In just a few days, we will come together to welcome the New Year, 5779, my first as President of our congregation. It is an exciting, challenging, and auspicious time to begin.

I am grateful to follow the remarkable past administration, led by Rick Powell, and I am humbled by the history of past Temple Presidents, so many of whom were also civic leaders and builders of some of the great institutions and industries in Los Angeles.

It goes without saying that the last thing I ever imagined doing was being President of the Temple. Yet, Wilshire Boulevard Temple has not only been a defining congregation in so many ways to our ancestors and to our community, it has also been without a doubt the most influential institution in shaping my life in every way imaginable. My brothers and I, who grew up in a small Jewish community in Mexico City, traveled to spend our summers at the Temple camps. I am truly a product of camp, and I can also proudly say that camp is where I realized what it means to be Jewish. Therefore, when I was asked to serve as President of this congregation, I could not refuse; it is the least I can do to give back to the temple that has shaped and been so important in my life.

All of us are part of a great legacy, a vital present, and an exciting future. We are rooted in tradition, informed by our ancestors, and inspired by the challenges of our day and the vision of our clergy and congregants. Few institutions in L.A. reflect and personify the transformation of this city and Jewish life in America more than Wilshire Boulevard Temple.

An exciting project that embodies this vision and transformation is the Audrey Irmas Pavilion. As we move closer to its groundbreaking, we are also witnessing the revitalization of this historic neighborhood, in which there are many exciting developments under way. In fact, all of our campuses and their neighborhoods bustle with activity. In both school campuses, young minds with a thirst for knowledge are being prepared for the world of tomorrow. Our camps give our youth and young adults an amazingly beautiful natural environment that offers them respite from the fast paced world that we live in to discover their best selves and the vibrancy of Judaism. The newly created Karsh Family Social Service Center is both an avenue through which our members can give back and a facility through which a large variety of social services are extended to those in need.

This month begins Yamim Noraim—the High Holy Days. With the sounding of the shofar, our souls are lifted to a pure and sacred plane, an elevated state meant to last for months and months, during which the trivialities of life are exposed as insignificant next to the unparalleled majesty of an awesome God. That’s the idea, at least. If you’re anything like me, the feeling of grace that follows repentance tends to evaporate as soon as I get cut off on the 405.

And so goes the cycle: We sin. We repent. We repeat. Year after year. What’s the point?

In the Torah portion Haazinu, Moses ascends Mount Nebo. At the summit, God instructs him to write a poem and teach it to the people of Israel. According to the rabbis, Moses spent the final days of his life writing out the Torah, a warts-and-all account of his followers’ journey to the Promised Land. That sometimes-shocking narrative didn’t simply celebrate the Israelites’ eventual triumph; it took stock of, and forced early Jews to grapple with, every last mistake made along the way.

Each year during the Hebrew month of Elul, we, like our ancestors, are commanded to take a hard look at our own progressions and regressions—a practice known as Hesbon Hanefesh (literally, an “accounting of the soul”). Moses scrutinized the past to move the Israelites forward; we can be inspired by our own flaws and failures to do better, as we march along the path toward Zion.

So this year, don’t be so hard on yourself when you inevitably slip out of that blissful Yom Kippur cocoon. Just stop, reflect, and ask: What would Moses do?

I wish you a meaningful journey of reflection.

L’shanah tovah!

New Principal at Brawerman East

Dr. Tamara Miller, a leader with decades of teaching and leadership skills and a lifetime of Jewish culture and tradition, comes to Brawerman after a long and impressive career in education, most recently as Academic Dean at Brentwood School.

Tamara and her family—husband Jeremy and teenage sons Jackson and Graham—are also Temple members, which makes her ascension to Principal of Brawerman East as seamless as the Torah starting over every year.

“Having gone to Temple camps since I was a kid in the 1980s to the bar mitzvahs of my boys at Wilshire Boulevard Temple, I am very familiar with the temple,” she said. “I am also familiar with the elementary school, because many of the [Brawerman] students feed into the middle school at Brentwood School. The opportunity presented itself, and here I am.”

As Principal, Tamara envisions her work at Brawerman East as an opportunity to blend two of her greatest strengths: creating a learning environment that plays to the individual skills and abilities of each student, and imbuing curricula with a love for Judaism.
New Classes Debut this Fall

Our Baby and Me program provides a wide variety of classes for children from birth to three years old at both the Erika J. Glazer and the Mann Family schools. In addition to our regular classes, we would like to highlight some new ones running this fall:

Research has proved that an infant’s environment dramatically affects brain building and healthy development. The early years are considered “prime time” for a young developing brain, and parents comprise the cornerstone of facilitating this development. At our Mann Family Early Childhood Center, we are excited to partner with Dr. Erica Felsenthal in our efforts to support parents and their young children. Our six-week Parent and Me class, the Neuroscience of Parenting, which begins September 18, focuses on teaching parents about infant development, how to nurture your children through greater understanding, and finding out the connections between brain and behavior. Class meets on Tuesdays from 11:00 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. for six weeks.

We also are offering a music class, Toddlers Tunes, a high-energy class taught by music specialist Jason Mesches, designed to increase movement and language skills. This class runs at both campuses: Fridays at 11:15 a.m. at Mann Family, and Tuesdays at 11:15 a.m. at Glazer. Classes begin the week of September 17th.

If you are a parent of twins or triplets, we encourage you to join our Marvelous Multiples class taught by Stephanie Gimbel, a mother of twins. This fun and informative session brings together families who understand the unique challenges faced by parents of multiples. Class meets on Thursdays at Mann Family from 1:00 p.m. to 2:30 p.m., beginning September 20th.

In addition to these, we offer a wide range of play-based classes with facilitator-led discussions that incorporate sensory play and art exploration. We host a class on Sundays for working parents, as well as Grandparent and Me and Shabbat classes on Fridays.

For a full list of classes and registration information, please visit our website wbtecc.org or contact Felisa Felsenthal at felisa@wbtla.org or (424) 208-8966.

Camps

Camp Committee’s Change in Leadership

Completing his three-year term as camp committee chair, Adam Slutske handed leadership over to Jake Glucksman at the annual camp committee meeting held at Camp Hess Kramer in late July.

As a camp alum and parent, Adam also has the distinction of being half of a “camp couple;” he met his wife, Andrea, at Camp Hess Kramer, and their three children ecstatically attend camp each summer. Adam brought passion and understanding to his role as chair, and under his leadership, parlor meetings for parents seeking information about our camps were created, and the number of beds filled as well as dollars raised for scholarships increased.

Entering his sixth year on the camp committee, camp alum Jake Glucksman, whose father, Bill, also attended Camp Hess Kramer, was a first-time camp parent this past summer, when son Sam boarded a big yellow bus headed for CHK. Jake has been an active participant and ambassador for our camps, serving on the fundraising, governance, alumni, and poker committees. With a wide circle of camp friends, Jake continues to reengage fellow alums and bring campers to Malibu for their first summer-camp experience.

In addition to a new chair of the camp committee, three new members were welcomed onto the committee, including former camp program director and longtime camp supporter (and founding Head of Brawerman Elementary School) Nadine Breuer; former camp staff and camp parent Lisa Dick; and camp alum and member of our poker committee David Bernstein.

We will be forever grateful to those who recently termed-off after nine-plus years on the committee, each having served on a myriad of camp sub-committees, including Gary Cohn, Mike Kopulsky, Wendy Marantz Levine, Steve Sauer, and Dan Wolf, who also served as Camp Committee Chair. Even though they’re leaving the committee, we know that they will stay involved in all things camp!
High Holy Days Special Programming

The theme of this year’s High Holy Days is Rebirth and Renewal, which challenges us to engage in honest introspection and commit to a spiritual return to our highest selves. During this holiest of seasons, we are offering many creative and engaging ways to take this journey together. We hope you will find something that speaks to your soul and join us.

L’shanah tovah,

Rabbi Susan Namus

Audrey Irmas Pavilion Donor Profiles

Nearly three years ago, congregant Audrey Irmas gave a lead gift of 30 million dollars to name the modern masterpiece that will stand adjacent to our historic sanctuary on Wilshire Boulevard. Designed by Dutch architect and Pritzker Prize winner Rem Koolhaas, the Audrey Irmas Pavilion will be a gathering place for all of Los Angeles. Audrey has said, “Wilshire Boulevard Temple has been an important part of my family for generations. I am so happy to have provided the first major gift, and I hope others will be inspired to support Audrey Irmas Pavilion and bring it to completion.”

Since the lead gift was made, many Temple members have committed to help create this lasting legacy.

In the coming months, we will be highlighting some of our donors, describing their enthusiasm for the project, their relationship with Wilshire Boulevard Temple, and how they envision the Audrey Irmas Pavilion will serve the community upon its completion.

Hopefully, these short profiles will encourage you to be part of this project, the most ambitious that the Temple has undertaken in the past 90 years. We are working diligently to secure the necessary pledges to finance this extraordinary vision and break ground in the fall.

I promise to keep you informed of our progress and hope you will help make this dream come true. If you have any questions, please don’t hesitate to contact me through Jamie Geller (jgeller@wbtl.org).

With gratitude,

Rabbi Steve Leder

Larry and Allison Berg are Philadelphia natives who have made Wilshire Boulevard Temple their spiritual home for nearly two decades. “Our relationship with Rabbi Leder is what matters most to us,” they said. “He married us, and he’s always been there for us. He’s always made us feel welcome. Yes, he’s our spiritual leader, but he’s also someone we enjoy being with on a personal level.”

Allison is from the Elkins Park suburb of Philadelphia, where the Frank Lloyd Wright–designed synagogue for the Beth Sholom congregation is located. So she was particularly interested when Rabbi Leder discussed contributing to the new Audrey Irmas Pavilion. “While I didn’t belong to that temple, everyone knew that Frank Lloyd Wright had built the synagogue, and it is a cultural landmark,” she said. “So when Rabbi Leder showed us the model, told us about the Rem Koolhaas design and the plans for the space, it really hit home with me.

“A building like this is not only great for the Temple but also for the entire community. To have Rem Koolhaas design the building...anyone coming to L.A. will know about it and see it.”

The Bergs also enjoy setting an example of philanthropy. Allison is on the boards of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, the American Friends of the Israel Museum, and the Advisory Council for the Arts at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. Larry is the former chairman of the nonprofit Crisis Text Line, and both are on the board of the Los Angeles Football Club Foundation (benefiting District 9 Youth), for which Larry is Lead Managing Owner.

On using the Audrey Irmas Pavilion, Larry said: “Our boys have already been bar mitzvahed, and it’s a little early for us to be thinking about weddings and things, so initially, at least, we look forward to attending events there with our friends. It will be a special place.”
The first, and also the shortest, question God asks in the Torah is just one word, “Ayeka?” In English this means, “Where are you?” God asked this question right after Adam and Eve ate from the forbidden tree. It is said that Adam sensed God’s presence and was hiding from him! Ayeka has little to do with Adam’s physical location, however. God asks this question to engage Adam in conversation, forcing Adam to think about his emotional and spiritual location.

For us, too, the High Holy Days is the season of Ayeka, a time that requires all of us to look closely at ourselves and figure out where we are now and where we want to be. The High Holy Days is the time when we are asked by God collectively and alone to admit for good and ill where we are, to render a spiritual accounting not of our careers but of our compassion, not of our wealth but of our wisdom, not of our gains but of our gifts, and not of our physical fitness but of the fitness of our souls. A ship cannot make its way through the seas without a compass, and we cannot make our way through life without being asked, at the turn of each and every year, Ayeka? “Where are you?” This question—and our answer to it—create the moral agenda for our work in the year ahead.

And so, as a religious school community embarking on a New Year, we must also ask ourselves, “Where are we?” We are committed to being a place where your children want to be, a place where they feel welcomed and at home. Our new team has been busy planning all summer, and we can’t wait to share our love and passion for Judaism and Jewish education with your children.

We are committed to making your child’s religious school education relevant to their lives. We have partnered with ShalomLearning to further enhance our interactive, values-based curriculum. Our students will embrace the lessons of Judaism, and Jewish values, to form a meaningful way to navigate the world.

We are committed to offering significant programs for our students beyond the bar or bat mitzvah. Both WBTY Helps, our program for Grade 7 and 8 students, and our Wednesday night program, for Grade 8 through 12 students, continue to evolve to better meet our students’ needs and interests.

We are committed to building community. Relationships create unbreakable bonds with Wilshire Boulevard Temple and with Judaism. We hope your children will attend our annual retreat, this year from Saturday, November 3, to Sunday, November 4, as well as our many youth group events held throughout the year.

We are excited to welcome everyone back to Religious School this fall! We can’t wait to see all of the returning faces and say hello to our new students! As a reminder, Religious School at the Irmas Campus begins on Sunday, September 16, and Religious School at the Glazer Campus starts up on Sunday, September 23.

Looking back on the past year at the Karsh Family Social Service Center, we are excited by the success of our programs, which truly meet the needs of our neighbors and the Koreatown community. Our legal aid programs have helped many people navigate immigration, bankruptcy, guardianship, and other challenges, while our vision clinic provides the community with greatly needed eye care and glasses. These are just two areas that exemplify the work going on at Karsh every day. Our volunteers—from the navigators, who are the first faces our clients see when they arrive for service, to our mobile food pantry volunteers, who know that the children they see every week are eagerly awaiting a book along with the food delivery to their home—are integral to the Karsh Center’s success. The volunteers also are key to the center’s next steps toward achieving the impact we hope to have on the community we call home.

Now, through the “perfect” lens of the High Holy Days, we look forward. Our vision for the coming year can only be achieved by putting the skills, passion, and commitment of our congregation into action. Each time we recite the Gevurot, we ask to “be among those who lift up the fallen, who set free the captive, who bring healing to the sick and help to those in need.” On High Holidays, we pray, “Avinu Malkeinu, fill our hands with generous deeds.” We can only move forward if we are moving together. We hope as you look on to the year ahead, that you’ll explore the ways in which you have the power to help those in need, and share your talents and skills through the Karsh Center.

SAVE THE DATE: THE CITY WITHOUT JEWS--A SILENT FILM FROM 1924 WITH MUSICAL ACCOMPANIMENT
Sunday, October 14  4:00 p.m.
Join us for a one-time, exclusive screening of this recently discovered 1924 Austrian Expressionist gem, which has been painstakingly restored by Filmarchiv Austria. Discovered in 2015 at a Paris flea market, the captivating satirical silent film is based on an Austrian book (1922) of the same title by Hugo Bettauer and is eerily prescient about what would happen to the Jews of Europe 15 years later. Presented on a giant screen and accompanied by live music from our 4,102-pipe Korn Kimball Organ.

L’shanah tovah!
As the High Holy Days approach, we reflect on the year that has passed and the year to come. We think about the impact we have made in our community—how we have helped others and improved ourselves. At Wilshire Boulevard Temple, one of the greatest ways to invest in our community is with support of our Each One Help One Annual Campaign. Contributions to Each One Help One provide funding where funding is needed most, including onetime events and ongoing programs, and membership assistance to more than 800 families. All temple members are asked to make a meaningful contribution and we remind you that every gift, no matter the amount, makes a huge difference. If each one helps one, we can guarantee a Jewish Future for all. For more information, please contact Donations Relations Manager, Alison Gettleson at (213) 835-2153 or agettleson@wbtlal.org.
