DEVIN D. FLETCHER,
- CHIEF LEARNING OFFICER

Education:

- University of Texas, Austin (BBA/MBA 2007)
- The Broad Center (M.Ed., 2014)

Devin Fletcher joined the Tulsa Public Schools team as chief learning officer in August 2016, and leads the educational performance of the district through the district's curriculum, instruction, and school improvement initiatives. Devin's team will spearhead the design and implementation of personalized, competency-based blended learning and develop instructional best practices grounded in learning science.

Devin served as executive director at Denver Public Schools from 2013-2016. In Denver, Devin served as the district lead on curriculum and instruction, academic strategic planning, school-based autonomy and implementation of standards aligned resources and instructional best practices. Devin also held the role of Managing Director at New Urban Learning in Detroit, where he was responsible for leading critical operational functions such as finance, accounting, human resources, information technology, and board relations.

Devin enjoys being active and is excited about exploring the amazing bike trails across the city. He considers himself to be somewhat of a "foodie" and looking forward to the amazing food scene here in the city. Devin loves to travel and has visited 58 different countries and hopes to reach at least 100 over his lifetime.