Things That We Won't Miss...

We're all sorry to go, but none of us will be sitting in our dorms, misty-eyed, remembering these scenes around Penn Charter.

GROUND B

On October 14th, 1995 Penn Charter took another step forward. The current varsity team captains gathered on the Softball field behind Dr. Ball, Mrs. White, Mr. Butler, and a host of dignitaries to break ground for the long-awaited Field House. This new building should provide modern sports and Physical Education facilities for generations of Penn Charter students to come: new lockers, basketball, and tennis courts, a dance and exercise room, a state of the art training room, among other accoutrements. Thanks to the support of alumni, parents, and friends, P.C. will offer a more diverse fitness program and continue to stay a step ahead of the competition in the InterAc.

DEDICATION

In the past, the dedication of the yearbook has gone to a member of the faculty who has brought inspiration, joy, and learning into the Penn Charter Community and most specifically to the senior class. This year the recipient is not a teacher but a student who in every way brings these qualities to all of us. This student is Lisa Slowik. Stricken with a chronic and painful disease, Lisa is not able to attend school on a regular basis, but she is always on our minds. While she will not be graduating with us, Lisa is still a vital part of the Class of 1994.

The courage Lisa shows in dealing with her illness is a great inspiration to us all. While a school day might include such trivial drudgeries as aquatics, 80-minute periods, and snow-induced traffic chaos, what Lisa deals with day to day is of no comparison. And while we deal with these problems by cutting school and sleeping in, or whining and trying to bend the rules, Lisa remains resilient. Her attitude is truly a model for all of us to follow when dealing with any crisis which might seem insurmountable.

In addition to her courage, she constantly shows an amazingly positive attitude and a determination to keep up contact with her friends. Her visits to P.C. and our visits to her always seem to make a great day out of an ordinary one. All that is needed is her smile to lift our spirits. She is never going to allow her problems to prevent happiness or joy from existing in her life, and is always spreading this joy to everyone she comes in contact with.

Though unable to attend classes at P.C., Lisa still manages to learn through a tutor and with the help of the faculty. Although this is certainly not required of her, it is very important to her to continue her education despite setbacks. This desire to grow intellectually shows us all the value and importance of education in our lives.

So while Lisa is not always physically present here, she is never far from our minds, or our hearts. The lessons about determination and friendship she has taught us will never be forgotten. We thank Lisa for her resilience, and more importantly for her enduring friendship. Lisa Slowik will forever be a special member of the Class of 1994.

To the Class of 1994:

I write to you on the eve of yet another snowstorm. Indeed, you may remember your senior year more for the time you were out of school than for the time you were in attendance. For the last several years in the Class Record, classes have chosen metaphors for their involvement in the school. For you, that metaphor could easily be tied to your efforts to get through the various ice and snowstorms.

While in school, your class has been notable for its accomplishments. This is a strong class academically with individuals who have won many academic awards and have provided intellectual leadership in the classroom. Beyond the classroom, class members have assumed responsibility in a variety of ways. Images of Adam Goldberg in a play, Brandon Shepherdson or Michael Samuel running down the field, Steve Goodrich near the basket, or Asha Brown speaking in assembly will trigger memories in all of your minds of moments that are particularly meaningful to you. Individual members have offered leadership in a variety of areas. The student press including The Mirror, Class Record, and The Agora has had a particularly good year with excellent leadership from seniors. In addition, class members have helped in discussions of student involvement with disciplinary actions and have been responsible voices in the drug and alcohol task force. You are a class with a considerable amount of unity. In success and in difficult times you have learned to offer support to one another. As an example, you have consistently demonstrated your care, concern, and friendship for Lisa Slowik.

In conversations with seniors, the impact of individual teachers is made clear. Two faculty members who are graduating with the class and who have had major roles at Penn Charter are English department chair John Schug and lower school head Joan Costello. The image of John Schug which is so prominent in this book is appropriate because for over thirty years he has represented the devotion to the life of the mind and the commitment to young people which characterize the Penn Charter faculty. John's wit and warmth exemplified by his cheery greetings in the hall or his good natured coaching of a junior football or baseball team complement his dedication to developing reading and writing capabilities in his students. For almost forty years, Joan Costello has devoted herself to the education of young students at Penn Charter, first as a kindergarten teacher and then as lower school director. Many of you formed the basis of your academic foundations under the guidance of Joan Costello. Steadfast in her love of children and her dedication to Penn Charter, she takes great joy in the later accomplishments of her students in the upper school and beyond.

John Schug and Joan Costello will both retire at the end of the year. With them they will take more than seventy years of experience working with Penn Charter students. Each of them represents the traditions of valuing that of God in each person and helping that person to grow in positive ways.

We hope that those traditions have served you well now and will be valuable to you in the years to come. You are an important part of the Penn Charter community. We are proud of you and the diverse talents you represent. We wish you God speed and look forward to sharing with you in the future.

Sincerely,

Earl J. Ball, III
Head of School

The Penn Charter Faculty: Dedicated, Caring, Eccentric, Photogenic

The House, enough said.

Faculty imitating seniors: "Without students, the cafeteria is so peaceful!"

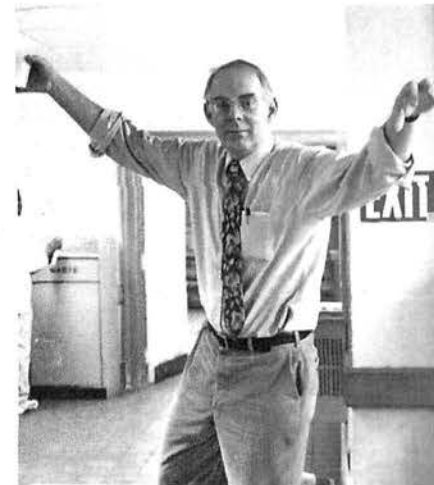

"Forgot to shave this morning!"

"I can assure you, Dean, Ceramics is a very demanding class..."

"Me? Assign long papers?
I have to grade them, you know!"

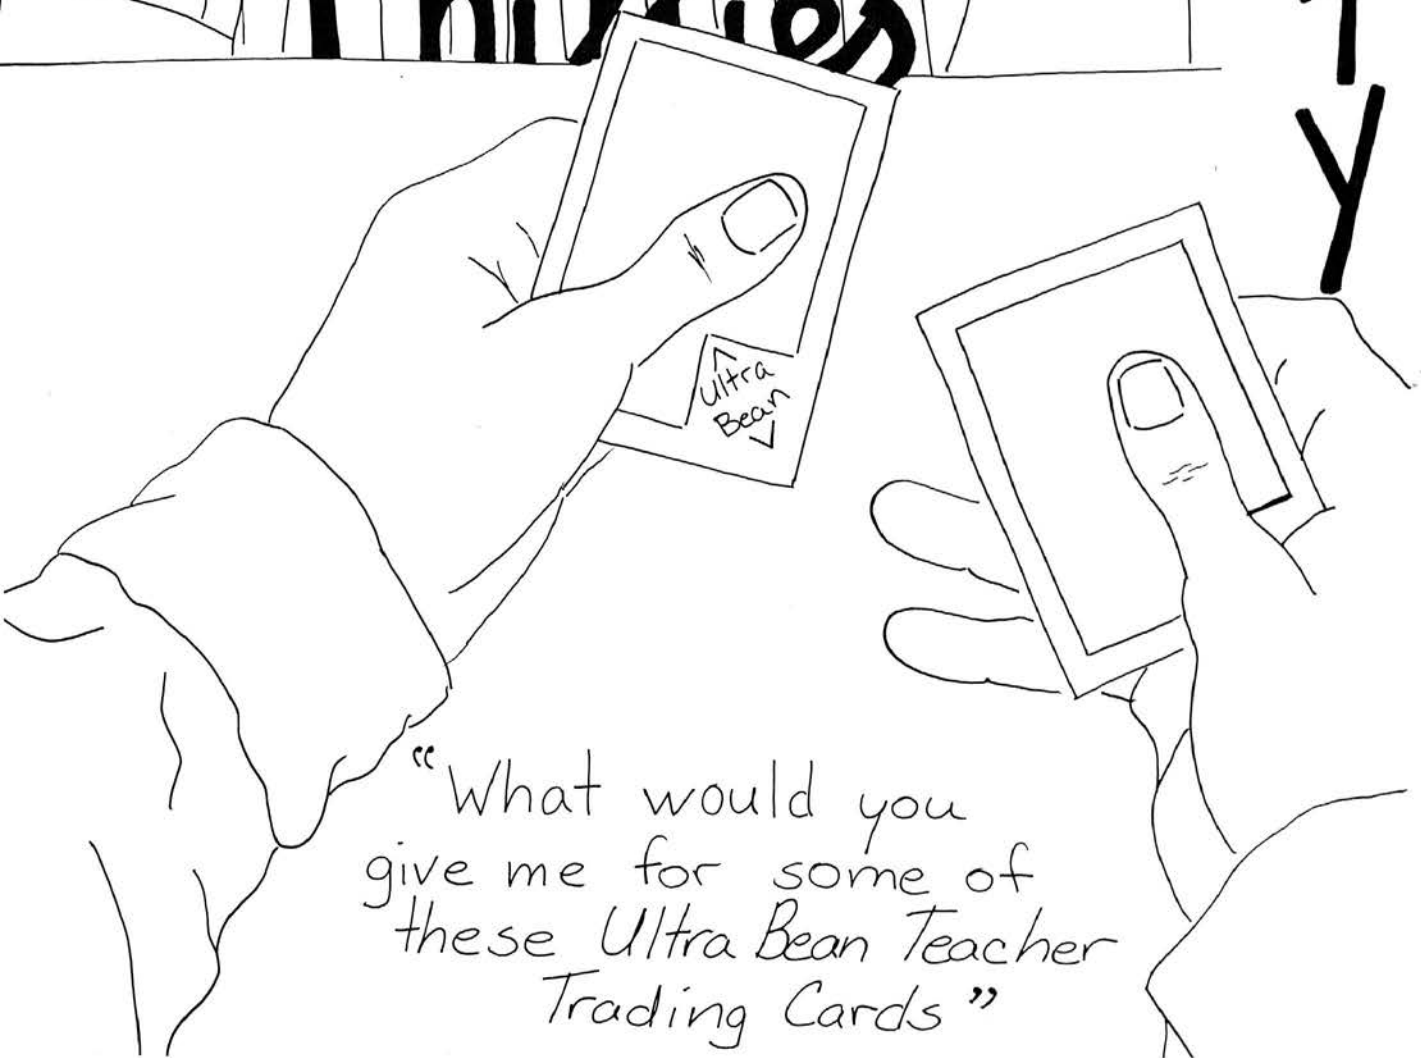

Many, many talents...

Middlebury College

Richard Smith

Mr. Smith is not only the most volatile faculty member at Penn Charter, he also sports the best footwear. Whether showing off his chartreuse Nikes, or his blue and white Keds, he's always at the top of his game.

He also must have the largest music collection in the world, he never goes without his Tower Records Bag. Aside from those few quirks, and that infamous Smitty Snarl, "Darling!", he is a great teacher of French, Math, and Doughnutology. Those who have had him will surely miss him, but not the headache-inducing primal screams he emits. N: StressTabs™ A: No more lunchroom duty. PP: Mitra, advisees who don't show up.

John Dover

Mr. Dover is our school's Dean of Students, or to put it another way, he indubitably executes the responsibilities of the Dean of the collective populus of this educational facility. Along with adding to his immense vocabulary, Mr. Dover teaches health and biology, and helps out classes with their activities. As the school's disciplinarian Mr. Dover strikes fear in the hearts of the underclassmen; we Seniors, however, have grown to love him. KF: In-

Mr. Mac

When he isn't training for his black-belt in Math Karate or lassoing cows at the Ponderosa, Mr. MacCullough is busy enlightening his students about the finer points of Geometry and Calculus. Though many people can't tell whether they are being taught by one math teacher or a whole staff, Mr. Mac makes the subject fun and interesting, through philosophy or "constructions". He is also a great teacher simply to speak with, if he isn't already engaged in a profound conversation with Ms. Sherif.

A: To be Jaime Escalante

Bahira Sherif

When Ms. Sherif isn't talking to one of her various faculty friends (Doc Coleman, Mr. Mac etc.), she is one of the nicer people at P.C. She came to Charter only to be stuck with a hopeless group of characters called German 2, and found that they would remain at the same maturity level in 12th Grade as in 8th (and the room still smells). "Bibi," as she refuses to be called by her students, is fluent in five languages, capable of reading even Scherneck's handwriting and able to analyze your inner self if you draw a tree. She is devoted to her students, to her coffee, and her sheep Moo, seen in the photo. We hope she stays here, and continues to share her accent with us, even after she becomes "Dr. Sherif."

Ralph West

Mr. West has the uncanny ability to read between the lines of the world, and see things that the rest of us don't. His classes are intense studies on intense literature, from that Whale book to the works of Faulkner. He also is one of the few teachers who will force one to write better English papers by helping students see their mistakes. When not advising the unruly Literary Society and Impressions, he also can do a mean chicken impersonation and is also a pretty good college counselor (No Hong Kong Baptist U). We're lucky to have someone as unique as Mr. West at PC.

Joe Perrott

Mr. Perrott is Penn Charter's resident psychology guru, and you'd better remember to use plenty of "I" statements in your papers for him. He's seen here in his Harley gear, ready for a night out with some of his "premed" students. He is well-loved for granting his students a free block every rotation, and will "Not assign weekend homework, Thanks for asking, Elliot." Whether debating the merits of making money, and going to Harvard and Yale, or reminiscing about the good old days of his Lacrosse dynasty of the '70's and '80's, Mr. Perrott is a unique and much loved teacher. Even if he does refuse to give us grades on our papers once in a while.

Pam Ball

What is there to say about a teacher who believes in no homework on the weekends? One can only say that Mrs. Ball is one of the nicest teachers in the school and cares a lot about her students. Best of all, her junior pre-calculus class learned how to draw pictures with their graphing calculators! So Mrs. Ball, thanks for all your time and caring - we hope Mr. Smith continues to bring you coffee for many years to come.

Thomas Katman

Doc Katman

Dr. Katman may say the most off-the-wall things of any teacher in the school, but that's okay, he doesn't realize he's saying them.

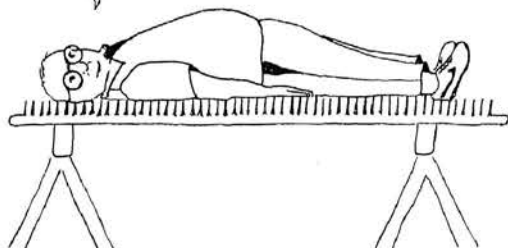

Somewhere in between his stories about his little dog and pet monkey, he'll tell you quite a bit about his wife's musicals, Picket Fences, the Rocky Horror Picture Show, and even Physics. If you do your homework and hand in your labs on time, you will walk out of Doc's class with the knowledge of the universe at your fingertips.

Ray Barber

Dr. Barber is well-known throughout Penn Charter for being the prize debater of the school. It doesn't matter what your rebuttal is, he'll throw you out anyway. However, when he isn't chatting with Mr. Uhlman and Mrs. Leube or typing on his computers, Dr. Barber is always willing to help you find obscure information on Commando Jack Coleman's Yak herding expedition in Scotland (see page 50), or the Nazi war-time construction of Volkswagens. That is, if you can keep from being tossed out of the library long enough to ask him!

Rick Mellor

Regardless of his reputation, Mr. Mellor is actually one of the most scholarly faculty members. He can often be found reading the great classics of literature, when not beating his students in pickleball while making up the rules. When you're the best athlete on campus (not you, Samuel), you can make up your own rules. As competitive as he is with his students, teaching them to lose gracefully, he has a soft side. Just wait for baseball season, when the real Mr. Nice Guy shows up. Who would ever want to cut his classes; he's one of the best phys-ed teachers at P.C.

Randy Granger

Mr. Granger "The Ripper," seen here demonstrating the finer points of scissor holding, is one of P.C.'s most devoted faculty members. He is a jack-of-all-trades; his knowledge includes subjects as varied as shipbuilding, calligraphy, and stop motion animation. The Grange Psuedo-English dictionary contains words that should be in the English language, like "gizmachie" and "frazooled". When not confronting the "brutal" administration, Mr. Granger can be found mixing chemicals in the recesses of the cavern known as the dark room. He also finds time to help students with their various projects, and manages to keep Jokelson and the Art Society in line.

Charlie Brown

If you're ever walking through the middle school hallways, definitely stop by Mr. Brown's room. When he's not coaching swimming, soccer, baseball, singing with his a cappella group, being a daddy to his ever-increasing number of children, or teaching Math to Sixth Graders and English to Eighth Graders. Mr. Brown is one of the coolest teachers in the history of civilization (and he knows it). He seems to have adapted to life without his sidekick, Mr. T., rather well.

Seen here with pal Bonzo the chimp, Mr. Huntington has been captured in one of his lighter moments. Though his stream-of-consciousness style of teaching, his occasionally unintelligible way of speaking, and his incoherent handwriting have baffled many of us, "Fred" is still well-liked among the student body. Mr. Huntington remains laid back (an effect of climbing rocks?), despite Dave Sirota's constant ranting and the always past-deadline Mirror. Mr. Huntington is the calm center of P.C.'s eccentric English staff, and we wouldn't have it any other way. N: A vacation from the Mirror staff.

Alice Davis

Although Dr. Ball carries the title of Headmaster, those who have had Mrs. Davis understand who really runs the school. From her office in the Science wing, Mrs. Davis has issued edicts such as the move to make Charter coed and changing the schedule. Despite her busy agenda she manages to find time to teach some bright-eyed sophomores first year Chemistry. She is also responsible for getting her panicky Juniors through the AP exam. Mrs. Davis is one of the nicest teachers at P.C., and manages, against all odds, to keep a healthy sense of humor through the process. N: a challenge. PP: Slackers.

Doc Coleman

Dr. Coleman is one of the most notorious and feared members of P.C.'s faculty, and it is well known that he is a bloody good shot with erasers (not to mention his stick). When not discussing the merits of his former alma maters, he manages to discourse on everything from his yak herding career in Scotland, to his recent lunar expedition with the Space shuttle. In this photo, Doc can be seen preparing for a typical Saturday night, except this time he's invited Dr. Kelley to come along.

Nancy Kelley

Dr. Kelley is not one of those teachers who would usually be seen with Commando Coleman on the weekend, but this photo caught her in the act. She secretly wanted to escape the administrative grind and Adam Goldberg, whose Student-Faculty Council proposals, such as a P.C. Endowment for the Propagation of Cheese, simply began to wear her down. She is now back to her normal, genial self, but for a while there she almost went over to the Dark Side.

Bill Goulding

For most PC students there is a love-hate relationship with PC's resident Quaker Math teacher. He is the only teacher who will give double homework when there is a chance of snow, or actually back up his threat to give a zero quiz grade if your book is uncovered. If you actually want to understand Algebra, there is no one more patient. Frequently found in his room after-school for extra help, Mr. Goulding certainly goes all out to make sure that everyone he teaches actually learns something. Maybe that's why he is such a popular advisor. Well, that or the doughnuts.

Steve Bonnie

When not teaching English or showing prospective parents around P.C., Mr. Bonnie can be found convincing students that they want to run track. Many of these poor souls wonder what they are doing running in the snow and through torrential downpours, but Mr. Bonnie just wants to make them into another (happy) championship track team. FE: "I let you in here didn't I?", "Oh Bay-bee!" PP: People who don't do spring sports. UF: Making them run track.

"SPECIAL" CLUBS

THE WHEEL CLUB

The Wheel Club has not been seen at PC since the 'sixties; back when students used to park cars at big events and make sure no one snuck out to D'Alessandro's. Now they make sure everyone parks between the lines, that juniors park off campus, and that Wolko gets back safely from Chubby's. Club advisor Mr. Dover helps everyone stay in line, while club President Andy Duffy oversees all off-campus "excursions."

REID'S RIDE CLUB

Reid's ride club, originated by President Buerger, is a service for students who demonstrate dire transportation needs. While the shuttle does not run to or from school, it does provide for easy access to Atlantic City, Chestnut Hill, or 13th and Samson. The club also appears at school dances, as its U800 head unit with joystick, 12-inch subwoofer, and trunk-loading 10 CD system plays all the tunes that hip middle-schoolers enjoy dancing to. All proceeds that the club raises are now going to the repair of the BMW shown here, which was dented while this picture was taken.

MATH TEAM

Math Team members compete in a variety of mathematics competitions, including the P A M L, G P M L, A H S M E, ATMOPAV, and AIME. Club advisor, Mr. Gordon, keeps things organized with the help of the Master of Mathematics himself, quasi-retired Mr. Linton.

SCIENCE CLUB

The Science Club is a group of students who are interested in exploring new ideas in science which are not always covered in the classroom. Although the group did not make "slime" with Lower Schoolers this year, as they have in the past, club advisor Mrs. Portnoy, invited guests to perform exciting demonstrations on superconductivity and radioactivity.

CONTEMPORARY ISSUES

The Contemporary Issues Club is new to Penn Charter. Dr. Kelley and club members discuss current events, view films and meet with guest speakers. This year the group went to hear Lani Guinier, Admiral Louise Wilmot and Mayor Rendell, among others. They discussed issues ranging from foreign affairs to National Health Insurance, from city politics to the role of the military in the post-Cold War era.

SOUTHERN HOME

A relatively new club here at P.C., Southern Home is a service project where students and teachers travel to the Southern Home on Allegheny Avenue every Wednesday. They tutor Hispanic children in math and reading, and then often join them for dinner. Ms. Taraborelli is the advisor and an active participant in the project.

SADD

Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD) has been active at PC for seven years with the help of Mrs. Gerber. Members warn their peers and elders about the dangers of "mixing alcohol and gasoline" by organizing events such as Ghost Day, displaying a totaled car that was involved in an alcohol-related accident, and distributing red ribbons as a reminder to not drive while drunk.

Stage Crüe helps build the sets and manage other behind-the-scenes details of P.C. plays and musicals. Led by senior Denise Friedland, the Crüe has been fortunate enough to have both Mr. Crosby Brown and Mrs. Colleen Lapowsky as advisors, and everybody says that it has been a fun year. This year's boys cross country team entered the season looking for someone to step up and fill the void created by last year's graduated seniors,

Shawn Morgan and Dale McMillian. With senior captains Kevin Sullivan and Sanjeev Swami and junior Mike James, the team found leadership and had high expectations. Behind these three runners, the team easily won an early season invitational at Solebury. The first dual meet at GFS yielded more success. These early wins gave the team a lot of confidence as they entered InterAc competition. Unfortunately, CHA squeaked by the team for a one point win, and Haverford followed up this narrow defeat by easily beating an injury riddled P.C. squad. During the course of the season, half the team missed meets due to injury or sickness, and the team never returned to its early season form. After tough losses to Malvern and Episcopal, and a win over G.A., the team traveled to the State championships. Although injured, Mike James still managed to finish 14th, while John Wybar finished 4th. The five other runners were juniors Hugh Meyer and

Anthony Comerota, seniors M Eastburn and Kevin Sullivan, and sophomore heart-throb, John Hassler. A year's team should be very successful with the returning underclassmen and the eligibility of sophomore Mike Casey who ran varsity cross country at Fair Judge last year.

This was the second year for the Penn Charter girls cross country team, again coached by Mr. Ballengee. Led by co-captains sophomore Chris Hillson and junior Lexy Bloom, this year's team benefited greatly from the experience they gained last year. The team consisted of newcomers sophomore Andrea Donohue, sophomore Tori Marabella, junior Tanya Merdiushev, and sophomores Lisa Sposato and Donna Taraborelli. The team's only freshman was Allison MacCullough.

Chris Hillson and Lexy Bloom

The first meet of the season was the Penn-Jersey Invitational at the Solebury School, where Penn Charter finished in a very close second place to George School. The team won their next meets against non-league opponents George School and Nazareth Academy, with Andrea Donahue placing first in both races. Then the team began a series of victories over InterAc schools Notre Dame, Episcopal, and previous champion Germantown Academy. These were great meets, highlighted by Andrea Donahue's consistent first place finishes. Tori Marabella and the dedicated Chris Hillson also placed among the leaders. The only loss of the season was against Shipley by one point; however, the girls put in a great effort.

Other tournaments were run at the Salesianum Invitational in Delaware, which was a good training experience for all who ran the extremely hilly course. Another invitational at George School saw the team finish respectably. The team again travelled to Mercersburg for the State Championship meet, where they finished fourth, even with horrible weather conditions. Andrea Donahue placed 6th at the State meet and was First Team All State, and Tori Marabella placed 8th over-all and made Second Team All State, with co-captains Chris Hillson and Lexy Bloom placing third and fourth on P.C. This was a good season for the almost undefeated Girls team. They also did well at Inter-Ac champs at Belmont, placing third over-all, and should be proud of their accomplishments this year. Next year should prove to be an even better season with the return of these runners.

This year's field hockey team may not have done as well as they would have liked, but they played hard every game. There were high points, however, such as the victory over GFS, and a tie with G.A. The team consisted of many strong players, unfortunately, the offense had a difficult time scoring goals.

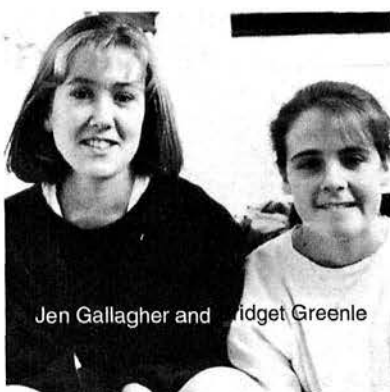

The '93 team was led by senior captains Jen Gallagher and Bridget Greenle. Other contributors were seniors: Meg Miller, who held the defense together; Sue Burke, whose penalty corners added to the team's goals; Carly Lynch, whose excellent goaltending skills kept the games close; and Megg Drumm, who was always an offensive threat.

On defense, juniors Anna Goodwin & Yasmin Beg and sophomores Carla Hetzel & Kate Miller were intimidating and aggressive. The offense also shows signs of vigor next year, thanks to juniors Jamie Weisman, Melissa Hemmings, and Emily Serra, who moved the ball upfield and frustrated opposing defenses with their persistence. The stickwork of these future stars is considerable and will only get better.

Sophomores Leigh Seyfert and Amy Goldbeck, along with freshman Brooke DiMarco, ought to move into the first team early next season, and gave the '93 squad a much needed reserve of energy.

Next year's team has a lot of potential, with many returning players, including some freshmen who played this year.

This was a tough season, but we learned a lot and grew as a team. The seniors will all be missed, and we hope they come back to catch a few games next year.

The expectations for the 1993 Penn Charter Quakers were high following the 1992 InterAc championship season. The unproven Quakers started the season ranked second in the city, and faced a six-hour road trip to Kiski Prep. Both defenses controlled the tempo of the game, but the Quakers managed to grind out a physical 9-3 victory.

After blowing out Peddie School 39-0, P.C. faced one of New Jersey's strongest teams, Shawnee. Once again, the Quakers' defense stood up to the challenge. A late touchdown by Shepherdson propelled Charter to a 14-7 win and first place ranking in the city.

The next opponent was Valley Forge Military Academy, a team who had beaten P.C. six out of the last seven years they met. However, P.C. was victorious 35-6, completing their non-league schedule at 4-0.

The dream of a perfect season almost came to a halt-- in the first league game at Malvern. In the beginning it looked like P.C. was going to run away with the game when Samuel completed two touchdowns to Mike Sposato and Steve Ley. After opening up a 15-0 advantage, the Quakers' defense eased up only to find themselves losing 16-15 with just 16 seconds remaining. Charter brought out the field goal unit, the ball was snapped and handled by Brain McMahon, and Mark McGonagle booted the game winning field goal.

After a close win against Malvern, Charter played a weak first half against Haverford -- the score was even at 14. Fortunately, an inspired Quaker defense showed up for the second half. Brian Walls and Eddie Kiefski, possessed by the arch-fiend himself, led the defensive attack. On the other side of the ball, Shepherdson notched one of his two five touchdown games. The Quakers improved their record to 6-0 with the 42-22 victory. P.C. had the next week off before beating Episcopal, who fell to the Quaker wrath as victim number seven.

The stage was now set for the two top teams in the InterAc, both of whom were undefeated. In the 107th meeting between these two rivals, PC showed GA who the best team in the InterAc, and the city, really was. Shepherdson rushed for an InterAc record 344 yards as well as 5 touchdowns. For his accomplishments he won the Geis trophy for the second straight year, as the MVP of the game. P.C. finished the season 8-0, 4-0 in the league, and repeated as InterAc champions for the first time since 1959.

This year's varsity soccer team looked to rebound from last year's 1-14 record. The addition of a new assistant coach, Tom Ruth, stressing hard conditioning and strong defense, was a major factor in the team's turnaround. The core of the defense was led by juniors Anthony Balsamo and Dave Poppa, and freshman Ty Williams. A.J. Caldwell's solid play throughout the season, leading the team in goal-scoring, and playing tremendous defense on some of the strongest players in the league, kept the midfield strong. In his first season starting in goal, Scott Berg produced five shut-outs, and kept the team's confidence up during close games. Collectively, the team was impressive during the pre-InterAc season with victories over public-league contenders Washington and Lincoln, as well as last year's public league champion, Frankford.

The InterAc season began slowly, with a loss to Haverford, mainly due to the nerves of the younger players who were tentative in their first league game. However, slowly the team molded into the form expected of them, playing top-ranked CHA close and beating both Malvern and Episcopal away. After the team's third straight road-win against GA, P.C. entered the second game against CHA with great confidence. Still, the Hillers managed a 2-0 win despite one of the best efforts from the Charter team. After the team's second win against Malvern, and a disappointing 3-0 loss to Episcopal, P.C. was forced to regroup for the crucial Haverford game. The 4-3 overtime loss was a heart-breaker, and the team had only to look forward to a victory against GA to secure third place. This was not to be, as Charter's shots caromed off the crossbar in overtime and P.C. settled for a tie, and a fourth place, 4-5-1 finish in the league. The future looks very bright for Charter however, as the team keeps many of its key contributors, and will look to knock-off InterAc powerhouse CHA next season.

Despite the loss of a number of key players, the 1993 tennis team began the season on a high note. With wins against A.F.S., Nazareth, and ANC, the team looked to be prepared for the upcoming season. With strong play from juniors Laurie Sykes and Megan Evans (1st and 2nd singles) there were high hopes going into the Inter-Ac matches. The team started off 2-0 with wins against Baldwin and Notre Dame, with the latter match being by far the most exciting of the season.

Laurie Sykes and Meg Evans

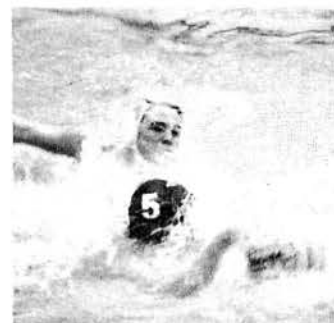

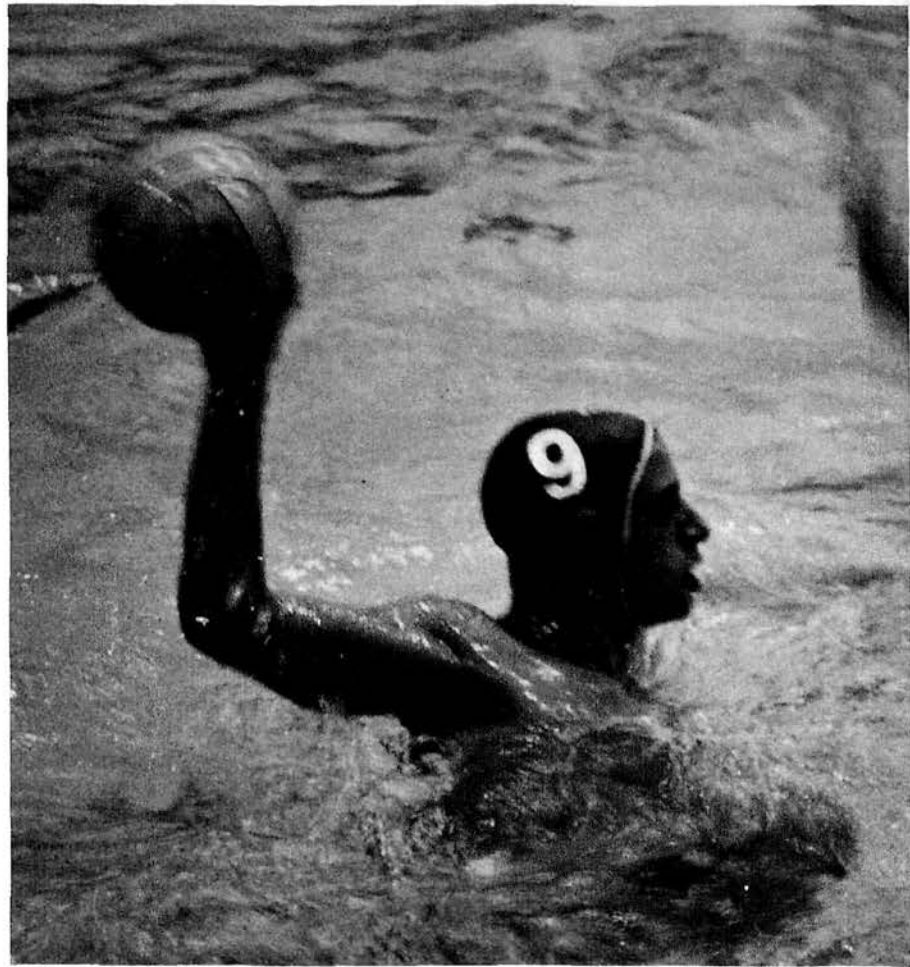

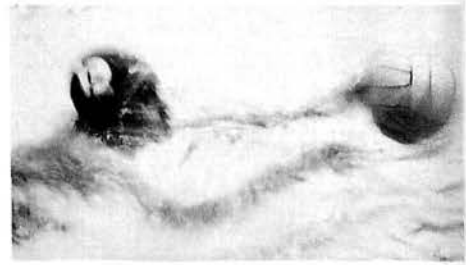

Sykes played a grueling match and proved victorious at 1st singles, while Lani Eisenstein disposed of her opponent quickly at the third singles spot. After 1st doubles lost a tough match, the score was 2-1, as both 2nd singles and 2nd doubles went to three sets. Evans lost 5-7 in the third, bringing the count to 2-2. The pressure fell on the 2nd doubles team of Neena Desai and Anna Ficken, who pulled out the win for the P.C. squad. Charter would be no stranger to this type of match, as a similar situation would occur twice more in the course of the season, with the team winning once and losing once. The following three matches were the toughest of the whole season, facing three solid teams. Although P.C. lost 2-3 to both Springside and Episcopal, the team held together with the strong play of the 1st doubles team of Emmy Mirsky and Liz Cohen. Next year's team will miss these lone seniors whose consistent play was instrumental to the team's success; however, with the three singles players returning, the 1994 season looks to be very successful. The team would like to thank coaches Lawrence Newton and Ms. Williams for all their help and support.

This year's water polo team was one of the most talented group of players seen in the past few seasons at P.C. A combination of size, strength, and speed made the outlook for the season very bright. The first game versus Episcopal Academy, P.C.'s rival, was a disappointing loss. By the end of the first period Episcopal had opened a nine point advantage. Charter managed to come back considerably, but fell short by 3 goals. This trend seemed to set the tone for the season, which was due to the lack of full team practices.

The team's best play was during the Episcopal tournament on Saturday October 30th. Competing in the tournament were four InterAc teams: P.C., Episcopal, Malvern, and Germantown Academy. The day was long and hard which showed in the disappointing third place finish. In the first game versus Episcopal, Brian Walters started the team flow with 10 goals. With the help of Tony Dual and Mike Baran P.C. finished with a strong seventeen goals. Charter had another strong performance against GA, but fell by two goals. In the next game versus Malvern, P.C. prevailed with an 18-9 blow-out victory. Penn Charter played Malvern for the third place spot and won again, this time with the help of senior Alex Willis' six two-point goals, and Atiba Wade's fast counters. The tournament ended with GA in first, Episcopal in second, PC third, and Malvern last.

Led by captains Alex Willis and Tony Dual, the season was an overall success for the water polo team, finishing with a four and six record. Tony led very verbally, while Alex led with behind the scenes examples.

PC - GA

A Friendly Rivalry for the InterAc Championship

It doesn't happen often: the InterAc league championship comes down to the final game of the season between Penn Charter and Germantown Academy, with both teams undefeated and nearly identical records against similar opponents. GA was having a dream year; after numerous seasons near the bottom of the league, they had been led by talented backs Larry Leith, Coley Murphy and Damon Myers to a remarkable season (despite the brawl against Malvern the week before). GA had not beaten the Quakers in 13 years, and their cheering section showed up wearing shirts that said "Enough is Enough". The Quakers had consistently been ranked among the area's top teams, with good reason: star quarterback Mike Samuel, running back Brandon Shepherdson, receivers Mike Sposato & Steve Ley, and a formidable defense had not only forged an undefeated season but a thirteen-game winning streak as well.

Game no. 107

November 13, 1993

The 107th renewal of the nation's oldest continuous scholastic rivalry was to be one for the record books.

The day began with a hard-fought soccer match, tied at 1-1 after some heart-pounding near-misses in overtime (but no Mitch Williams imitations); the tie left the soccer team one win short of a .500 year, a big improvement over last year nonetheless. While Hitch's hot-dog stand was burning the coals, fans and alumni poured on to the oval and the tension was thick (or was it the smoke from the grill?) Whatever, the answer to the riddle of which team would rule the league was soon evident.

Charter used good field position early to score quickly; a nifty, brilliantly conceived onsides kick by Mark "the Shark" McGonagle after the first touchdown set up another score in the first quarter. PC led 12-0 when GA finally scored on a pass from Murphy to Myers to give the GA quarterback the consolation prize of a new city record for TD passes. Mike Samuel went into the game tied with Murphy for the honor, but as coach Gallagher told the Inquirer, Mike does not need to throw TDs to show he is a quality QB. Beside, why throw the ball when the ground game is clicking?

Brandon Shepherdson might be the best-kept secret in local school football, but the InterAc has feared Shep for four years. Rarely has there been a punishing, quick and durable back in such a small package. Shep amassed 344 yards, fourth highest ever in a game in southeastern Pennsylvania, and scored all five PC touchdowns, as GA wanna-be tacklers slid off his hips throughout the day. The game-breaker was a 69-yard burst in the fourth quarter, punctuated by a diving plunge over the goal line to avoid Leith's tackle. Brandon gave credit to his linemen, Herc Grigos, Tim Fullerton, Scott Tippin, Ed Kiefski and Brian Walls, who gave him big blocks all year, as well as strong pass protection for Sammy. For his efforts, Brandon was presented with the second Geis trophy in as many years, as the game's outstanding player.

The victory gave PC a slight edge in the long series, 67-29-11, and a repeat as InterAc champions. Whoop - there it is! Looks like GA can hold on to those shirts for another year.

The 1993 boys varsity basketball team was anchored by a strong group of seniors. Tri-captains Brian "I feel sick" McMahon, Mark McGonagle, and Steve Goodrich provided strong leadership for the Quakers while bench support came from seniors Brian Corbett, Luke Schmidt(head) and Mike Samuel. Juniors Scott Zalben and Shawn "Lang Gwaggey" Peterson rounded out the starting five, and the bench was filled out by the serious boys Steve Ley and Larry Storm with Andrew Fitzpatrick and Quincy Henderson.

The team was favored to win the InterAc title and jumped out to a quick start winning twenty of its first twenty-one games. Highlights from these games included two 27 point performances by Goodrich versus West Catholic and York, and a 24 point game (including six three-pointers) by McGonagle versus York. Along the way the Quakers won the Germantown Community Tournament by defeating Germantown and King.

The Quakers won important non-league games versus Abington Friends and West Catholic before going to Virginia for their Christmas Tournament. Lodged in barracks under a team that ran practice upstairs, and trying to sleep under arctic conditions, the Quakers got little sleep. Yet they managed to brave the living quarters and gourmet cuisine from the Gasthaus to play very well. Despite receiving threats on his life, manager Charlie Hart led the team to four wins including Curtis (NY) and Ferguson (VA). McGonagle and Goodrich were rewarded for their play by being named to the all tournament team; however, McMahon's pre-game antics stole the show. The loudest ovation was for Hart who won the hearts of the crowd and frightened a few cheerleaders as well.

The Quaker's confidence was high, but momentum was slowed by the winter storms.

Snow days resulted in three cancellations and the postponement of three others. The squad moved through the league by winning its first seven games. A trip to Atlantic City resulted in losses both on the court and off it at "Uncle Tommy's Casino." Hart hit a 30-1 bet at the roulette table and left the big winner.

After a tough league loss to Haverford, the Quakers rebounded and beat the Maggots for at least a share of the league title. They finished the season at CHA where PC went down in a close loss that left them tied for the InterAc title with the Devils.

This year's girls basketball had a successful 13-7 season, and a third place finish in the Inter-Ac. Seven new Catholic schools were added to the challenging schedule, including Archbishop Prendergast, St. Hubert's, Nazareth Academy, Cardinal Dougherty, and Kennedy-Kendrick. Charter lost its first two games in the Prendergast Tournament, but bounced back and won its next five games & the GFS Community Tournament, bringing home the championship for the first time ever. The next big win came against Kennedy-Kendrick for while all five starters fouled out of the game, P.C. still pulled through in the best team effort of the season.

Entering league play the team had high hopes for their first championship. To do this, PC had to beat a very young GA team, and a very experienced Notre Dame team. Unfortunately, the girls did not perform as expected against GA and suffered a tough loss. With easy wins over every other league opponent, Charter needed to beat Notre Dame (the '92-'93 Inter-Ac Champs) in order to create a 3-way tie for first place. Charter outhustled ND in the first quarter, but then fell behind going into halftime. In the second half Charter fought back but the deficit was too large to overcome. Megan Evans produced 18 points and 8 rebounds. Despite the loss, everyone felt good about their efforts. The captains would like to congratulate the team on a great season. Also thanks to Coach Soroka, Mrs. Marabella, Tracie and Trish for all of your help and support. Thanks to seniors Sue Burke, Megan Miller, Carly Lynch, Bridget Greenle, and Meggan Drumm- we'll miss you!

GIRLS BASKETBALL

After years of wallowing in the depths of the InterAc cellar, the boys squash team hoped that this season would see their first league victory in five years. Well, maybe next year.

Under the tutelage of E. Titus Cranch for the second straight season, the team opened up with close losses against Shipley and Lawrenceville before rebounding to defeat Germantown Friends School, Princeton Day School, and Hill School. The InterAc season was unkind to the squad as they were twice beaten handily by Chestnut Hill Academy and Episcopal Academy. The highlight of the year was a heartbreaking 4-3 defeat at the hands of perennial power Haverford School on P.C.'s home courts. Penn Charter's first InterAc victory in the nineties hinged upon the efforts of freshman Arthur Whitman. Although Whitman fought valiantly to tie the match at two games all, he could not gain a fifth game victory and Haverford narrowly escaped a loss.

Junior David Beitchman served as captain and number one player for the entire season, and started the season very well, beating most of the opposing schools' top players. However, sidelined with the chicken pox, he never returned to his strong form towards the end of the schedule.

Playing one spot below Beitchman was senior Mike Z. Levy, who capped off a four year varsity squash career with a strong season marked by his consistently scrappy play.

While two siblings playing for the same varsity team is not a rare occurrence at PC, it is certainly quite remarkable when three do. Freshman Arthur, eighth-grader Nano, and sixth-grader Ziggy were all Whitmans who contributed heavily to the team's several important victories.

Rounding out the top seven were junior Jared Kesselheim, sophomore Peter Liebert, and senior Adam Abel. Kesselheim proved to be the team's most consistent winner, compiling a 10-3 personal record at the sixth position. Liebert, who entered the season tremendously improved over last year, deported himself very admirably. Abel, who shared time with Ziggy at the seventh position, played a key role as a team leader.

The prospects for next year look very good, as Charter will be returning six of the top seven players while other InterAc teams graduate key performers. Not only is the team looking forward to grasping that elusive InterAc win, but they are also tossing around the idea of an InterAc championship.

BOYS SQUASH

Although the Penn Charter girls squash team was only in its second season of league play, it had a very competitive and successful season. The team ended up with an overall record of four wins and six losses and a league record of two wins and six losses. It was a very up and down season, as PC showed domination in two 7-0 victories over Germantown Friends and showed their inexperience in a pair of 5-2 losses to Episcopal.

If this season was any indication, next year's girls squash team will have a good chance at the InterAc title. Inexperience was a problem this year, but all members of the team are returning next season, including junior Stephanie Teaford. This will give PC a leg up on its competition.

Teaford went undefeated at her number one position on the team's ladder and provided leadership for the young team. Laurie Sykes, playing number two, was one game away from obtaining her second consecutive undefeated season, but had a heart-wrenching loss in her last match against Agnes Irwin.

Lana Eisenstein clinched the team's first InterAc win with a close five game victory over her number three counterpart from Shipley. Whitney Farnum, Leigh Seyfert, Virginia Brown, and Lindsey Coleman, playing numbers four through seven respectively, all played significant roles in the 1993-1994 season.

Steph Teaford, Laurie Sykes

With two new coaches for the season, Philadelphia Area A-level player, Dawn Friedly and Penn Charter parent Mary Coleman, PC was showed a winning attitude and the players have matured. The team was much more complete this year than it was in its rookie season and will look to improve in the future.

Eventually every team has a year of rebuilding. After losing ten very successful swimmers to graduation, the once-mighty swim team used this season to rebuild. Despite the leadership of Coach Charlie Brown and Captain Reza Alavi the team ended up with a record of more losses than wins.

Season highlights included winning at least eight of eleven events in every meet, and while the league record was weak, Charter managed to place higher than every InterAc team in the Eastern Championships at LaSalle. This year's team was very strong at the top; however, it lacked depth. Juniors Atiba Wade, Brian Walters, and Tony Dual each went undefeated throughout the entire season, yet with only 12 swimmers, the boys team had problems in winning the meets.

Despite the team's record, several swimmers reached many individual best times, including Atiba Wade who broke the school record in the 100 breast-stroke. The swimmers have raced with determination and a positive attitude - an attitude on which opposing coaches have made comments. Strong and upcoming swimmers such as sophomores Jay VanSciver, Jamie Shacklett, Neil Begley, and Jesse Watters should not go unrecognized. Also pivotal were the contributions of seniors Reza Alavi and Ed Morris, both of whom gave their all throughout this season, and who always showed a never-give-up attitude. The 1993-1994 swimming team would like to thank coach Charlie Brown and assistant coach Chris Wilson for all of their help. The seniors would like to wish next year's captains Brian Walters, Atiba Wade, and Tony Dual the best of luck.

This year's girls swimming team had a good season, despite the loss of last year's captains Jen Baran and Alyson Evans. Taking over as this year's captains were Cinda Merrill and Chris Manley. The duo provided leadership for the young team and with both coming back next year, the team will look to be back among the InterAc leaders. The team finished 2-2 in InterAc play showing their mettle in a blow-out defeat of Agnes Irwin and a hard fought victory over Baldwin. In the Baldwin meet, sophomore Steph Petro won both the 200 and 500 free-style events. Against Agnes Irwin, Jeannine Wiley won the 200 and 100 fly while eighth grader Giana Natali won the 50. The team made a fine effort against perennial power-house GA. In a close meet versus Central, which the team won 90-80, sophomore Traci Mainer cruised to a victory in the 200 intermediate and 100 back. Cinda Merrill also had a good meet by winning the 100 breast, which has proved to be her strongest event.

The team finished third overall in the InterAc and fifth at Easterns Inter-Scholastic Championship held at LaSalle

GIRLS SWIMMING

front (l-r): H. Levy, J. Kittredge, E. Rassman, K. Sullivan, C. Ragnow; second: R. Hitschler, P. Chung, E. McGinley, T. Scott, R. Lee, C. Sumter, C. Hitschler; back: Mr. Erdmanis, D. Leaser, P. Hayes, J. Goldblum, A. Comerota, S. Sclaroff, Mr. Hitschler, J. Shelly

Practice. Match. Practice. Tournament. Practice. Snow. More Snow...that schedule fairly epitomized the chaos of this year's wrestling program. Because of snow cancellations, the team missed dual meets with Friends Central, Germantown Friends, Hill, and Plumstead Christian. The Valley Forge Tournament and the infamous "Red Flag Day" also were missed due to weather.

The team was led by senior captain Howie Levy at 160 pounds and senior Kevin Sullivan at 119 pounds. The team was bolstered by the presence of junior starters Anthony Comerota (145), Chris Ragnow (140), Tom Scott (152), and Josh Goldblum (171). Sophomores Eric Rassman and Paul Chung also made important contributions to the team. The presence of senior Ed McGinley as well as the belated arrival of fellow senior Jon Kittredge added much needed support to the thin line-up.

The team took its bruises in early matches against Westtown and the Academy of the New Church, as well as in early league losses to Malvern and Germantown Academy. However, the first half of the season was not without its highlights as Howie Levy advanced to the Radnor Holiday Tournament finals and won the Friends Tournament for the third consecutive year, being named the Tournament's outstanding wrestler. Rob

Lee also had a good Tournament placing third in his weight class.

The climax of the year undoubtedly had to be the league victory over CHA. Overcoming a quick twelve point hole, the team roared back with a decision by Sullivan at 119 and consecutive pins at 125 and 130 by Rob Lee and Paul Chung respectively. The team took a lead that would not be relinquished.

PAPSIWT, the annual end of season tournament, was a disappointment for most of the team, especially the seniors. Anthony Comerota took a surprising fifth place in the 145 pound weight class and will look to move further up on the podium next year. With many young wrestlers such as freshmen Chris Baran, Chris Sumter, Peter Hayes, and John Zimmers, the future looks bright, or at least brighter, than the present.

For now, good luck from the seniors, who will be thinking about you poor underclassmen next year while we eat as many donuts, cookies and pieces of cake as we feel like.

Is the room done yet?...Why does Hitch look like Wilfred Brimley?... "Uh Hitch, I forgot my bag"... Sherri, please knock first... Central, put your hands down... Eric, how does someone so small do something like that?... Chung vs. Kennet, Kitty vs. Arcuri, McGinley vs. Walbe... Ed's car is spread across 202... Patrick, please don't play with your father's stitches... Sherri+Chris, Jeff, Chris again, Ted... Is the room done yet?... AWOL (R.W., M.R., G.G.)... Tom's hair... Ragnow still hasn't picked his head up... But hey, we did beat CHA!

Ad lib: Ed Morris is so _____ (adj.) that everytime I see him I just want to _____ (verb). My most memorable moment with Ed was when _____ (descriptive moment). Overall Ed is a good guy; but I didn't appreciate it when _____ (time when you didn't appreciate me). Ed is a good athlete and I wish I could be in his shoes when he _____ (time when you envied my athletic prowess). It was funny when he stayed at Uncle Russ's and he _____ (something I did at Uncle Russ's). I can't believe Ed Morris didn't _____ (thing I didn't do) before he graduated. I'll miss Ed because he is _____, and _____, and _____.

Comes The Dawn
After awhile you learn the subtle differences between holding a hand and chaining a soul. And you learn that love doesn't mean security, and you begin to learn that presents aren't contracts. And you begin to accept your defeats with your head up and your eyes open, with the grace of a woman, not the grief of a child. And you learn to build all your roads on today because tomorrow's ground is too uncertain, and futures have a way of falling down in midflight. After awhile you learn that even sunshine burns if you get too much. So you plant your own garden, and decorate your own soul, instead of waiting for someone to bring you flowers. And you learn that you really can endure... that you really are strong, and you really do have worth. And you learn and learn, with every goodbye you learn.

Mom and Dad— God knew what He was doing when he gave me to you. I could not have asked for more supporting and loving parents. I know sometimes I haven't made it easy for you, but you stood by me and loved me even more. You are my best friends and you have always been able to make me feel better under any circumstances. And even when you couldn't make me feel better, you would hold me until all the tears had fallen. To simply say, "Thank You" could never be enough, but now it is all that I can offer along with what I've become. I hope I've made you proud because I will always be proud to call you my "Mom and Dad." I Love You.

What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming

KA- I am your king!

P1- Well, I didn't vote for you.

KA- You don't vote for kings!

P1- Well, how'd you become king then?

KA- The Lady of the Lake, her arm clad in the purest shimmering saymite, held aloft Excaliber from the bosom of the water, signifying by divine providence that I, Arthur, was to carry Excaliber. That is why I am your King!

Peasant # 2- Listen, strange women in ponds distributing swords is no basis for a system of government! Supreme executive power derives from a mandate from the masses, not from some farcical aquatic ceremony!

KA- Be quiet!

P2- You can't expect to wield supreme executive power just because some watery tart threw a sword at you.

KA- Shut up!

P2- I mean, if I went 'round saying I was an emperor, just because some moistened bink had lobbed a scimitar at me, they'd put me away!

Trapped, confined, denied
I must break free,
I must see the next sun rise.

In these confines I am lost,
my mind is leaving me
and my heart is chasing it.

Shackled and tortured.
Just set my heart free
You have my body to torture, no more.

Do not torment me with the sun,
Let it shine and set my mind free
Forever, now do not stop me.

The stones are cast
But at Last
My heart can go
And find my mind

Down so low I'm on the rise
Nothing can stop me but memories
And what are memories but the past
The past is failing to show the future

but never shall it hinder me.

This is what will come to be my "senior page" for the book that is the legacy of the William Penn Charter School class of 1994. Not for me is the average memory blurb and baby picture combination. For the past thirteen years, this place and these people have sadly constituted the major portion of the collection of mistakes, misfortunes, and maltreatments that I call my life. For all the intolerance, incompetence, insults, and idiocy, I feel that I owe O. P. C. something special. My senior page is a compilation of all the bitter, pessimistic, infuriated or otherwise negative quotes that I feel are an appropriate approximation of my emotions towards this school. There are no adorable family photos, no fond reminiscences of false good times. Instead, I leave to the class record a page of writing only, condemning this pitiful society in general and this mindless, hypocritical, totalitarian institution specifically. Call it my way of saying, "Thank you."

"I don't like anyone anymore there are a few I still enjoy hanging out with, but on the whole I contain an all-pervasive hatred for all human life we are capable of nothing the human species is a literal virus, infecting the planet with parasitic offspring, feeding off the earth until the earth dies what good have we created medicine to further our destructive lifespan inventions to clean oil spills - that we spilled roads to suffocate the earth so we can travel travel to where where are we going?" G. Manaugh... "This is the first day of my last days I built it up now I take it apart climbed up real high now fall down real far no need for me to stay the last thing left I just threw it away I put my faith in God and my trust in you now there's nothing more ... I could do wish there was something real wish there was something true wish there was something real in this world full of you I'm the one without a soul I'm the one with this big hole no new tale to tell seventeen years on my way to Hell gotta listen to your big time hard line bad luck list don't think you're having all the fun you know me I hate everyone ... want to turn back but I can't ... Perfect little dream the kind that hurts the most forgot how it feels well almost no one to blame always the same wake up in flames it took you to make me realize it took you to make me see the light smashed up my sanity smashed up integrity smashed up what I believed in smashed up what's left of me smashed up my everything smashed up all that was true gonna smash myself to pieces I don't know what else to do covered in hope and vaseline still cannot fix this broken machine watching the hole it used to be mine just watching it burn in my sweet systematic decline of the trust I will betray give it to me I throw it away after everything I've done I hate myself for what I've become I tried I gave up throw it away ... Gave up trying to figure it out my head got lost along the way everybody's still slipping away but it doesn't matter anymore look through these blackened eyes you'll see ten thousand lies ... Hey God why are you doing this to me am I not living up to what I'm supposed to be hey God why am I seething with this animosity hey God I think you owe me a great big apology terrible lie hey God I really don't know what you mean seems like salvation comes only in our dreams I feel my hatred grow all the more extreme hey God can this world really be as sad as it seems terrible lie hey God there's nothing left for me to hide I lost my ignorance security and pride I'm all alone in a world you must despise hey God I believed the promises the promises and lies terrible lie you made me throw it all away my morals left to decay how many you betray you've taken everything hey God I really don't know who I am in this world ... I used to be so big and strong I used to know my right from wrong I used to never be afraid I used to be somebody I used to have something inside now just this hole that's open wide I used to be somebody. I'll cross my heart I'll hope to die but the needle's already in my eye and the world's weight is on my back and I don't even know why and what I used to think was me is just a fading memory I looked him right in the eye and said, "Goodbye." I was up above it now I'm down in it ... In this place it seems like such a shame and though it all looks different now I know it's still the same everywhere I look you're all I see just a fading reminder of who I used to be to come on tell me you make this all go away I'm down to just one thing and I'm starting to scare myself make this all go away I just want something I can never have think I know what you meant that night on my bed still picking at this scab I wish you were dead ... Just when everything was making sense you took away all my self confidence now all that I've been hearing must be true I guess I'm not the only boy for you but that's what I get how could you turn me into this after you just taught me how to kiss you I told you I'd never say goodbye now I'm slipping on the tears you made me cry but that's what I get why does it come as a surprise to think that I was so naive maybe didn't mean so much but it meant everything to me." After missing half of the 92-93 school year, Mr. Cooper died of A.I.D.S. related causes. His death was not only a sudden loss to his close friends and family, but to the whole Penn Charter community.

Chuck Cooper

Although Coop was known for his incredibly short work days, his presence in the halls was always noticed. Whether he was yelling at you for something you did, or whether he was yelling at you for something you didn't do, there was no way to win an argument with Coop. He always viewed life in his own, special way. Coop had an opinion on everything from his methods on winning at the slot machines to the length of the school day, and many class periods were spent discussing them.

If you ever had Coop for Spanish, you know that he was the only teacher who could teach you so much without ever giving you a passing grade. He was by far the best Spanish teacher I ever had. I don't know whether it was the compositions that he never gave back or the 30's and 40's he put on our quizzes, but I know that after a year of Coop one would always know more about life than ever before.

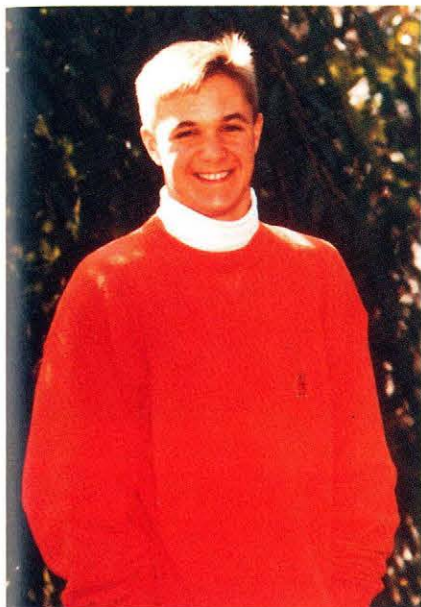

As I wrote Coop's yearbook blurb last year, I had no idea that I would be writing his memorial this year. I must say, it is hard to put all the memories, love and laughs into words. He was in a word, "Coop." The name says it all. "El Teror Negro" will certainly be missed by all of his "chicos." I still can't walk by the Language section of the building without seeing Coop's face screaming, "Hey boy! Don't make me come over there!" On behalf of the class of 1994, I send my regards to all of Coop's friends and family.

Sincerely,
Reza Alavi

"Boy, if you know what's good for you, you'll get that camera outta here!"

Jamie Rogers

When Jamie came to Penn Charter in ninth grade, no one really took notice of his face among the many new students who had entered the Upper School. Although not the most outgoing person, he still managed to make friends effortlessly. Perhaps it was his laid-back disposition, his unassuming manner, the perpetual smile on his face or his constant laughter. He taught us not to take all of life's problems too seriously- to work hard but to enjoy life as well. Most importantly, he made it clear that a good friend, someone you could always talk to and trust, was just a "Hey dude" away.

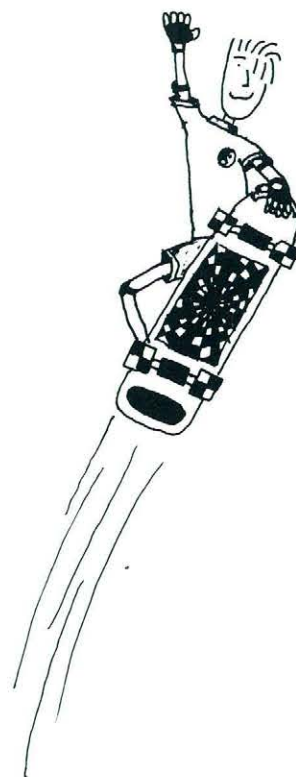

As time went by, Jamie revealed not only his ability to make light of any situation, but his desire to make everyone's day more fun. Never above using himself as the butt of his own jokes, Jamie made everyone feel better about their own problems. Jamie was a gift of lighthearted spirit, a breath of whimsy amid the realities of school life. The class of 1994 and indeed all of Penn Charter sorely miss him, but are grateful for the little piece of himself he left in all of us.

"I'm glad, glad I didn't know the way that things would end
The way that things would go. Our lives are better left to chance.
I could have missed the pain, But I'd have had to miss the dance."

Garth Brooks, "The Dance"

"The tide recedes but leaves behind bright seashells on the sand, The sun goes down, but gentle warmth still lingers on the land, The music stops, and yet it echoes on in sweet refrains...for every joy that passes,
Something beautiful remains."

O.M. Winter

Old Man Winter

Bridget Greenle: Bridget married Kenny Bridges specifically for his last name, and kept it, even after he became Taz Doggy Dog. She now manufactures his rap clothing under the label: "Bridget Bridges' Britches."

Ken Bridges: After landing a "phat" DJ job in Maui, Kenny moved in with his long-lost relatives in Honolulu. Impressed with his "dope" rhymes, 'Das You !! Records offered him a one-record contract. He triumphantly returned to Lafayette Hill and became a Gangsta Rapper. He is now known as Taz Doggy Dog.

Asha Brown: Asha married Garth Brooks and has gone on to be a country music star in her own right. Her top song, "I Will Rise" instantly went platinum.

Rich Demarco and Jon McLaughlin: These two made the Olympic trials in bar hopping (according to the P.C. alumni magazine, the high-jump bar). In their spare time they have been hired by the athletic department at P.C. to teach the course entitled "Coping With Classmates Who Could Be Your Children."

Andrew Duffy: After taking Real World Math in the spring, Duff decided to major in statistics at Notre Dame. He used his new found knowledge to become the premier bookmaker in Southampton.

Elicia Kelly: Due to the many things that Elicia had done to her hair in the first twenty years of her life, she suffered from premature hair loss. By junior year of college, she was completely bald. She went to Carla's hair weave shop and bought the same model that Jen Lowe wore in eighth grade.

Chris Leube and Alex Willis: After college, Willis and Leube joined Cypress Hill, but realized the violence and anarchy that the group promotes was senseless. Now they tour the country giving anti-drug lectures, and in their spare time they perform with "Shakespeare in the Park."

Aliya Whitney: Following in the footsteps of her mentor, Mr. Dover, Aliya became the Dean of Students at Camden High. She cleaned up the school in the same way that "Crazy" Joe Clark did in "Lean on Me." The sequel, "Don't Lean on Me," is based on Aliya's inspiring story and stars Thelma of "Good Times" fame.

Megg Drumm: After Megg turned 30, she discovered the formula for gaining weight. Unfortunately, she ingested too much, and grew to 250 pounds and became a Sumo wrestler in desperation. After losing her first thirty matches, she gave up and began to sell camera equipment, specializing in tripods.

Jon Kittredge: Jon was on a pace to become the all-time greatest money winner on Jeopardy, but bet all of his winnings in Final Jeopardy (ala Cliff Claven), lost, and snapped. The answer was "Does anybody want a tic-tac?" and Jon drew a blank, even though everyone else knew that these were Chris Stansfield's final words.

Sanjeev Swami: Sanjeev actually mathematically determined the meaning of life. The correct answer turned out to be 3, and it simply came to him out of nowhere. Unfortunately for him, the day he tried to deliver the information, Stansfield gunned him down.

Reid Buerger: Reid ran for President of the United States under the campaign slogan, "Why stop now?" Unfortunately he squandered all of his campaign funds gambling in Atlantic City casinos. He now lives in a state of depression and spends all of his days playing Poker with Karla in Winky's "back room."

Brian McMahon:

After waiting for his partner Fitz to graduate, the team moved to Compton where they have become roadies for Taz Doggy Dog, while selling Starter jackets on the side.

CLASS OF '94 PROPHECIES:

Ed Morris: Eddie developed such an ego about his jumping skills that he actually dunked himself one day. Sadly, his head and Afro-pic became lodged in the net, and to this day, all attempts to remove him have been unsuccessful.

Dave Sirota: After Dave suffered his 10th heart attack and 19th nervous breakdown while working as a journalist for the New York Times, he moved to Tegucigalpa and now lives a relaxing life selling "chess". He welcomes his customers with cries of, "Hey, How yadoin! Yah!"

Aaron Finkle: Fink fulfills his life long dream and creates "Finkle Toys Inc." He organically grows all of his toys with a special lamp. He teamed up with his old buddy Aaron Platt and made the live action version of "Beavis and Butthead, ah huh huh, huh huh."

Liz Cohen and Jill Rippert: Liz and Jill were "discovered" in a mall, and given the break of their lives. They now host their own show on Cable Access-Channel 61, "Coffee Talk," where they are paid to gossip.

Chris Stansfield: Stans finally got his revenge on society by attempting to assassinate Presidential candidate Buerger while exclaiming "Would anyone like a tic-tac?" Unfortunately for him he was only wearing one contact lens and missed his target. However, he still managed to complete the scene with a rousing rendition of "New York, New York," but was promptly tomatoed off the stage.

Mike Samuel and Brandon Sheperdson: After falling in love with each other during the Senior Prom, they ditched their dates in the bathroom, and flew to Las Vegas to get married. In his spare time, Mike now crochets shag rugs, bakes casseroles, and enjoys tending to his Chia pet. Brandon is satisfied with being the man of the house.

Matt Ramer: Matt became a manic depressive after the world realized that he was actually hiding a big fleshy bald spot under his Keepah. He now roams the streets of Cherry Hill at night moaning the word "click" because he believes he is a camera. Every morning he flees from the sun, for fear of exposing his film.

Mark Eastburn: The SPCA finally caught on to Mark's illegal reptilian petting zoo conspiracy, and came to arrest him. However when they came to the house to take him away, all they found was a lizard with indigestion (BURP!), and the remains of Mark's pantleg.

Adam Abel: Adam finally realized that his keen knack for asking questions could be useful. He invented a game show called "Wait, I don't get it?", modeled after Jeopardy where the contestants only ask questions but never answer them.

Jon Wolko: Jon auditioned for Adam's new game show when he saw a "Help Wanted" ad asking for "a tall, leggy blond with lots of personality." He changed his name to Vanna Wolko, and his job now encompasses turning the question panels, showing leg, and humoring Adam by laughing at his jokes.

Adam Goldberg: Adam Goldberg scored his first Hollywood movie deal called "The Boy who Runs Into Trees and Passes Out In the Snow." It flopped, and he now films teenage parties full time with his "Jenkintown Hot-Tubs" film company.

Sasha Roth and Sharon Blaskey: The couple married after an eight-year engagement. Although Sasha boasts to his friends about shattering Wilt Chamberlain's record, Sharon remains faithful to him and recently commented, "I'm so proud of him."

Emmy Mirsky: Both members of the Jenkintown police force enjoyed Emmy's last shindig so much that they moved their headquarters into her den.

"WE ALWAYS KNEW
WE'D MAKE IT
(JUST NOT LIKE THIS)"

Brian Corbett: Brian successfully graduated summa cum laude from Notre Dame in two years with a BA in Celtic literature, a BS in ornithology, and a specially created degree in "Common Sense." He also provided the voice for Abu the monkey in "Alladin 2: The Missing Link."

Carly Lynch: Carly got so fed up with East Coast life that she moved to California. She bought a secluded house in the middle of Death Valley, and now she can finally read in peace and quiet, without Dr. Barber's interruptions.

Dave Kim: Dave Kim became the CEO of the Coca-Cola Bottling company but was fired after the stock began to mysteriously disappear. Rumor has it, (as featured on "Coffee Talk") that he now aimlessly roams the earth in a constant search for his stolen stereo. He was last spotted in Walla Walla feasting on prime rib.

Aliza Goren: Aliza accomplished everything humanly possible before age 30. Having nothing left to occupy her time, she spent the rest of her life in Tibet tending to a yak farm with the Dalai Lama.

Garry Ball: Garry conned enough investors to help him raise money for America's first coed-naked ski resort and leisure center, named "Graceland," where he would be Head of Resort.

Aaron Rubin: Rubes opened a chain of show bars along the East coast named "Red-Beard Rubin's Rubies." Eighty percent of the total income "came" directly from Aaron's own pocket, resulting in the company's collapse.

Mike C. Levy: Mike got his dream offer to become a T.V. and movie critic, but not surprisingly slept through the interview. When the job was given to someone else, he went insane. He now thinks his house is the holodeck, and he pretends that he is an amalgamation of the Man in Black, Jean-Luc Picard, and the Highlander waiting for the Quickening. When asked if he is successful, he bellows with a drooling grin, "Engage....To the pain...There can be only one!"

Dateline 2024:
Goodrich cut down to size!
Star center loses "two feet"!!

Steve Goodrich: So frustrated from "tall jokes", Steve cut off his legs at the knees. He can now be seen putting fraudulent tickets on cars at the corner of 13th and Samson. He has also been ticketed for bothering pedestrians with his constant yells of "So what's up?" and "I wish."

Meg Miller and Jen Gallagher: Meg and Jen are employed by Adam Goldberg's entertainment and film company, and their specialty is working at pool parties. After every workday, their parents ground them for the night.

Rob Davis: Rob became a science fiction novelist, and scored a major hit with "The Thing that Devoured the World." After this success, Rob decided to make a real contribution to literature as a romance novelist. His pen-name is Herbert Restases, and he is often found playing pinochle with Fabio.

Ed Kiefski: Ed was so inspired by Rob's fluid prose that he decided to become "The Thing." He ate the world. Unsatisfied with this accomplishment, he now moonlights as a ballerina, and still devours small civilizations for pure chewing satisfaction.

Dave Cherkas: Dave opened a store that sells Jewish hair products called "Dave's Deluxe Doos." In an attempt to be cordial to his female customers, he started telling them his infamous Thursday morning stories and since then business, in and out of the store, has tripled.

Meg McDonald: After Meg left Mark for the seventeenth time, she finally dumped him for good to start a charm school called "Mademoiselle McDonald's House of Etiquette." The school's mantra, to be repeated by students numerous times daily, is "Sorry 'bout you."

Denise Friedland: Denise hires her Dad's friend to work at her Auto & Wrecking shop. She also has a very successful photography career with John Trager, but wants to move back to her roots at Penn Charter as the successor to Mr. Granger in the Film Department.

Sam Mink: Sam was found to be Richard Simmon's illegitimate son, however, unlike his father, Sam became a manly lumberjack and the first Olympic Gold Medalist in Caber Tossing. Then he became the President of the NRA, but every once in a while, he still pops in a tape of his Dad and sweats to the oldies.

Justin Kaufman: Due to his quiet nature, in college Justin majored in sign language, and eventually went on to become a gastroenterologist, but just don't ask him to show you the sign language symbol for a proctological exam. To this day he has never missed a tee time.

Lisa Slowik: Lisa's charm and affinity for talking to people landed her her own talk show deal. She now regularly beats out Jill and Liz's "Coffee Talk" and Oprah in ratings, and according to People magazine she is now the richest woman in America.

Luke Schmidt: Surgeon General Schmidt runs a comprehensive anti-alcohol campaign called, "Don't be goofy!" He now serves as the seventh man for a team in the Capitol Hill Basketball League, and regularly dunks on Al Gore.

Jason Winig: Jason pioneered the new high school courses AP Ethics and AP Art of Caring. He credits Mr. Kashatus as his "mentor" and often applauds him in Friends Meeting.

Mark McGonagle: After graduation, Shark moved in with Meg McDonald but continuously tells his parents that he is sleeping over at Mike's house.

Jessica Haaz and Steve Josselson: Because of Jessica's striking resemblance to the nosy and intellectual Carol Seaver on "Growing Pains" she was cast to play this part in the spin-off, "Woe-ing Pains," because of her unique whining ability. Steve became a successful television and movie producer, but lost all of his money on hiring the elusive Jessica. In a quick "spurt" of genius, to raise funds, he went back to his family and asked them to throw him a Second Bar Mitzvah.

Tim O'Donnell and Nick Cottone: Tim and Nick spent so much time around each other that they melded into one being known as "Nim." Because of this cruel deformity of nature, they are now working in Todd Smith's Freakshop along with Jay Donahue, Garry Strong, Max Baskin, and Simaron Singh.

Debi Gordon and Sarah Trager: These two also melded into one person, commonly known as Sebi Trordon. Two years later, on the circus side-show tour, they met Nim and fell madly in love with him. The couple have 4...or 8 children and reside with Nim's parents in Roxborough.

Chris DiMarco: Chris, denying his ethnicity, became the commissioner of the Jewish Basketball League. He changed his name from Christian DiMarco to Jewish DiMarcowitz.

Dateline 2034:
Star gazing
Josselson has
2nd Bar
Mitzvah!!

Jon Bean: Because of all of Beaner's concussions he decided to go through an intelligence enhancement experiment that Jonn Klein was advertising, similar to that in "Flowers for Algernon." Unfortunately for Beaner, Klein did not know when to stop the process, and Bean's head swelled to the size of a pumpkin. Due to this, he is often mistaken for Jeff Bruno, and now when he gets hit in the head with baseballs he exclaims "I'm unconscious!"

Jonn Klein: While performing a routine neurosurgical procedure on Jon Bean, Jonn had an out-of-leather experience and saw Satan. To Jonn's surprise, the terrified Satan offered him the Freakshop's business card. He left his palatial Beverly Hills estate and is now a live-in at The Shop.

Carla Natali: Carla never managed to get back with DiGiacomo or PJ so she married her hair brush. She then attended "Gordon Phillips Beauty Academy" for seven years where she earned her Masters degree in hair weaves. Jen Lowe is her most frequent customer.

Matt Scherneck and Dermot Kurtz: Whiz-kid producer Steve Josselson decided to cast a new series, "Head of The Class: The College Years." Matt happily accepted the part of Arvid and used his stardom to finally capture the heart of long-time crush Steph Coleman. He then co-starred with Howie as Roger Thomas on "What's Really Happenin' Now?" Dermot was cast as "the rebel" Eric, but his Jeep broke down on the way to the first rehearsal and he was fired. Instead of acting, he found a way to use his artistic ability to make money and began to make sand paintings in Bujumbura, Burundi. As soon as he finished his first masterpiece, Burundi was overcome by a two-month sandstorm, and now he is permanently dusted.

Kevin Sullivan: Sully became Howie's tag team partner, unfortunately they fought with each other more than with their opponents. After being expelled from the league for anabolic steroid use, he then joined the South Side of Chicago gang, the "Vice Lords." He now goes by the name of "Grand Poobah Sull-Dog," or "Big Daddy Dawg."

Howie Levy: Howie became a professional midget wrestler going by the name "Willow the Warrior." After his teammate Kevin was expelled from the league, Howie then went on to star in the hit T.V. show "What's Really Happenin' Now?" He was fired from the show after a much publicized harassment case involving "Shirley the Waitress."

The Empire Strikes Out!

Neal Mitra: Neal was offered the role of the android C3P0 in the latest Star Wars sequel, produced by Steve Josselson. He initially turned down the role, complaining of type casting. However, after a failed career as a cantor in DiMarcowitz's synagogue, Neal reluctantly accepted the part.

Mike Z. Levy: Mike teamed up with Neal as R2D2 in the film. This proved successful, as he could now spend all of his time in space, and could beep incoherently without being ridiculed. He still plays squash with his old coaching pal "Darth" West.

Elliot Jokelson: Elliot grew so much body hair that he was asked to play Chewbacca in the new film, but was so offended that he attacked Josselson with a nicotine patch. He was arrested, and as punishment, was chained to a television that only played re-runs of Liz and Jill's "Coffee Talk."

Reza Alavi: After the producers of Star Wars IV heard of Reza's interest in freshmen girls, they cast him as "Reza the Hutt." He is now constantly attended by twenty dancing girls who see to his every need.

Jen Hillson: Jen is now the director of tourism in her dream state of Virginia. However, tourists now refuse to enter the state, because Jen has been known to ramble on about it for days on end.

Mike Sposato: After being drafted in the 167th round of the Major League Draft, Mike moved to play semi-pro ball in Bangladesh. Since no official stats are kept, he keeps them himself, and although he has a low .200 average he still claims he is always, "hitting it hard".

Ed McGinley: After failing in his 20 year quest to become a cardiothoracic surgeon, Ed joined a disco band in downtown Berlin called "Der Schwarzwalderteufeltotmachers," or something like that. They were later deported to Rydal.

Jamie Pagliaro: Jamie gave up complaining about Clinton and decided to settle down and marry in Spain where he claims that married life "really sucks."

Hafeeza Naba: Hafeeza finally got in touch with her anger and became a singing lute player welcoming tourists to St. Martin. She also is known for her enthusiastic renditions of popular standards on the accordion. She regularly plays at Bar Mitzvahs, weddings, sweet 16 parties, teenage hot tub parties, faculty follies, alumni dinners, and Kwaanza banquets.

1993-94: For Better or Verse

Every year it seems,
This recap is the same
Filled with clichéd words
And phrases simply lame
Thus I propose
To write something with zest
I feel that it's needed
I feel that it's best
So here I go
I'll try something new:
93-94,
The year in review.

The worst-to-first Phillies
How could we forget?
There was Lenny, and Krukner
They played at the Vet
So exciting was the season
So successful was the team
That when they made the World Series
We all had to scream,
"What's with these guys?
They all look crazy and nuts!
What's with their beards
They have such fat guts!!"
Can they win with that pitching?
the critics screamed nays,
But hey! Curt Schilling Game 1
10 Ks!

In the end it was clear
it would come down to this:
Carter versus Wild Thing
Joe vs. Mitch.
And when #99
Let go of the ball
We Philadelphians held our breath and looked away at the wall.
But, alas, that slow pitch
Was the end of their fling
Joe Carter - homerun
The Phillies - no ring.

Enough with the baseball,
What about other sports?
What about Nancy,
think her knee still hurts?
Gilooly hired a klutz
To stop Nancy's triple lutz
Tonya's ex husband:
What a story! What hype!
In the end it was Kerrigan,
Sporting a medal and a smile
And Harding, alas
Went home for the trial.

What about football
what happened at the 'Bowl?
It was 'boys versus Bills,
Dallas again, did roll.
Another blow out
Yes, the Bills sure did turn green
Final score Dallas 30, Buffalo 13.

Football was nice,
But in the world of sports,
Other stuff happened
More important things, of sorts.
How about Jordan?
He may have been the best,
Yep, he hung up his Nikes
He gave it a rest.
But he's not done yet,
at least not done with

sports,
he tried on a baseball uni &
put away the shorts.
Then there was tragedy
Death struck in waves
Reggie Lewis fell to a heart attack
Arthur Ashe to AIDS.

All right with the sports!
It's certainly enough!
Now onto other things,
How about government stuff!
The Handshake of Peace
as it will be known,
from a sunny D.C.
Will the Mideast change its tone?
The PLO's Arafat
Israel's Rabin
They met in Washington,
an event never seen.
It was early September
Three former presidents were there

Bill Clinton stood by as the two enemies cleared the air.
They signed a treaty,
they agreed to pursue peace,
In the White House Rose Garden,
It was a historical lease.

Sure peace seemed easy
on that day
But not for other places
much farther away.
In Sarajevo & Bosnia
200,000 were lost

The ethnic wars
 Proved a terrible cost.
 Serbs fight Muslims
 The Croats against them all
 The Former Yugoslavia
 engaged in one bloody brawl.

Then there was Somalia
 Mogadishu covered with mortar
 The UN came in
 To restore order.
 A man named Aidid
 Seemingly weak,
 Gave the US army
 Quite a defeat.

What about Russia,
 our new-found friend?
 Were they coming around the democratic bend?
 For a time it looked
 As if they were there
 But in September
 The tempers did flare.
 Disband the legislature,
 Yeltsin did try
 But Communist Hardliners
 Remained inside.
 Thus tanks were called in
 They would not to fail,
 They fired on the building;
 The Russian President would prevail.

So, this year foreign policy,
 Got much of the glory,
 But to be honest, folks,
 That's not the whole story.
 Disasters, to be sure
 Showed their power
 With catastrophe upon catastrophe making many cringe and cower.

First there was the flood
 Across the midwestern
 plains,
 Displacing families,
 Causing a great deal of pain.
 Then the derailment-
 The Amtrak crash?
 47 people
 Died in a flash.

And don't you remember
 The twin towers scene?
 Sheik Omar Abdel Rahman
 Played dirty, played mean.
 He plotted and planned
 From his mosque in New York City,
 The resulting explosion
 Was definitely not pretty.

California, California,
 What can I say?
 It was a turbulent year-
 No more disasters I pray!
 At the beginning there were fires
 Sweeping all around,
 A billion dollars in damage
 Over a thousand homes burned down.
 Then there was the earthquake,
 6.6 on the scale to be exact,
 61 dead, Los Angeles on its back.

OK with disasters!,
 They are making me sad,
 How about Health Care reform -
 Aw, that was just as bad!
 Yes, the First Lady
 She was the doctors' problem,
 Her name was so long
 With that stupid "Rodham"!
 Universal coverage,
 The phrase was not rare,
 As the President and his wife
 Promised everyone care.

How about bureaucracy,
 The pet project of the Veep,
 He promised to cut -
 Make our government more cheap.
 Yes the wooden vice prez
 His name was Al Gore
 Reinventing Government
 Was his designated chore.
 Hundreds of thousands of jobs would be cut

Twenty years from now,
 This will seem like old news,
 But remember kids
 This stuff shaped our views.
 It was important when it happened,
 It was part of our life,
 Never forget it, mind you,
 All the happiness and strife.
 From war to peace
 From finish to start,
 The year just described,
 Let it remain in our heart.

FROM WORLD EVENTS TO OUR CAMPUS

When we returned to school in September, '93 we were greeted by a new director of the upper school, Ms. Glascott, whom we thought only liked middle schoolers. Not that we were complaining, mind you. It was easy to get used to Ms. Glascott compared to getting used to the new schedule (what lunatic came up with this great idea?). No longer could we count on getting out of a lab at the end of a day for a sports dismissal; now the labs were in mid-morning, after a (shortened!) short recess, in an incredibly torturous 80-minute block. That wasn't the worst of it; all courses would meet in that block once in a rotation. Now we had seven, not six, days to remember, and no cozy block seven for general goofing-off. However, having two free periods during the day, sometimes consecutively, was a gift we soon learned to appreciate. (The seniors guarded their Stairs well in every block except math.) Once the administration fixed the lunch times the new schedule was bearable; now we need to get back those lost spring break days.

Much has already been said in this book about the harsh winter (part of the Canadian contribution to NAFTA?) making it nearly impossible to imagine that green grass will ever grow again, and giving us a record 12 days closed (more than the Lifers of '94 can recall in their entire PC careers). It does get boring being stuck at home with a myriad of electronic toys and games, plenty of soaps and talkshows to watch, and there's no way anyone would think of opening a book and catching up on lost schoolwork. At least we had some time to make up for the shorter spring break. Too bad the underclasses will have to extend their year in June; the OPC '94 Beach Patrol will be thinking about ya!

We thought that when we came back last September the softball field would have been turned into a big hole in the ground, with foundations and such going up for the new Fieldhouse. Ground was broken on October 14, and by January the steel framework had been lifted into place by a huge crane that kicked us out of the parking lot for a few days, like we didn't have enough problems. The skeleton sat there, freezing and collecting its share of snow, while we wondered if it would still look that way at our first reunion. Anyway, while the seniors won't have the thrill of using the new building, it looks like a space much needed.

With the completion of the Fieldhouse comes the question of what to do with main building space. The school wasted no time in relegating the wrestlers to the pit, so the ever-expanding band program could take over the little gym. Of course, a committee was

Many students and faculty can remember that not so long ago it was impossible to stage anything, a play, a concert, an assembly or even the summer Day Camp, without the assistance of Peter Kishinchand, OPC'91. In the fall of 1993 Peter died of cancer, after a brave and painful struggle, but not before leaving our school and community at large with his considerable gifts of energy, kindness, and optimism. Peter received the school's Service Award before graduating, and matriculated at Occidental College, where he planned to continue the career he began at PC in set design and lighting. Few knew the backstage and rafter catwalks as Peter did; every circuit, every spotlight, every prop were his domain. His technical skill could often be taken for granted by the audience, although the cast and directors of every performance never failed to recognize and thank Peter, but anyone who met him will remember Peter for his soft-spoken and gracious manner, his willingness to be of assistance, and his dedication to his work and those with whom he worked. Peter meant a great deal to his classmates and the other students and teachers who knew him, and was remembered warmly in a memorial service held at school. The Class of 1994 would also like to remember Peter, as an upperclassman who showed us the way when we were younger, who set the standard we hope to reach, and who left a legacy for us and others to emulate.

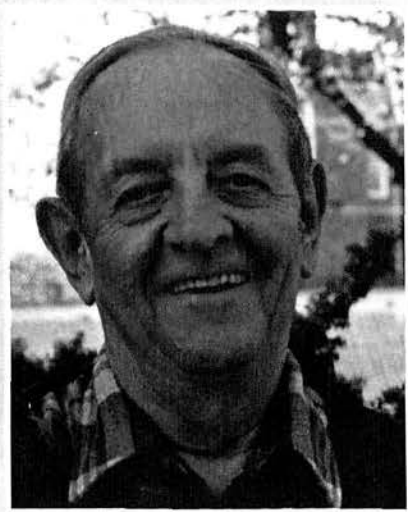

appointed with the dubious name of "Space Study Committee" and charged with looking at the uses of the Rainbow Room, Old Gym, and cafeteria once the Fieldhouse is operational. Diagrams were displayed and suggestions were solicited from teachers and students alike (they asked us for advice?!) and estimates were calculated. The class of '94 doesn't know what the place will look like when we return for our fifth reunion, but we can bet that it won't look much like the school we are leaving.

Speaking of committees, new ones were formed when we were sitting around and thinking about the spring that never arrived. The Student-Faculty Council decided to work on the definition of "honor" and draw up guidelines of what constitutes a breach of conduct with guidelines of how violators might be handled. A committee will sit to review offenses and recommend action. A Worship and Ministry committee has been formed to talk about the uses of Meeting for Worship and ways to improve the spiritual life in the school. There are some optimistic signs that students, faculty and administration are working together to open lines of communication and share concerns about the life of the school.

As the senior class moves toward graduation the realization that we are leaving behind us a vibrant and secure part of our lives descends upon us. While the classes after us will benefit from new construction, improved uses of time, more communication with the authorities and maybe even a decent cafeteria, we take heart that we will have been the last class to have fully enjoyed the Old Bean before he retired. There's no way Schuggie can be replaced, thank God. If he can't find anything to do with all his free time, at least he can think about all those who will miss him. Miss Costello is retiring too, after many years teaching Kindergarten and directing the lower school; quite a few seniors and many other students will remember her fondly as a kind person and a dedicated teacher.

Behind the scenes in a different way from Peter, and for many years, was William Michael Burke, Sr., the superintendant of grounds at PC for over four decades, who died last summer. Mr. Burke lived in the house where he was born, at the corner of the campus beyond the football field, and maintained his family's tradition of caring for the fields and our campus with skill, pride, and a determined loyalty to the people of the school. Bill's father Michael and brother Joseph were part of a tradition that began when PC moved to the current campus at the turn of the century; it is a tradition that continues under Charles Simmons and his staff, of making sure our fields are ready for games and that the physical beauty of the campus is renewed constantly. Bill and his wife Helen have been surrogate parents, uncle & aunt to many alumni (and even a few faculty) over the years, demonstrating through word and deed the values of honesty, hard work, patience and compassion. Whether it was cutting the grass or making sure the busses were running, no job was too small or too burdensome for Bill Burke, if it meant serving the school. May he continue to be remembered every time we see the full panorama of our campus on a warm, sunny summer day.

THE CANDIDATES FOR ENGLISH DEPARTMENT CHAIR

This year the students will also have a large say in the election of the head of the English department. So far, Kramer has been the leader 120,00 votes to 7.

One of the more successful write-in candidates has been the ever-popular "Meat Bomb" seen at the right, out of dress-code (his blubber is untucked). A former All-InterAc wrestler during Hitch's glory days, Kramer may feel a bit intimidated and withdraw from competition in deference to Mr. Bomb.

Advice to a Son

A father sees a son nearing manhood.
What shall he tell that son:
"Life is hard; be steel; be a rock."
And this might stand him for the storms and serve him for humdrum and monotony and guide him amid sudden betrayals and tighten him for slack moments.
"Life is a soft loam; be gentle; go easy."
And this too might serve him.
The growth of a frail flower in a path up has sometimes shattered and split a rock.
A tough will counts. So does desire.
So does a rich soft wanting.
Without rich wanting nothing arrives.
Tell him time as a stuff can be wasted.
Tell him to be alone often and get at himself and above all tell himself no lies about himself whatever the white lies and protective fronts
he may use amongst other people.
Tell him to be different from other people
if it comes natural and easy being different.
"I love you"
said a father.
"I love you for what you are knowing so well what you are.
And I love you more yet, child,
deeper yet than ever, child,
for what you are going to be,
knowing so well you are going far,
knowing your great works are ahead,
ahead and beyond,
yonder and far from over yet."

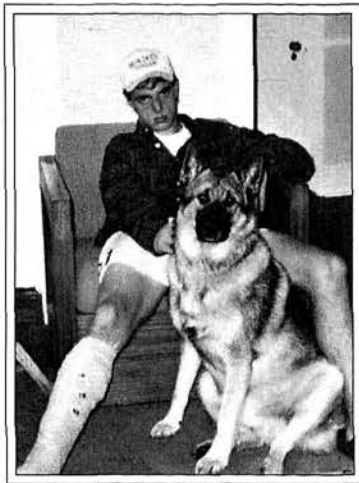

from Carl Sandburg, "The People Yes"

Dear Jason,
You have always been the sunshine in our lives. We love you!
Congratulations and Best Wishes to you and the Class of '94!
Love,
Mom and Dad

With memories of all you've been,
With Pride for all you are,
With hope for all you'll be,
With love for always.

of you!

Sasha,

From compromise and things halfdone,
Keep me with a stern and stubborn pride,
And when at last the fight is won,

Chester's Fiber Crunch.®

*It's the cool
way to do meals*

Internationally renowned chief, Bodé says:
"I love it. I eat it all the time."

From the farmlands of Oklahoma,
Chester's Fiber Crunch is not just that 'purple junk'.

Wink Wilson says "I like it."

A.O. Nipél gives it the thumbs up.

Shelton Jones of the Venison Bushwhackers likes deep sea fishing.

Surgeon General's Warning: Chester's may cause colon, mitochondrial, and rectal damage, sterility or blindness. In laboratory tests, Chester's caused narcolepsy, necrophilia, gigantism, or, if taken in extremes, Siroticism or even Corbettism (irrational drooling fits involving Lou Holtz in a leather teddy). If Chester's is injected into blood stream, it causes pain similar to that induced by Vlad the Impaler. Due to its radioactive properties, Chester's may cause creamy chotal rot. Chester's may cause one to fod, or blorp large chunks of veeze.

F.D.A. Warning: If child under four ingests Chester's Fiber Crunch, induce vomiting with long stick. Chester's may also cause "a quie' kid" to develop a speech improda.

F.B.I. Warning: Chester is wanted in four counties. If you see Chester, do not approach him, he is armed and dangerous. If you know the whereabouts of Chester, call 1-800-GET-CHES. Mel Gibson is not Chester.

A.P. Bio Warning: Chester's will not help you in Dr. Morse's class. Do not bet Adam Snapples that you will get a lower grade than him on the A.P. Exam.

Think upon that moment long ago
One breath away and there you will be
So young and carefree
Again you will see that place in time
So gold.

Steal away into that way back when
You thought that all would last forever
But, like the weather
Nothing can ever and be in time
Stay gold.

Life is but a twinkling of an eye
Yet, filled with sorrow and compassion
Though not imagined
All things that happen will age to old
Though gold.

Reid,

You have always been there for me, giving support and encouragement. We've been through a lot in the past four years and have had many good times and bad. Throughout it all you never gave up on me.

There is not a doubt in my mind of how far you will go and how happy you will be. May all of your extravagant dreams be fulfilled. I wish you all the success in the world. Thank you for everything.

*Love,
Stephanie*

Haec Fabula Docet

A blind man by the name of LaFontaine,
Relying on himself and on his cane,
Came tap-tap-tapping down the village street,
The apogee of human blind conceit.
Now just ahead of him was seen to yawn
A trench where water pipes were laying on.
The blind man might have found it with his ferrule,
But someone overanxious at his peril
Not only warned him with a loud command
But ran against him with a staying hand.
Enraged at what he could but think officious,
The blind man missed him with blows so vicious
He gave his own poor iliac a wrench
And plunged himself headlong into the trench
Where with a speed no less from being grim,
The workmen all turned to and buried him...
The moral is, it hardly need be shown,
All those who try to go it sole alone,
Too proud to be behold for relief,
Are absolutely sure to come to grief.
-Robert Frost

By not heeding the advice that others gave,
The blind found himself an early grave.
A shame he did not have parents as fine
As those, thank God, above, are mine.
For they have taught me listening to advice
Can often save you from a crisis.
-Mike Levy

Matt & Justin,

Congratulations on surviving the year of anguish with the Yahrbuchmeister von dem Teufel. I hope you are happy with the final results; there is much in this book of which to be proud. Your creativity and desire to set new standards made the task easier than it seemed. I know you realize that the rantings and pressure were sometimes necessary, sometimes superfluous. If your classmates (especially those deadbeats) don't appreciate the effort & sacrifices you made on their behalf, they have my sympathy. May you never have another boss like me again.

Burky

Congratulations, Reid!

You're a Great
Brother!!

Love, Grant

THE CLASS RECORD 1994

To The Class of 1994,

Since we are the first Yearbook staff in ages to refrain from using a "riding" or "traveling" metaphor as the theme for the book, we have no witty reference to start this message. We can say, however, that our years here have been enriched by the uniqueness and originality of Mr. Schug. These qualities, along with his endearing sense of humor, are all attributes which mirror the spirit of our class.

In essence, Schuggie's style of teaching is much like our class' style of learning- his job is to teach as our's is to learn, yet just as important to him are the relationships built and the enjoyment to be had within the school environment. We have tried to capture this fun-loving idea with the cartoon renditions of The Old Bean spread throughout this book; besides, is there anyone who looks so much like a cartoon anyway? Years from now, we hope this book will provide memories of the times you have spent here learning, in addition to the friends and fun you had along the way. We thank you for giving us the opportunity to capture this spirit, and for all of your support.
