and guide student achievement on state assessments: As a result of the ever-changing state assessment system for students with disabilities, ARD committees no longer make recommendations or predictions regarding student assessments.
Students identified with disabilities participate in the state assessments with or without allowed accommodation. Prior to this school year, ARD committees would determine if a student would take a STAAR, STAAR Accommodated STAAR Modified or STAAR Alternate / Approved accommodations that were used regularly within the classroom could also be utilized on the state assessments. If an ARD committee considered a modified or alternate test for a student, participation requirements set by TEA were reviewed and the student had to meet each requirement in order to be eligible for the modified or alternate test. Beginning this school year, the modified tests and participation requirements have been retired.
According to TEA, students will take STAAR with or without allowable accommodations; a student with a disability may have choices regarding which of these assessments is most appropriate. Specific information regarding the 2015 testing for students with disabilities is still unavailable at this time.
