

MacGregor Robinson touched the lives of so many people. Specifically, he was a significant caregiver to hundreds of students and graduates through his tenure at Trinity-Pawling School and the other schools which he served. His love, though, was Trinity-Pawling and the relationships he forged during his 17 years here. We take solace that the work he did here and the lives touched by his caring guidance and mentoring have left an indelible legacy on this School.

Trinity-Pawling School makes a meaningful difference in the lives of the students entrusted to it through the care, compassion, and guidance of the faculty and staff. Through deliberate recognition of this opportunity and the associated responsibilities, the School grows stronger by the mentoring relationships that strengthen as a result. The work we do to enrich the lives of students is the epitome of MacGregor's calling and it is the mission of Trinity-Pawling. We honor MacGregor by making a difference in the lives of the young men we teach, coach, and advise.

MacGregor's passion was mentoring and his vision was to create an endowed fund that would help promote mentoring relationships at Trinity-Pawling. This fund would support professional growth directed at the development of mentoring skills, and specifically support and recognize educators at Trinity-Pawling who have demonstrated excellence in mentoring so they might mentor colleagues by their example. We are honored to pursue this vision on his behalf so that his love for the student-centered strengths of this School can be coalesced around this theme of mentoring.

MACGREGOR ROBINSON ENDOWED CHAIR FOR MENTORING

The MacGregor Robinson Endowed Chair for Mentoring is being named for MacGregor Robinson (1964-2017), one of the School's most committed and generous educators. His life's work was built upon the awareness that mentoring is one of the most meaningful gifts an educator can provide his or her students. He excelled in that role because he was blessed with many caring role models in his life.

It was MacGregor's ambition to create a program at Trinity-Pawling that would be dedicated toward nurturing the mentoring skills of our faculty and staff as a means to further distinguish the School. This Endowed Chair for Mentoring was his vision and what he was working on in his final days.

In honor of MacGregor Robinson, donations may be made to this endowed fund which will support professional growth to develop mentoring skills for faculty and will specifically recognize educators at Trinity-Pawling who have demonstrated excellence in mentoring.
