

Cynthia McCallum has served as a Texas public school educator for over 30 years. She began her career in the Burleson ISD in 1977 where she taught history and served as social studies department chair at Burleson High School. In 1984, she left the classroom for nine years and stayed home with her children. During that time, she continued her education, completing a Master of Education and a Mid-Management Administrator certification. Additionally, Mrs. McCallum served her church, First United Methodist – Mansfield, in various leadership and volunteer roles. In the mid-90s, she joined the Mansfield ISD and Mary Orr Intermediate as a sixth-grade English teacher, department chair, and gifted/talented specialist. Following five years at MOIS, Mrs. McCallum taught English at Mansfield High School, including Advanced Placement Language/Composition and Pre-AP English II courses. Since 2004, her administrative leadership includes serving as a middle school principal in a neighboring district, as Academic Associate Principal of Legacy High School, and, for six years, as Mansfield High School Principal. In 2014, Mrs. McCallum began her current position as Mansfield ISD Area Superintendent.

Mrs. McCallum earned a Bachelor of Arts from Sam Houston State University and a Master of Education from Tarleton State University. She holds lifetime Texas State Board of Education certifications in Secondary History, Social Studies, English, and Mid-Management Administrator. Additionally, she has earned State of Texas Superintendent and Gifted and Talented certifications.

Cynthia and her husband Don have lived in Mansfield since 1985. Over the years, both have enjoyed giving back to their community through volunteer service within the Mansfield ISD booster organizations, City of Mansfield youth organizations, and their church. They appreciate the positive, family-centered impact of this great community and school district. Cynthia and Don are proud of their daughter and son - both Mansfield ISD graduates.
