 Res No 2018-59 Sufficiency of Instructional Materials_18-19.pdf

Summary:

As a result of the Williams settlement, the California Department of Education is requiring a resolution declaring the district's sufficiency of instructional materials in the core areas of math, science, social science and reading/language arts as a condition of receiving textbook funding. Not included as a condition of funding but required for inclusion in the resolution are health, foreign language, and science laboratory equipment for grades 9-12. As defined by state, sufficiency is defined as each pupil having textbook or instructional material, or both, to use in class and to take home to complete homework assignments. This does not require two sets of textbooks or instructional materials for each pupil.

Funding:

Insufficiency could result in withholding of state textbook funding.
