The Question Holds the Lantern

On my way to school last month I was struck by the fog that hung so low over the area because it reflected the way I was feeling. Weighing heavily on my mind were the regular work related issues we all tend to face – in my case, the Ministry of Education evaluation, travel related to conferences and school visits, completing reports for various committees, planning for the future of our school, connecting with various Southridge constituent groups, developing relationships, remembering the names of our all our students and their parents, and creating meaningful messages for assemblies and presentations.

As the heavy fog muffled the usual splendor of morning, my thoughts dampened my own spirit. I needed to find something to help me work through the density, and that's when I noticed the inspiration I needed. Streetlamps.

I noticed how that the streetlamps lining the street were providing just enough light to guide me along the roadway. They were certainly muted expressions of their full strength but the ring of hazy light they provided was enough – sufficient to get me through to the next source of light. I made my way, from one streetlamp to the next all the while trying to interpret the lamps' metaphor.

About a dozen streetlamps into my thinking, a phrase from a recent poem surfaced, “the question holds the lantern.” That was all I needed. It dawned on me that I didn't need the full glow of the answers to help me; what I needed were a series of questions to keep me moving along the pathway. I realized that rather than trying to understand the answers, I only needed to find the questions.

Isn't it interesting how often the big picture comes into focus with gradual realization? As I drove up the hill toward Southridge and I came out of the low-lying fog I was welcomed onto our campus by a beautiful morning of golden light bathing our fall foliage in warmth. I felt assured knowing that the focus on inquiry at Southridge and the questioning skills we are teaching our students will help provide them with the light they need to find their way when they face the challenges that learning (and life in general) so often presents.

Empowering students for Successful Learning

Empowering students to be successful in all aspects of their learning is something we continually strive for. Our Learning Strategies team aims to work with students, teachers and families to support a diverse range of learning needs in the Junior School. Classroom teachers and Learning Strategies teachers work together to assess and determine needs and avenues of support. Support occurs through both a pull-out and a push-in model.

When students are pulled out of the classroom, they work directly with a Learning Strategies teacher either individually or in small groups for targeted instruction that meets their specific learning needs. Push-In support happens in K-4 classrooms, where the Learning Strategies teacher works with the classroom teacher and students to meet individual and/or small group needs within the context of the classroom.

Learning support can benefit students needing short-term or long-term support to consolidate concepts and achieve grade-level expectations, with a particular focus on consolidating and strengthening foundational literacy and numeracy skills. This type of support typically happens through a pull-out model.

When a student is participating in learning support, the goal is always for them to work towards independence within the classroom program. Typically, the targeted instruction they receive enables them to achieve the gains needed to succeed in their grade level work.

This year, we have also implemented the opportunity for students in Grade 4 and up to participate in Math Club which runs Wednesdays and Thursdays after school. Math Club aims to provide students with opportunities to engage in hands on and fun activities that reinforce understanding and consolidation of mathematical concepts, skills and facts.

We are fortunate to have two Learning Strategies teachers who work with students in the Junior School: Mrs. Olivia Clayton works primarily with PYP learners and runs Math Club, and Mrs. Jo-Ann Murchie (also our IB PYP Coordinator) works primarily with MYP learners.

Music will be provided by our in-house DJ's. There is a $7.00 admission fee. Students can also purchase snacks and drinks from the concession. AR Reading Cut Off Date – Friday, November 25 – Grade 3-7

Just a reminder to all students from Grades Three to Seven that the last day for writing AR tests for term one is on Friday, November 25th. All tests completed from Monday, November 28th will count for Term 2. It is helpful to know that this deadline is looming in order to avoid a last minute rush on test-writing. Ideally, students set realistic goals in consultation with their teachers, and the AR goal is manageable and attainable; we are just supporting good reading habits. However, we are mindful that lives get busy, and knowledge of deadlines is very helpful.

Head of Senior School

So, what did you learn in school today?

Have you ever asked your kids that question? I know I did when my kids were in school and the response was usually, "nothing." Of course there is nothing wrong with the question, "what did you learn today," but in reality, it is likely a little too broad for your son or daughter to formulate an answer as they settle into the seat of the car for the ride home. In fact, it might actually be an overwhelming question to process as they consider the magnitude of everything they have done throughout the day.

When I was visiting Phillips Exeter a couple of weeks ago, the other teachers from Southridge and I were given a schedule of classes to visit throughout the day. Something struck me as I was sitting in the fifth class of the day: students today go through an incredible amount of intellectual challenge as they navigate their responsibilities in different courses throughout an average day. While at Exeter, I attended an English, history, and a world religions course in the morning, and then a math and physics class in the afternoon. By the end of the day I was exhausted - my head was spinning - and I didn't even have to complete any homework the night before!

Every day, students are required to come prepared for five different classes and to discuss their research and opinions in reference to readings, texts or equations completed the night before. They write tests, work on group projects, discuss poems, analyze primary historical documents, solve complex equations, create art, and complete science labs or fitness testing all in the same day. Imagine having to complete a variety of tasks like that in your job over a six or seven hour day and having to answer the question, "so, what did you learn today?" on the drive home from work. It's no wonder students might respond to that question with "nothing."

Here are few other questions you may want to consider when sparking up a conversation with your child on the way home from school or at the dinner table that take into account the fact that they have spent most of their day at Harkness Tables in student-centred, discussion-based classes:

- "What was one discussion you were involved in today that really interested you?"
- "Did you feel that you were well prepared for your classes today?" "If not, which ones did you not feel prepared for, and what can you do to make sure that doesn't happen again?"
- "How do your teachers manage all of the different ideas and perspectives as students share their thoughts on a subject and guide meaningful discussions?"
- "What kind of feedback do you get on your participation in class?"
- "In which classes are you the most engaged/interested in?"
- "Do you like sharing your ideas in class, or is it a struggle?"
- "What happens when there is disagreement among viewpoints?"
- "Have you ever influenced someone else's opinion on a subject? Has someone else helped you to see things from a different perspective?"

You might find that focusing your questions more specifically on the fact that students are in a student-centered, discussion-based environment for most of their classes will help generate deeper discussions at home around their learning.

Cinderella Project is looking for volunteers!

Every year the Cinderella Project helps to collect used formal wear for both male and female grade 12 students in the lower mainland who are unable to purchase their own outfits for their graduation celebrations. This is a grade 12 project, but we always have a couple of grade 11 students learning about the project and the fundraising initiatives so that they can lead it in their grade 12 year.

This year we are also looking for a new parent volunteer to help with this project in the future as our current parent has helped with this project for many years; ideally, the parent would assist this year and lead next year. If you are interested in helping with this project, please contact Sam Froh (sfroh@southridge.bc.ca) and she will add you to the Schoology group.

Thanks!

Students' LEW video helps volunteer recruitment at B.C. Guide Dogs

Over leadership week in October of this year, a group of four Southridge Media Arts students worked with B.C. and Alberta Guide Dogs to create a video to help recruit volunteer puppy raisers for the organization.

Puppy raisers are essential to the guide dog training process and, with demand far exceeding supply, recruiting more puppy raisers is essential to providing more guide dog services to the visually impaired as well as children with autism.

Senior School Christmas Concerts, 7pm, December 6th and 7th

It is hard to believe that the Senior School Christmas Concerts are right around the corner! The students are busy preparing music to perform and AUWH!, the small ensemble audition evening, is set for November 17th. We have made a few adjustments to the Christmas Concerts for this year, most notably that the Grade 8 Concert and Jazz Bands will perform the first night and the Grade 9 Concert and Jazz Bands plus the Grade 9 Jazz Studies class will perform on the second evening.

The senior ensembles, including the choirs, will perform on both nights. In order for each group to give their best performance, we need all of our musicians in attendance. Please mark your calendars and make the necessary arrangements for your child to participate in the show. We would also love for families to join us in the audience to celebrate the sounds of these developing musicians.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact Ms. Parker at jparker@southernridge.bc.ca.

Students need to apply and pay in order for a university to set up a portal or account that will enable them to self-report marks or send transcripts at a designated time (this will vary depending on the university).
