Focus on the Learning

What is the very first thing students do upon receiving their report cards? What is the first thing they do when they get a marked assignment, say an essay, back from a teacher? They look for the letter grade or percentage. Comments on report cards and suggestions for improvement teachers write on essays are often an afterthought to students--secondary information that may or may not even be read. Students are much more likely to read those comments and suggestions if they are happy with their mark. This pervasive focus on "what did I get?" rather than on, "what did I learn?" and "what do I need to do to improve?" is undermining the learning process.

What is the purpose of education? Is it to give students marks that can then be used to hopefully get them into college or university where they will learn the skills and knowledge that will ultimately lead to a successful career? Or is the purpose of education to promote learning and understanding?

Our entire K-12 faculty is studying a book written by Harvard senior research associate Ron Ritchhart called Creating Cultures of Thinking, and in the book's introduction, the author asks some significant questions that challenge the more traditional notions of why we educate. He quotes education historian Diane Ravitch who states "the single biggest problem in education [in the U.S.] is that no one agrees on why we educate. Faced with this lack of consensus, policy makers define good education as higher test scores."

At our Open House on November 2nd, I met with a number of Southridge parents whose children are in grades 6 and 7 and in my talk I referenced PISA (Program for International Student Achievement), a worldwide exam written in 72 countries that assesses 15 year-olds in math, reading and science. Canada placed near the top of the 2015 rankings and when you break results down by province and compare those results with world rankings, BC and Alberta rank below only Singapore. (Read the entire report here: 2015 PISA results.)

When you compare how Southridge matches up with other schools in the province, a case can be made that our students are receiving the best education in the world. But does that mean we pat ourselves on the back and continue to do the same things we have done for decades? No. The BC Ministry of Education has published the new Provincial Curriculum and it is a much different curriculum from what those of us who graduated from high school decades ago remember. Educators from other nations and provinces are lauding the BC Ministry of Education and its new curriculum for being relevant, and cutting-edge with a focus on deeper learning and the development of essential skills. This revamped curriculum has divided subjects into three skills sets: what students need to know, what they need to understand, and what they need to do. Added to this is the development of the Core Competencies that include critical and creative thinking, personal and social responsibility, communication, personal awareness, and positive personal and cultural identity. Your kids will be self-reflecting on one of the Core Competencies on their Term 1 Report Card.

In his 2008 book The Global Achievement Gap, Harvard professor Tony Wagner interviewed business leaders asking them what survival skills students would need to be successful and the list he came up with from those interviews included critical thinking and problem solving, collaboration, agility and adaptability, initiative and entrepreneurialism, communication skills, the ability to analyze information, and curiosity and imagination, a list that aligns pretty closely with our new BC curriculum's Core Competencies.

As we implement the new BC curriculum, we must recognize that, as Ron Ritchhart states in his book, we must formulate a "new vision of what a quality education is...what emerges is a rich profile of the student as an engaged and active thinker able to communicate, innovate, collaborate, and problem-solve...not a discrete collection of knowledge but rather a set of broad characteristics that motivate learning and lead to the generation of usable knowledge."

My hope for our students is that they make their education about the learning, and not just about the grades.

A great way for parents and students to ensure they are maximizing their learning is to come out to hear guest speaker Terry Small on November 29 from 7:00 - 8:30 in the Alan Brown Great Hall. Terry specializes in brain research and his session will help students and their parents maximize learning using strategies from current data on understanding the teenage brain. The session promises to be a valuable one for families with kids in grades 5 to 12 and I encourage you to come out to this free event.

MYP Arts Day in the City

We are very excited that the third annual Southridge MYP Arts Day in the City is coming up this Friday! On November 17th, all Grade 5, 6, and 7 students will have a chance to experience the arts in action in Vancouver. We will leave Southridge at 8:30 am and travel by school bus as we head to the Orpheum Theatre to listen to a concert by the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra. We will then enjoy lunch downtown before visiting the Vancouver Art Gallery for a tour of their exhibits. At the end of the day, we will return to Southridge by school bus, with a plan of arriving for 3:00 dismissal.

Students will need to bring a bag lunch or money ($10-$15) to purchase lunch, their school sweater/blazer and track jacket, and their Arts Process Journal MYP Arts Day in the City booklet (which will be handed out on Friday morning) for this day. There is no additional cost for this special field trip, as it is included with tuition, although students are welcome to bring spending money if they would like to visit the gift store at the art gallery.

We are very excited to experience the wonderful music and visual art that is just a short drive from Southridge, and we know that it will be a memorable day for the students! If you have any questions, please let us know.

Thank you!

Dr. Kevin Bespflug and Ms. Jackie Janzen

After School Clubs Program Update

We are pleased to share with you that the school has hired Rita Rai on a part-time basis to design and develop an After School Clubs Program for Southridge students. The After School Clubs Program will be an extension of the school day and will be a fee-based program that will run parallel to, but independent of, the school's co-curricular program. There are many details yet to be addressed and Rita is delighted to be able to partner and share her expertise and passion with Southridge on this new initiative.

Parents who have expressed an interest in an after school program will likely have many questions, including when the program will start, the hours and the cost. Rita's focus over the coming months will be on designing and developing the program, therefore we do not have these answers quite yet. Please stay tuned for more information and details about when the program will start.
