brought me closer to God, my Prep brothers and other teens from across the nation. I was skeptical if a second summer could recreate that unique experience. It turned out to be one of the best choices I've made.

The most positive part of the retreat the second time around was working with others who were also there before. Everything was much more comfortable and we were able to connect extremely well and quickly. Our group leader was also a returning member so he was very well prepared. Being with these returning members ultimately helped me create a stronger faith. During our discussions, we were all much more open to share and help each other grow.

Being with other Prep students made the rest of the retreat memorable. Some were very good friends — others I barely knew. But by the end of the week, we all shared a bond that brought us closer together. Just like Kairos, a connection is made between all of us on this retreat that won't break. Even those who weren't looking forward to coming ended up loving the retreat as well as growing from it.

Coming back to Notre Dame was far better than I could've imagined. I was able to learn so much more about myself and God's call for me. With the help of guest speakers, Notre Dame students, other teens who also chose to come to ND for a week and my Prep brothers, this one week was able to bring me closer to God more than I ever thought it could. That's why I love ND Vision and recommend it to everyone here at Prep.

I think we should continue to meet together. I've found that a community is formed among Prep students who go on this trip; very similar to the Kairos community. By meeting together just a few times (even just for pizza or lunch), we can keep this going and we'll inevitably spread ND Vision by word of mouth.

Kairos is the Lord's Time

Students often ask, "Mr. Gualtiere, what is the one activity I should involve myself in before I graduate?" My response is always "Go on a Kairos Retreat."

Kairos is a three-night, four-day experience open to juniors and seniors. This retreat program is grounded in Christian incarnation theology — our belief that God is very much a part of our real world, especially through the continuing presence of Jesus Christ. Kairos is a Greek term denoting quality or meaningful time as opposed to strictly linear time. It is an experience of Christian community, featuring a series of talks given by peers and adults. Participation in discussions, exercises, prayer, and the sacraments are all essential parts of the program.

Kairos has two goals. The first calls the young person to live his faith as an active and vital member of his faith community. The second is to develop Christian leaders — servant leaders.

Many return to school with a knowing that they can do more not only for themselves but for their community — whether that be family, Prep or church. They understand that to be a Christian leader they must set a positive example for others to follow.

This is the affective part of participating in a Kairos. This is where I see the impact of the Kairos being lived out by our students. A renewed sense of being a man for and with others. Our Prep students do a tremendous job of living out this Jesuit ideal. However, because of Kairos, they serve their community more — in school and out of school.

Parents often comment after a retreat that they have witnessed a change in their son. Their demeanor is more positive, they often show a greater maturity, and they involve themselves more in their community. They have a closer relationship with God and they think of others before themselves.

A major part of the retreat experience is living in community with others. It's often challenging for students, especially those who may be an only child. Moving beyond stereotyping to respecting the individuality of other students is an amazing opportunity for our students to have!

Students also come to a personal understanding of how Christ fits into their daily life. This can be by participating in the sacraments of Eucharist or Reconciliation, or through the power of prayer. For almost four full days, the Kairos environment provides real experiences for our young people to share stories about their faith and to experience God in a new way. Kairos does it in a way that makes it safe for our students to talk. Again, what an amazing opportunity for our students to have!

Other Events

Besides Kairos there are other community opportunities at Prep. For juniors there are the Urban Plunge experiences or service immersion trips. Those seniors who participated as juniors may apply to be leaders for these experiences.

The annual freshman retreat involves the entire class with an overnight at school.

Sophomores have a retreat at the end of April. It is voluntary and has grown in popularity.

There are weekly Campus Ministry Student Board meetings. These students help plan our activities, have ongoing interaction with their peers, and gather to pray together.

We want to provide continuing opportunities for our students to explore their faith and to enjoy the experience of community while they attend Fairfield Prep. If you have any questions about Campus Ministry or Christian service opportunities please do not hesitate to contact me.

By Elliott Gualtiere, Director of Campus Ministry. Elliott has been in this position for six years and is the first lay director at Prep.

Tim Culligan and John Guzzi are Partners in Science

For six weeks in the fall, two seniors Tim Culligan (left) and John Guzzi (right) participated in an afterschool seminar series at the Research and Development facilities of Boehringer Ingelheim Pharmaceuticals. As participants, they gained an insider's view of drug research and development and developed a new perspective on science careers. Mr. Anthony Dotolo, science teacher, accompanied them each week to the B-I campus in Ridgefield, and believes it is a great program for our science students.

Partners in Science is a cooperative program between Boehringer Ingelheim Pharmaceuticals, Inc. and area high schools in Connecticut. It is a two-phase program that introduces high school students and teachers to the world of drug discovery and leading-edge pharmaceutical research.

Getting the Notes

Every school year I end up teaching a few students who can draw remarkably well. In class I will see them creating a picture within the college ruled lines of their spiral bound notebooks, usually while they are working together in small groups. I end up coughing up an awkward comment, something like, “Do you like to draw? My father was an artist.” Several of these interactions come to mind and in each one the student remains unsure of how to handle the spotlight I cast on him, however innocent and momentary. His buddies watch too, wondering what I meant, while the poor guy tries to figure out if I was sarcastically accusing him of not concentrating on the group’s objective. So, allow me to explain myself and clarify my thoughts on students drawing during class.

A few years back, an exchange with a student illustrator actually went well. He told me that drawing helped him focus when I was talking. His grades certainly attested to his assertion. I’m sure some educators might disagree with me, but I’m inclined to believe in the possibility that drawing, for some people, helps them process the material an instructor is trying to teach. If you are in my classroom, or will be, please feel free to draw within your notes. Let me also shamelessly plug Prep’s student literary magazine, The Bellarmine Review, and invite illustrators to submit their work for publication in this year’s volume.

I appreciate artists because of my father. I have his childhood drawings that my grandmother dated and preserved. Since his passing, they’ve lived in a large box in my attic. I’ve looked at them recently and have written about them in some essays as I pursue a greater understanding of him. They are evidence to me, that in addition to teaching, drawing was his vocation.

When he had free time as a child, as soon as he was intelligent and coordinated enough, illustrations poured out of him. On the fragile sixty-year old paper, men populate aircraft carriers and fire machine guns at enemy planes. He penciled the netting on the ships in perfectly straight intersecting lines. His steady, even hand formed ships, tanks, trucks, cars, and buildings in ninety-degree angles and sloped contours. A few flags flap and birds fly. Dark lead frames the shaded billowing sails. Sailors look out of cabins above the wavy water line.

After my father’s forty-fifth high school reunion, a gentleman got my phone number from my mom who he had called looking for my dad. He wanted to know if my dad: “Went on to work for General Motors or something, drawing concept cars. He was always drawing cars in class,” the raspy voice said.

I can’t pretend to know if those cars my father drew in class helped him retain information. I do know he shared what he knew about art during the day with his high school students for twenty-nine years. And most nights he crossed the Delaware River on a twenty-minute train ride and took classes at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, The University of the Arts, and the Sketch Club of Philadelphia.

When I see students drawing during one of my lessons, I don’t necessarily see my father. But I know he would want me to encourage them and disregard the unimaginative presumption that they are doodling themselves off into some daydream. He would want me to at least consider that their visual expressions just might be depictions of their inner-self coming to life, between their notes.

James M. Chesbro, English teacher and Bellarmino Review moderator, will appear this semester in Connecticut Review, Upper East Side Magazine, and Serendipity. He is a co-editor of You. An Anthology of Essays in the Second Person, forthcoming from Welcome Table Press.

Golden Legacy

The Class of 1960 celebrated their 50th reunion on the weekend of June 4-6, 2010, but their legacy at Prep will be felt for many years year to come. Thanks in part to a dedicated reunion committee (see box p.23), the class presented Prep with a 5-year gift commitment of $165,700! The funds raised by the class will be used in two ways: to support The Class of 1960 Scholarship for student financial aid and for support of the Annual Fund. Fairfield Prep is most appreciative to the Class of 1960 for their continued loyalty and generosity!

Silver Solidarity

The Class of 1985 has the unique distinction of being the last Prep class to occupy McAuliffe Hall. They also now have a distinction of a different kind: they are the first 25th reunion class to present Prep with a 5-year class gift commitment in honor of their silver graduation anniversary. In total, the class raised $193,200 to establish the Rev. Laurence D. Ryan, S.J., Scholarship for student financial aid and for support of the Annual Fund! Fairfield Prep is most grateful for the efforts of the reunion committee (see box p.23) and for all those who helped carry on the strong legacy of this unique class!

The event was preceded by an Advent Mass held at Egan Chapel.

Entrepreneur's Corner

Alesevich '03 Finds Career Path Through Mandarin Chinese Studies

A love of travel and decision to study Mandarin Chinese "on a whim" in college has opened incredible doors for a Fairfield Prep graduate who is himself now teaching the language and culture in a new free program that has just begun in Fairfield Public Libraries. Christopher Alesevich '03 is offering the program at both the Fairfield Woods Branch Library and Fairfield Public Library. The sessions offer local people of all ages the opportunity to learn Mandarin Chinese and about Chinese culture through virtual field trips, lesson plans and live interaction with China-based teachers. Through the free classes, Alesevich also hopes to encourage people to take a deeper interest in the language and enroll in his Wudaokou Borderless Learning online school.

Perceiving an interest and need in the international community, he decided he would teach Chinese. "In my apartment on the east side of Beijing in February 2009, I hatched the concept for Wudaokou Borderless Learning." With partner Michael Fengbo, Alesevich immediately dove into putting together an online Chinese language instruction school and recruiting tutors. "In an underground KFC in a nearby shopping mall is where we began our pitch to tutors," he mused.

With regard to the website, he said, "I wanted to share what it's like to learn Chinese in China for those people not fortunate enough to have that opportunity." Alesevich became interested in reaching out to folks in Connecticut and showing them how they can easily learn Chinese. "In learning Chinese in Beijing, I had found that I made the greatest progress when I interacted and practiced one-on-one live with my instructors." He incorporated this element - really a founding principal - into his new website, to provide that experience, which he says is fundamental to how language is learned.

Yale Clinical Excellence Award Goes to Obstetrician Paidas '78

Dr. Michael J. Paidas [Class of 1978, P'09, pictured at left] has focused on providing excellent patient-focused, clinical care. He consistently receives the highest Press Ganey scores in his department, and his patients have access to him 24/7," said Dean Robert J. Alpern, MD, upon presenting the award.

For Paidas, caring for patients is a privilege. "I truly love what I do. The opportunity to treat patients really gets me going every day," he said.

A graduate of Tufts University School of Medicine, Paidas joined Yale Medical Group eight years ago with a vision of developing a comprehensive program to address thrombosis and hemostasis disorders affecting women and children.

Today he serves as codirector of the Women and Children's Center for Blood Disorders, which he helped create at Yale.

Academically, Paidas is a nationally and internationally recognized authority on hemostasis disorders and women's health. He has published more than 230 manuscripts, abstracts, book chapters or courses, and given over 175 presentations.

Last year, Paidas received the prestigious National Faculty Award, by the Council of Resident Education in Obstetrics and Gynecology. The associate professor of Obstetrics, Gynecology and Reproductive Services is also codirector for the National Hemophilia Foundation Baxter Clinical Fellowship at the Yale School of Medicine.

Paidas has created, and personally funds, a successful annual high school summer scholars program, now in its eighth year, dedicated to exposing talented high school juniors to the field of medicine and the reproductive sciences. Several Fairfield Prep students have participated. "Each year, the selected high school scholar spends the entire summer with me," Paidas said. Paidas says most of these students are choosing to become physicians, and at least one is pursuing an MD, PhD program.

State Senator John P. McKinney '82 Speaks at Stamford Business Breakfast

Alumni, parents, and friends of Prep enjoyed breakfast and listened to guest speaker State Senator John P. McKinney '82, P'14, at the Stamford Business Breakfast on October 28. The event was held at the UBS Headquarters in Stamford in their impressive 13th Floor Conference Room, complete with views of the city and Sound. Senator McKinney spoke candidly about the State of Connecticut and his work at the Capitol, as well as discussing the current political races in the state and nation. After the program, guests were invited to tour the UBS trading floor which is the office for approximately 1400 employees. Special thanks to Matt Terry '82, Senior Vice President - Investments, UBS, who sponsored the meeting.

Muldoon '76 Named "St. Vincent's Physician of the Year"

Dr. Lawrence Muldoon '76, P'03, '06, has been a doctor for more than 20 years. Muldoon, 51, of Fairfield, who is on active staff at St. Vincent's Medical Center in Bridgeport, was recently named St. Vincent's 2010 Physician of the Year. Dr. Frank Scifo '70, P'98, St. Vincent's director of primary care, nominated Muldoon for the honor.

St. Vincent's corporate senior vice president Ron Bianchi agreed that Muldoon goes above and beyond what's required of him, and often provides his services pro bono to those who don't have insurance. "He's a physician who's very committed to the community and the people who live here," Bianchi said. "He's kind of a throwback."

In addition to his practice, Muldoon is medical director of St.

Vincent's SWIM Across the Sound Prostate Cancer Institute, and helps many men who would otherwise not have access to such cancer screening services. He's served on the board of trustees for the medical center and St. Vincent's Health Center, and currently serves on the board of St. Vincent's College. He received the American Cancer Society's Star of Hope Award in 2008 for his efforts in providing compassionate care for those facing cancer.

Muldoon said he was pleased to receive the Physician of the Year Award, especially since St. Vincent's has always been a big part of his life. A Bridgeport native, he lived about three blocks away from the hospital while he was growing up. "It was an honor," Muldoon said of being named physician of the year.

Merchant Marines Sail Together

As a merchant mariner, work takes you all over the globe and introduces you to all kinds of people. Occasionally sailors will run into each other, in ports or on ships, and have a chance to catch up. Remarkably, three officers on the same vessel had attended Fairfield Prep together.

Steffan Wojcek '03, Dan Diotalevi '05 and Andrew Colleran '02, pictured left to right, all sailed together on the USNS Rainier (T-AOE 7), a fast-combat supply ship that delivers food, fuel and ammunition, from July to September of 2010. The ship is currently deployed in the Middle East.

Andrew attended State University of New York Maritime College graduating with a degree in Marine Transportation. He works in the Deck department and sails as 2nd Officer as the ship's Operations Officer. Andrew keeps in constant communications with the USS Abraham Lincoln and its Strike Group to coordinate 'Replenishment at Sea,' or RAS.

Steffan graduated from the United States Merchant Marine Academy with a Bachelor of Science in Systems Engineering and a minor in Electrical Engineering. His last assignment was Cargo 2nd Engineer, where he was in charge of all machinery on deck, and responsible for sending fuel and cargo to Navy ships as they pulled alongside.

Dan graduated from Kings Point with a Bachelor of Science in Marine Engineering and Shipyard Management. He is sailing as 3rd Engineer, Cargo, working with the Cargo Engineer and unlicensed deck engineers taking care of equipment on deck, and is in charge of helicopter refueling during Vertical Replenishment, or VERTREP operations.

Maura Marden, Alumni Parent, Inspirational Survivor, Dies at 53

Maura Marden was always a tough athlete. A swimmer and a marathon runner, Marden was used to fighting through pain.

But on Aug. 7 her resilience and toughness made a lasting impression on all those at the annual SWIM Across the Sound fundraiser. Despite being in the midst of a battle with cancer, the 53-year-old Marden participated in the swim along with her three sons (Prep alumni) and family friends.

“We thought she would swim for maybe five minutes and that would be enough time in the water for her,” said Bill Marden, Maura’s husband, who was in the boat beside her. “But she yelled up ‘give me 10 more,’ she was so enthusiastic and she swam for 10 more minutes.”

Maura Marden died on September 27, ending a four-year battle with cancer. Her family and friends said that final swim with her family meant everything to her.

“For two years she never, ever complained,” said Bill Marden. “Every morning she was up, she went to the gym, she lived her actual life and didn’t let cancer get in the way. Every night she would make dinner.”

“She was so thrilled when she finished and after the swim she was very sick,” Bill Marden said. He added that his wife had been sick in bed until 3 p.m. the day before, but remarkably was healthy enough to participate in the part of the 15-mile swim from Port Jefferson on Long Island to Captain’s Cove in Bridgeport that serves as a fundraiser for the St. Vincent’s Medical Center of Bridgeport.

“I saw her the day before she went into intensive care,” said Linda Johnston, a friend of Maura’s for 22 years. “And she said, ‘The greatest moment was the day I swam with the boys.’”

Marden swam with her three boys — David Platow '05; Danny Platow '07; and Bart Platow '09 — all Division I swimmers at the University of the Pacific in California and graduates of Fairfield Prep, along with family friend Andy Davis and her oncologist, Dr. Neil Fischbach. Bill Marden served as captain for the group, called Team Pride II. In addition to swimming, she also raised more than $20,000.

Former Prep Teacher & Asst. XC Coach Christian McEvoy finishes ULTRAMAN Raising Awareness for Cancer Survivors

3 Days: Swim 6.2 miles, Bike 261.4 miles, Run 52.4 miles

Christian McEvoy, an ultra endurance athlete and Director of the Connecticut Challenge Center for Survivorship, completed the 2010 Ultra-Man World Championships in Hawaii.

McEvoy, a first time competitor, finished 6th in a field of 40 seasoned athletes, with a time of 24:16:42, an amazing accomplishment. Participation is by invitation only. He was also the youngest competitor this year.

Christian is no stranger to ultra endurance events. Just out of college and teaching English at Fairfield Prep, Christian met Jeff Keith '80, the first above the knee amputee and cancer survivor to run across the country, and became inspired to follow in his footsteps. Literally. Just as Keith had done years prior, in 2006 McEvoy ran 3,400 miles across the country, from San Francisco to Rhode Island. Along the way he met with cancer survivors, filmed their stories, and was inspired by their determination.

“I participate in ultra-distance sports to challenge my own perception of limits, and I pair every major effort with a charity. The charity closest to my heart is cancer survivorship. Through my participation, I am raising funds for cancer survivors through the Connecticut Challenge.” Christian’s athletic endeavors have helped him raise $350,000 to benefit cancer survivors.

Brown '06 on Kansas City Chiefs' Practice Squad

Nose tackle Garrett Brown '06 was one of the last of cuts made by the Kansas City Chiefs. But the New Haven native and Prep grad still has a job in the NFL. The Chiefs re-signed the 6-foot-1, 309-pound nose tackle to their eight-man practice squad.

"It's definitely a dream come true," said Brown, who originally signed with the Chiefs as an undrafted free agent out of Minnesota. "I knew there was a process and I was glad to hear back from them. I'm blessed to have this opportunity."

Brown was an All-State lineman and Connecticut Post All-Star at Fairfield Prep and a two-year starter and captain at Minnesota.

"I've learned so much playing football at this level," Brown said. "It's amazing the amount of talent there is in this league and it's definitely a blessing to be around it and to be on the team with guys who are legends."
