Alumni Spotlights: Where are they now?

A Message from Mr. K

Over the last five years, we've accomplished so much in our efforts to make AACCS the absolute best school of choice for Christian families in the country. Why settle for less? The highlights of what we've accomplished over these past five years as well as what we're looking forward to in the years ahead are presented here.

Raising Christian children today is an even greater challenge than it was just a few years ago.

I want to begin by acknowledging three very important points. First, we are well aware that the world is changing at supersonic speed, with ever expanding possibilities for learning. No longer are we bound by the constraints of the traditional classroom.

Second, surrounding these ever expanding learning possibilities, we have a world culture that is growing increasingly away from Truth. Spiritual warfare is all around us and public schools are growing increasingly hostile to Christianity. Raising Christian children today is an even greater challenge than it was just a few years ago. There is an ever increasing need for a supportive

Christian community to partner with parents and raise the next generation.

Third, we must always strive for improvement. No matter how hard we work this year, there will be more to do next year. We must also differentiate between mission and tradition: what we do because it's essential to our values and what we do because we've always done it. The status quo just won't cut it.

The challenges are great, but also very exciting. We're in a prime location to learn about and to impact the world for Jesus Christ. When you look at school size, we are in the top 5% of independent K-12 Christian schools in the United States and we're right here near Baltimore and Washington, D.C. Our size means that you can get a Christ-centered education, a Christian community, and still have lots of choices for classes and activities. We're preparing students for diverse lives and challenging careers, yet also for a lifetime of faithfulness to Christ, far beyond graduation.

God is so much bigger than any obstacle or challenge we will face. With your support and partnership, AACCS will continue to thrive, providing generations of children with an education of excellence, enabling them to impact the world for Jesus Christ.

In closing, I want you to know that the AACCS Board has offered me a new five-year contract and I have accepted and signed it. Barbara and I, and our daughters back in So. Cal., believe that our work here is not yet done. †

In His Service and Yours,
Rick Kempton, Superintendent

A FOND FAREWELL TO MRS. NANCY PAVLISCHEK

by Rene Wheeler

How do I say goodbye to my principal, colleague and friend, Nancy Pavlischek? When you spend 20 years working with someone, you have experiences which are hard to imagine that will not continue. We started out as team teachers of 4th and 5th graders. I was always impressed how she challenged those who had the ability to think and do more. I noticed her special bond with students that inspired them to be all they could be. As a colleague, I had the privilege of teaching her youngest daughter and worked with Nancy in a parent-teacher relationship. As principal, our bond grew stronger when I “begged” to open and run the computer lab. She took a risk, letting me teach 5th grade in the morning and computer in the afternoon. Then as the years passed, she agreed to the idea of making the computer job a full-time position. I thank God that she listened because this new plan allowed me to use my God-given talents in other ways like reading resource and chapel planning. I thank God for her always listening to my creative ideas for chapel, mission projects, or whole school events. She would cringe and hold on to her seat when I would arrive in the morning saying, “You won’t believe the idea I just had!” Then she would help me refine my “crazy” idea and make it work or just give me her approval to make it happen. We have planned so many things together like chapel schedules and themes, class schedules complete with colored sticky notes and huge posters, and our crowning achievement—the DISCIPLE Principles. She taught me to think through before answering, to plan ahead, and think deeply especially about our faith. But what I will miss the most is having my friend here every day with me. She introduced me to lime La Croix, Depression glass, the Marines, and we shared a love for the Pittsburgh Penguins. We’ve shared think through situations, to lead and guide us to make our Lower School program better and better every year. She has been a spiritual leader for our campus and the administrative council. Under her leadership, our faculty and staff have grown professionally to work as a cohesive unit in working for the children and the families they represent. Two of her favorite books, With All Due Respect, and Show Them Jesus, have made a huge impact on the focus of our teaching, how we discipline children, and how we guide and direct our students daily. Nancy also has had a wonderful way of understanding people’s gifts and putting them in places and responsibilities where they

our lives, our prayers, our children. We became grandmothers together, sharing toy ideas and funny grandma stories. Yes, I will miss my principal, colleague, and friend, but I know that God will continue to bring her success as she follows Him in the new path He has laid out for her.

Being in a shared space with the church, Nancy has worked hard to develop a good working relationship with them and has communicated our school needs. KINDERGARTEN'S NEWEST TEACHER

by Karl Graustein, Severn LS Principal

Each day Evelyn Armstrong travels the 45 miles between her home in Bel Air and the AACCS Severn Lower School (SLS) campus. She navigates Baltimore beltway traffic rain or shine, warm or cold to be

Evelyn joined the AACCS team this school year, and she serves as the Kindergarten teacher at our SLS. Evelyn and her husband, Gary, have two children and two grandchildren. Evelyn has been a part of the extended AACCS family for a while. Evelyn's daughter Erin Scheidt used to teach at the AACCS Middle School and Annapolis Lower School, and her son-in-law, Doug Scheidt, teaches and coaches at the AACCS Upper School.

Observing Evelyn for a few minutes, you will clearly see how God has gifted her to teach children. She walks into the building with energy, and she loves being with her students. She has created a warm and welcoming classroom where students learn and grow. She crafts lessons that connect with 5 year olds and inspires them to learn. They have grown so much this school year!

Evelyn has been teaching elementary school for 28 years. She has taught every grade level from PreK to 5th grade. She brings energy, passion, and expertise to our school. She earned her bachelor's degree in education from Towson University and her master's degree in education from Covenant College.

Evelyn has a strong faith that is visible to her students every day. Her church home is Abbott Memorial Presbyterian Church in Baltimore. She deeply loves Jesus Christ, and she highly values teaching in a Christian school where she can share her faith with her students.

Evelyn also excels in the other responsibilities she has outside of instruction. She has spoken in chapel, she monitors recesses and lunch, she meets with parents, she works well with other teachers and staff, and much more. Evelyn is a gift from God to us and a fantastic addition to our school. †

WELCOME, PRINCIPAL ELIZABETH WILLIAMS

It is a great honor to announce that we've hired Elizabeth Williams to serve as our new Annapolis Lower School Principal. It was a very competitive and comprehensive search process, involving Board members, parents, teachers, and members of the AACCS leadership team. Elizabeth's love for Christ and children, combined with her energy, experience, and enthusiasm, made her the best choice for our school.

Elizabeth has a master's degree in education, with a specialty in reading, as well as a bachelor's in education from Grove City College. She has 18 years of teaching and administrative experience at the Lower School level. In addition to her extensive teaching experience, she has also served on the leadership team at her current elementary school, served as a Literacy Coach, led professional development seminars, and worked with students in need of learning intervention.

Elizabeth and her husband Todd have three sons who will all attend AACCS next year. Two will be in the Middle School and their oldest will be a freshman at the Upper School.

When asked about her new role with AACCS Elizabeth said, "To say that I am excited might possibly be an understatement. To work within a community that integrates Christ along with academics, athletics, and arts, is a dream come true for our family." She said "I can't wait to get to know the faculty and families of AACCS and continue the well-established partnership between school and home that seeks to promote the academic and spiritual growth of all students."

Nancy Pavlischek, current Annapolis Lower School Principal, will finish out this school year and retire officially on June 30, 2017. Nancy says that although she is excited for the retirement life, she will also miss the joy of being around children every day, as well as the wisdom, friendship, and spiritual encouragement of her incredible staff. She is retiring in order to have more time to spend with her family. Nancy has been with AACCS since 1998. She will be greatly missed by students, parents, and colleagues alike.

Elizabeth Williams officially begins at AACCS on July 1, 2017. She plans to meet with Nancy over the summer to learn from her wisdom and years of experience. Elizabeth says she loves to "fellowship over coffee and would consider it a privilege to meet up with faculty members or families to get to know each other." If you get the opportunity, please extend Elizabeth and her family a warm AACCS welcome. †

PSALM CELEBRATION

by Jen Redmon, 6th Grade Teacher

How does God want us to pray? First, we must pray from the heart, to no other than the one true God who has revealed himself in his Word. Second, we must acknowledge our need, hiding nothing, and humble ourselves in his majestic presence. Lastly, we must rest on this unshakeable foundation: even though we do not deserve it, God will surely listen to us because of Christ our Lord. This is what he has promised in his Word.

Sixth grade students culminated their study of David’s Psalms with their annual Psalm Celebration this month. Students studied prayer in order to discover a deeper relationship with God – one in which they would learn to trust God more and to submit to him more willingly. The study also invited students to be bold and consistent in approaching God with their praises and requests. God longs for his children to communicate with him, and prayer draws us into the practice of communication with God. The Bible provides us with many examples of God’s people engaging in prayer and through them we learn when and how to pray, and how to respond to God. Students examined the prayer lives of several Biblical people in order to assist them in developing a pattern for their own prayer lives.

Students wrote original psalms of thankfulness, pouring out their hearts in praise to God. They worked diligently to edit and revise their pieces and practiced reading them with their classmates. Parents were invited on Friday, May 19 to worship with the students as they shared their psalms in Bible class.

The sixth grade theme is Transformation. We prayed that students’ hearts and minds would be changed because of this study, and that God would continue to transform them to seek a relationship with Him through prayer. To God be the glory! †

HEALTHY LIFE CONFERENCE REVIEW

by Eric Hansen, Upper School Dean of Students

On Thursday, April 13th, AACCS’ Upper School hosted its first “Healthy Life Conference” for students. This conference was birthed by our Student Life Team as an attempt to help meet the many social, emotional, spiritual, and physical needs we are seeing in our student community. To do this, we invited Rev. Sammy Foster, head pastor at Lighthouse Church, to open and close our day by talking with kids about the importance of wisdom to living a healthy life. Sandwiched in between were four workshop sessions dealing with some aspect of social, emotional, spiritual, and physical health.

We sought to make this day look as little like a regular school day as possible. Students dressed casually, ate lunch all together in an extended lunch time, had double the normal “passing time” between seminars, and were given time to silently reflect on what they’d learned. Most importantly, students had the freedom to attend the workshop sessions they felt would be most beneficial to their growth. These workshops were facilitated largely by faculty and staff members, although we also had presenters from the lower and middle schools, as well as several AACCS parents and local church leaders. The workshops covered such topics as anxiety & depression, rest/relaxation, healthy dating, pornography, handling conflict, fear, establishing boundaries, and learning to see others as God sees them.

The purpose of the conference was to further explore our year-long theme of “the Good Life” by examining what it means to live in healthy relationship with oneself and others. We know that so many of our kids – and so many of us – struggle to live healthy, balanced lives that are properly ordered with Christ at the center. Our goal was to help our students see how God’s truth reaches beneath the surface and speaks into every part of our lives – not only our spiritual lives, but our emotional, social, and physical lives as well. Providentially, the conference was held the Thursday before Easter, and we tried to help kids realize in a new way how our Lord’s resurrection not only grants us eternal life, but also seeks to bring healing and restoration to all of life in the here and now.

It was such a blessing to be able to both teach, and learn alongside, students in an environment that was different from a typical school day. We heard many positive reports from kids that the day itself – and especially the workshops they attended – both challenged and encouraged them. To Him be the glory! †

The Anchor Fund

by Graham Thorpe, '97

Change is inevitable and we should expect it. From retirements to seniors graduating to families moving in and out of the state, the make-up and landscape of Annapolis Area Christian School changes constantly. And yet, there is a foundational constant among us: our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. He continues to draw us in to changing situations so that the Holy Spirit might cause growth in us that brings praise to God. Expanding our understanding in the realm of stewardship is one major area where Christ is challenging and shaping our community. New and good change is on the horizon and our community is preparing to step out in visible faith. Please join us in praying for the future of AACCS and for His plan to be made clear as we stand together in steadfast joy!

A Life Unexpected

BRAD STAFFORD, Class of 2001

If someone would have said to me as a senior at AACCS, “Brad, you are going to be a missionary in Cape Town, South Africa, with a wife, five kids, and running an online business” I would have laughed in their face. Well, here we are 16 years after I graduated in 2001 and I have been doing EXACTLY that for the past 20 months (Lord willing with MORE to come). God had plans for me that came to fruition through His grace, His work, and His connections. Eric Hansen, Dean of Students at the AACCS Upper School and a teacher of mine back in the day, put it this way, “Brad was the ‘life of the party’ in high school.

and God did the rest. My three best friends from AACCS are still some of my closest friends. In a world where revolving friends is the norm, we’ve somehow managed to stay close despite marriages, careers, moves and the normal curveballs life throws at you. What started as an amazing holiday to visit Dustin turned into an opportunity to volunteer and live in a beautiful country while showing Christ’s love to all we meet. Our desire is for people that we come into contact with to see that something is different about our family and that Christ is that difference.

township of Masiphumelele, who in the span of 18 months went from a quiet guy with no confidence, to a VOCAL man of God who is running his own business as a tomato greenhouse farmer with two employees (that’s not even bringing into account the awards he’s received or how he has put GOD front and center in his TV interviews and successes), to our gardener Eric, a 19 year old Malawian, who became part of our family, and through my connections with Langa and Khalipa (another LivingHope student) has now started to regularly attend church and read his Bible daily, there is no shortage of work to be done! As God would have it, we were not “targeting” Eric, but God put him in our lives and through faithfulness to Him, Eric is growing closer to our Father in heaven. AWESOME!

The summer of 2017 brings us back to Maryland to focus on family and friends. In September we will be moving back to Cape Town. As we raise support and encourage others to pray for us, we would love to connect with anyone who’s interested, and we would love to share our story in more detail as I haven’t even gotten into the impact ON and THROUGH my five amazing kids!

He was the kid who everyone liked, but who we all wondered if and when he would ever take his life seriously. What a blessing to see the Lord grab his heart and use the very gifts that make Brad so magnetic to now draw others to Himself. Brad reminds me to take the long view of students and to remember that He gives us gifts on purpose with the intent to use them for His glory.”

How we ended up in Cape Town is a LONG story, but can be summed up by saying that one of my best friends from AACCS (Dustin Coombe ‘01) married a South African girl, my wife wanted to travel, my business was 100% mobile

So, what are we actually doing in Cape Town? I am volunteering with LivingHope where I focus on economic empowerment, business training, and business mentoring with the AMAZING students from South Africa. My wife is homeschooling our five kids (all under the age of nine) and helping me build bridges into ALL aspects of the community where we live.

I could easily fill the pages of this publication with all the wonderful stories of hope, faith, partnerships, and love. From mentoring and befriending Langa, a LivingHope student from the Eastern Cape who resides in the local

Together

As different as they were in high school, these siblings ended up being led to the same medical school to be trained to become physicians together.

DANNY LEYDORF, Class of 2006 / MINNA LEYDORF, Class of 2009

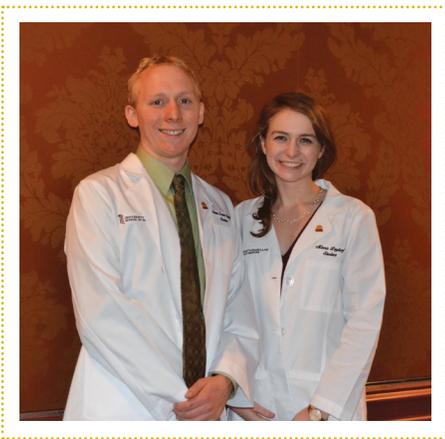

Dan Leydorf, '06, and Minna Leydorf, '09, are both third year medical students at the University of Maryland School of Medicine. While both are passionate about medicine and the opportunities this career provides them to serve and lead in their community, the Lord brought them through very different paths to bring them to where they are today. Danny and Minna both shared a bit about how God brought them to a career in medicine, and how they each see the Lord leading them in the years ahead.

Spending so much time in the hospital and around sick individuals whom I loved definitely made an impression on me, especially during such a formative time of life. As years went by, I grew in my love for science and compassion for the sick, in addition to growing in confidence that the Lord was leading me to become a physician. I am so grateful for my time at AACCS, which encouraged me to pursue excellence for the Lord's glory. In addition, after graduation I carried with me the importance of engaging culture for the sake of the gospel. I think back on my Senior Practicum project, and on Mr. Scheidt's senior year Bible class, and on the many discussions on how the gospel affects how we live and act when living and working in a secular culture. I'm still not sure what kind of doctor I'm going to be or what specifically God has in store for me in the years to come, but I feel so blessed to be able to serve the sick and represent healing to the people around me.

hospital. Those long hours coincided with dreams of applying my labor in ways that were more immediately helpful. The view out my window was hard to ignore and served as an object of intense reflection and prayer. Today,

“Most of the meaningful people in my life are related to AACCS in some way. I'm thankful for both its impact and the opportunities it continues to open.”

I remember back to when I thanked Mrs. Degenford profusely for the 5 on the AP Bio exam that would allow me to never take science again. It makes me chuckle. I loved science, but it took some real intervention to reveal it as my calling. As I have continued on I became acquainted with Dr. Adrian Park, a man who has become a giant in my life. I knew he was a doctor, I didn't realize he was a doctor's doctor. My acquaintance with Dr. Park is humbling as I consider where I would be without his direction and grounded yet inspiring advice that is always firmly centered on Christ and calling. This type of relationship is a special type of discipleship that comes rarely. AACCS made me who I am. Its teachers gave me the guidance and moral decision-making capacity that I have. Most meaningful people in my life are related to it in some way. I'm thankful for both its impact and the opportunities it continues to open. †

THOUGHTS FROM MINNA:

I first felt the Lord pulling on my heart to consider a career in medicine during my junior year of high school. In the midst of the stress of A.P. U.S. History, and the excitement of prom dress shopping - the typical experiences of junior year - I also lost both of my grandmothers within a five month span.

THOUGHTS FROM DANNY:

My professional journey was nuanced. I first pursued a career in politics with the support and encouragement of Mrs. Jane Brown - a paragon and mentor who I can almost hear talking about political situations as I think about them (I would love to hear her talking about the political scene today). With time I grew frustrated with the direction that politics has taken and the difficulty of any meaningful policy changes and developments. As these thoughts were solidifying, I was interning on the Ehrlich campaign which overlooked the
