Now What?

This morning I had coffee with a couple of our school dads who I met during my first year here back in the fall of 2012. Their kids are moving along on their educational journey at AACCS, and will be AACCS lifers (attended K-12) at the end of their experience. They wanted to talk about the last six school years. The paragraph below surfaced the answers to most of their initial questions. I tried to thoughtfully respond and as best as possible recall the numbers connected to some of their questions, along with more strategic outcomes that they were curious about. The stats and the more programmatic outcomes speak for themselves. But, at the end of their historical “interrogation” (Don’t worry it was 100% friendly), I needed to speak to what has driven, and will continue to drive me in the years ahead.

What I explained to them was what I stated back when I was being interviewed and in all of my initial queries...my deal is Christ and kids. Our mission speaks specifically to those priorities, and that only happens when our school culture is aligned and focused on both Jesus Christ and our students. So for me, the recollections of these past six school years are filled with people...with relationships. My mind’s eye is drawn to the amazing faculty and staff that engages our students every day. I see their sacrifice and I see their visible faith being played out in their relationships with our students, our school parents and their teammates. I am also drawn to the scores of students that I have been blessed to know well.

I love our kids. I am inspired by them every day. I was moved to tears this past week at our 8th grade chapel and I was similarly challenged at our senior chapel.

We exist because of Jesus and for kids...and that should say it all.

Yes, we have accomplished much over the past six years and our next phase of strategic planning and school accreditation will provide us with the vision of what lies ahead for AACCS. But please know that it is our relationships that matter most.

First and foremost with Jesus, and then with the students, families, faculty/staff who God sends us each and every year. We do stand on the verge of a season of great opportunity. If pursued with our missional priorities inspiring our efforts, then I believe God has some amazing plans for our future.

As I began this article, my “Coffee Buddies” had some specific questions, and yes, much has been accomplished. Just don’t miss the two paragraphs that precede this one. We’ve completed our five year Strategic Plan that was published in January 2013. Our School Accreditation Term that was initiated in the Spring of 2013 is complete. We’ve opened a new lower school in Severn. We’ve seen the development and implementation of a K-12 Educational Support Program. Enrollment has grown from a low of 781 to an anticipated enrollment of 935 for school year 2018-2019. To be reminded about The NOW WHAT?, re-read those two center paragraphs. †

ABOUT THE COVER

In early spring, the AACCS group Eagle Links, invited the entire school body to participate in a “Kindness Rocks” event. This unifying activity was very fun but more importantly it displayed steadfast joy and courageous humility bringing together different groups and ages as they chose to write messages on rocks that would eventually be a blessing to others.

A Night IN THE ISLANDS

Thank you to everyone who attended the 15th Annual Spring Spectacular on April 21st. The fellowship was wonderful, the food was delicious, and your generosity was a blessing that honors God. We raised $80,000 for the AACS Anchor Fund which supports students, teachers, academic programs, school and faculty resources, and also helps to maintain and improve our four campuses in Anne Arundel County.

Lower School :: Annapolis

BEGINNING A NEW CHAPTER

by Allison (DeRoo) Kim, '03

There is no doubt that these five remarkable teachers have exemplified this verse throughout their many years teaching at the Annapolis Lower School. Their passion for children to know Jesus, their excitement for learning, and their desire to do their best work for the Lord is certainly evident. Now the Lord has called them to new chapters in their lives.

include some much-needed rest and relaxation, quality time with her aging parents (and new puppy), as well as traveling with friends. She is grateful to the AACCS community for 29 wonderful years!

Anne Schmidt has been teaching Pre-K at AACCS for 18 years. With her bubbly personality and creativity through the roof, she magically helps her little students fall in love with school. Anne's patience and joy fosters a warm environment for youngsters and sets an inviting tone for newcomers to the AACCS community. Although she will miss her little ones at AACCS, she is looking forward to spending time with family and new granddaughter, Lyla, in Florida.

"Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not human masters..." Colossians 3:23

As many third grade alumni and parents know, her sense of humor and creative approach to teaching make Donna DeRoo a perfect fit for third graders. From "DeRoo Dollars" to the "I love broccoli" song, to the framed verse that she specifically picks out for each child, Donna knows how to make school fun and meaningful – always keeping the hearts of her students in mind. Although she will miss her students, she is looking forward to family time, church ministries and simply enjoying a cup of tea. She says, "AACCS has been part of the life of our family since 1976. We have seen it flourish and become a light to Annapolis and beyond. Through God's grace and dedicated leadership it has stayed true to its founding principles. It is God's school and I know He will guide it into the future. All glory goes to Him."

Devotion and loyalty describe Doris Johnson, AACCS teacher of 29 years. "The highlight of her career" she says, "has always been the children. I will miss their eagerness to learn, their unconditional love, being able to share Jesus with them, laugh with them, and watch them grow physically, spiritually, and academically." Doris' faithfulness and dedication is not only evident in her teaching but also in her friendships with coworkers. The next chapter of her life will

Judy Thomas' peppy disposition and expert teaching makes her loved by her students, families and colleagues. After 25 years of teaching at AACCS, Judy is devoting her time to pursuing a master's degree in applied psychology and hopes to be a mental health therapist. She is thankful for her second graders' laughs, hugs and read-a-louds, as well as her friendships with coworkers.

With a background in speech pathology, Jan Ward has been faithfully serving AACCS for 14 years. Her passion for young readers is fueled by her joy of witnessing those "Aha!" moments in her students. She has a beautiful way of making young learners feel confident in who they are as God's workmanship through her intentional encouragement. Jan is looking forward to time with her growing family and church ministries.

As a faculty and staff, AACCS strives to have a culture defined by visible faith, courageous humility, healthy discontentment and steadfast joy. These teachers admirably demonstrate these characteristics. A hearty "THANK YOU" from the AACCS families, faculty and staff, and the hundreds of little people you have influenced for the sake of the Kingdom. †

DEVELOPING THE HEARTS & MINDS OF OUR STUDENTS

A second grade boy saw Carin Vogelzang in the hall and excitedly asked, “Do I get to come see you today?” That is how our students feel about Carin Vogelzang and the new Educational Support Program at the Severn Lower School (SLS).

Our school’s mission is to engage students in an education of excellence, enabling them to impact the world through a growing relationship with Jesus Christ. We are dedicated to serving the needs of our families. The Ed Support Program at AACCS desires to help each child recognize his/her God-given gifts and to help them see that God is at work in them.

This year marks the third year of our SLS campus. We continue to grow in enrollment, and this year we were able to expand our school-wide Educational Support Program to our campus at SLS.

Our K-12 Educational Support Program is led by Carolyn Beall. She has been helping the SLS in our first two years. This year we added an Educational Support Teacher, Emily Williams. Emily served in this role until she gave birth to her first child in October, and then Carin Vogelzang took over the role.

AACCS is committed to providing academic support for students with learning differences. One of our core values—educating the whole child—means that we honor God-given gifts, talents, and challenges while providing an excellent education and a firm foundation in which students can flourish. We partner, collaborate, and communicate with classroom teachers, students, and parents.

We are excited about the ways that students with learning differences at SLS are being included in the body of Christ. Emily and Carin have been able to work alongside teachers to identify student needs and problem-solve to find the best ways

“There are different kinds of gifts, but the same Spirit distributes them. There are different kinds of service, but the same Lord. There are different kinds of service, but the same end. There are different kinds of working, but in all of them and in everyone it is the same God at work.” Colossians 3:23 to support students in the classroom. They may assist teachers in the classroom or pull groups of students with specific needs. Carin, Emily, and Carolyn have also met with parents and teachers to help everyone understand each child’s specific needs.

Students spend close to 15,000 hours in school. For some that means many hours of struggle. Our Educational Support Program seeks to help students experience success by understanding their strengths, finding tools to help them with their weaknesses, developing their gifts, and helping them to achieve great things for Christ and His Kingdom.

As we continue to build our Ed Support Program, we ask the following questions:

- How can we create a culture of belonging for our students and for our families?
- How can we celebrate diversity?
- How can we honor each student as a member of the body of Christ?

Please stop by the SLS campus any time. We would love to show you all God is doing through our gifted teachers and staff and all He is doing in the hearts and minds of our amazing students. †

AACCS is committed to providing academic support for students with learning differences.

A Tribute to Rick Slenk, MS Principal

The doors of Annapolis Area Christian School opened in 1971 with three teachers and 32 students in grades K-3. The school flourished and grew, reaching a milestone in 1985 when 12 students had the distinction of becoming Annapolis Area Christian School's first high school graduates. Rick Slenk, who began teaching in 1981 and taught those first graduates 9th-12th grade History, has been involved in the school's phenomenal growth over the last 37 years.

Yes, Rick has served AACCS for thirty-seven years!

When we were planning how we could best celebrate a career that has spanned almost four decades and deeply impacted our school community, Lori Slenk came up with a slogan we loved - "It's the end of an era!" But that is technically true only for Rick and Lori, who go forth at the end of June to do God's work in new and exciting ways. For the rest of the AACCS community, we are blessed by the legacy left by this godly man's humble, faithful service. And the "era" of Christian education at AACCS will continue, God willing, for many more decades, thanks in great part to leadership like Rick's.

First and foremost, one of Rick's greatest legacies is his clear understanding of the distinctives of Christian Education and his mentoring of Middle School teachers in understanding how to integrate faith formation with an excellent, rigorous educational program. This integration organically results in a beautiful community that loves God and one another through a mutual love of Christ. Another related legacy is how Rick goes about mentoring teachers and staff at the middle school; his approach to professional development through the nurturing of a Christian collegiate culture led by God's Spirit has been the soil from which almost everything else grows. He has taught us to ask good questions and has modeled a desire to continually ask ourselves how we can serve our students and families best, and to answer those questions together in ways that are intentional and programmatic. He has provided a summer Conclave for teachers for 17 years, an intensive three-day professional retreat to reconnect and dive into professional development and planning for the upcoming year. Out of his leadership in understanding Christian Education and through a nurturing professional community of believers, much has been accomplished at the Middle School over the last 20 years.

One of Rick's first efforts was to organize the Middle School into grade level teaching teams that specialize in their students' developmental needs intellectually, socially and spiritually, and he has ensured over the years that teaching teams are given the time and resources necessary to plan faith-based integrated learning together. The fruit of this "best practice" organizational structure has been impressive. The Middle School implemented AACCS' first one-to-one laptop program after several years of study and preparation under Rick's wise leadership. Teachers have mapped curriculum, embraced project-based learning, increased STEM opportunities, kept abreast of brain-based research and its educational implications, wrestled with a digital invasion, worked tirelessly with students to help them create a genuine Christian culture they can call their own, helped develop a Biblical view of our approach to students with learning differences, and developed a student-centric worship program that engages students in authentic expressions of their love of Christ and what they are learning about following Him in their daily lives.

Interestingly, when I spoke with teachers about Rick's legacy in preparation for writing about it, very few responded first by noting those impressive Middle School accomplishments. They all spoke first about the impact Rick has had on them personally, professionally and in community as a godly man, a man who loves God, loves to worship God, and who shows us in his daily life what it "looks like" to be a Christian leader. Two years ago, Rick worked on the executive committee that labored to articulate our core values at AACCS, and when those values were published, those of us who know Rick realized that he not only understands our core values, he embodies them: visible faith, courageous humility, steadfast joy, healthy discontent. He "is" our core values, and his leadership in expressing so beautifully our essential identity as Christian educators is sure to be one of the legacies that will guide AACCS as we continue to navigate the myriad of changes in a post-Christian world. †

He embodies our values:

Visible Faith • Courageous Humility

Steadfast Joy • Healthy Discontent

AACS will forever thank
 for his 37 years of service!

Peer Testimonials

"It has been such a pleasure working for Rick the past 13 years. One of the things that I have most appreciated about Rick is the environment he has helped foster at the Middle School. He has created a culture in which teachers are given the freedom to be innovative and creative. Teachers are given time to collaborate with each other and discuss ways to help students thrive academically, socially, and spiritually. Rick has taught our faculty the importance of being intentional in everything that we do and to continue to pursue excellence rather than be content to maintain the status quo. His door is always open to listen to a story, discuss an idea, solve a problem or share a laugh. I will forever be grateful that I have been able to sit under his wisdom and leadership during my time at AACCS."

-Brian Miller

"Rick has been a great asset to AACCS over the past 37 years. His passion as an educator, his desire to impact kids, and his pursuit of new ways to accomplish that, have made him an amazing leader for our school. He has been a great example to work under. His leadership has been inspiring and he is a man worth following. His love of Christ and of kids and of his staff is very evident day to day. I consider him a great leader, boss, mentor and most of all friend. He will be greatly missed but his impact will continue on for a long time through the programs he began and even more so through the lives he invested in. Because of him, we are better teachers and students. He is just a great man to be around."

AACS SENIOR ACHIEVES TOP 1% OF ACT AND SAT SCORES

Evan Robertson has been a standout AACCS student since he arrived in sixth grade and finished his tenure as Valedictorian of his graduating class on May 24, 2018. One of his most impressive accomplishments is that both his SAT and his ACT scores were in the top 1% of the country. Evan also is one of the very few students in AACCS history to score a 5 out of 5 on all his AP exams!

In the summer of 2017, Evan was selected to participate in both the United States Air Force Academy and United States Naval Academy Summer Seminars. In September, Evan was named a Commended Student in the 2018 National Merit Scholarship Program. About 34,000 Commended Students throughout the nation were recognized for their exceptional academic promise. Commended Students placed among the top 50,000 scorers of more than 1.6 million students who entered the 2018 competition by taking the 2016 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT).

“AACCS has exposed me to secular thinking and philosophy, viewed through a Christian perspective.”

- Evan Robertson, Class of 2018

Since then, Evan has had a challenging decision to make in where he would attend college. Caleb Robertson, AACCS Class of 2014, and Luke Robertson, AACCS Class of 2016, are Evan's older brothers and both attend the U.S. Naval Academy. His father is also a Naval Academy graduate. After weighing his many options, Evan has decided to make his own mark on the U.S. Naval Academy where he will attend this fall.

As Evan looks forward to the future, he feels that AACCS has prepared him well for the culture he'll face. “AACCS has exposed me to secular thinking and philosophy, viewed through a Christian perspective,” said Evan. When asked about what she appreciates most about her son's high school experience, Evan's mother Mary Robertson said “I have appreciated the way Evan has been able to chart his own path, with support from his teachers. He has been challenged to think deeply about the world around him and how best to engage his gifts and talents. He sure has had some extraordinary teachers along the way at AACCS.”

In addition to his academic achievements and completion of his senior practicum at AACCS, Evan also rowed for the Annapolis Junior Rowing Association (AJR) and won the Cooper Cup. It's the first time an AJR 8+ boat has won the Cooper Cup and he won alongside fellow AACCS students Ben Thompson and Whit Thompson. Evan Robertson is also the AJR Team Captain and will be rowing for the Naval Academy next year. †

The -NEW! Galatians 6:10 Fund

by Graham Thorpe, '97

What does it look like to carry a burden for someone else? It may look like a meal given, or an evening of prayer, watching a child for a weekend, or loaning a car out so that a friend or neighbor can take care of a few things. It could mean coming alongside a family or fellow community member and picking up a financial need that goes unmet due to extreme or unforeseen circumstances. Or it could just simply require us to be present and intentional about the time spent with one another.

As a people of faith in Jesus Christ, the AACCS community has always desired to meet the needs of its families in multiple ways. One of those major ways has been to provide short-term financial assistance to families facing emergency situations that arise amongst our community. For many years we have had families and members of our faculty and staff that have given special gifts to help keep students enrolled at AACCS during unexpected and difficult times – due to illness or job loss or some other intense emergency.

Galatians 6:10 says, “So then, as we have opportunity, let us do good to everyone, and especially to those who are of the household of faith.” In an effort to both formalize and bring awareness to this need, the AACCS Board of Directors has created the Galatians 6:10 Fund. Our hope is that this Fund will be a way that we who are blessed may be a blessing to those who are in a place of unexpected need. †

Serving the Community

IN POLITICS

by Morgan Ray-Vottero, '15

After graduating from AACCS in the fall of 2015, I enrolled in Anne Arundel Community College where I studied for two years. I spent those years acclimating to college coursework, getting involved in as many clubs as possible, and trying to balance a social life.

It was during the spring of 2017 that I was elected president of the Student Political Association, a newly established club that aimed to better equip and encourage students to get involved with politics at the local, state, and federal level. The 2016 Presidential Election cycle took a toll on a lot of people, and I personally strived to foster an environment where students could disagree, but still support their local communities and create change many of us wanted to see. Working alongside fellow students in a bipartisan fashion encouraged me to continually reach out to people of all backgrounds and ideologies. The process was challenging at times, but the rewards were endless. I took a stand outside of my comfort zone and I learned more about myself than I ever imagined.

Since then I transferred to Penn State University Harrisburg, where I just completed my last semester of my junior year. Penn State had always been a dream of mine, and although the acclimation was at times difficult, I met some of the best and most diverse groups of people who encouraged me to pursue my faith and my dreams. After only being a student for two weeks, I noticed students weren't engaged with politics and there weren't many political organizations on campus. So I founded a new bipartisan political involvement association to better engage with students, and encourage them to get more involved. The mission is the same: empower students to get involved and show that even with different political affiliations, common ground can be found. Though the club is new, I am looking forward to returning in the fall to initiate more campus activities for students!

“If I could give our new graduates any advice, it would be to cherish the time they had at AACCS and to be courageous as they step out and fulfill God’s great plan for them!”

In addition to a full load of coursework, I was able to experience firsthand local politics as an Assistant Campaign Manager for a State Committeeman. It was a lot of work, but very rewarding. I was encouraged to meet students and politicians with similar goals as mine. I am so thankful for the opportunity I had to be a part of that campaign and will be working for another local campaign for Maryland Delegate this summer.

Looking back, I am so fortunate that I was involved with student life at AACCS, as that gave me the confidence to step up to the plate in college. If I could give our new graduates any advice, it would be to cherish the time they had at AACCS and to be courageous as they step out and fulfill God’s great plan for them! †
