125 Piet Mondrian Lines Meet Kandinsky Dots, 2 Value: Priceless

Lower El students have been learning about numerous famous artists throughout the year, all of whom have given many valuable ideas to the art world. Color, form, line, shape, texture, value and space are the fundamental techniques artists like Piet Mondrian and Wassily Kandinsky used throughout their careers. Primarily inspired by Kandinsky art, students created tissue paper bullseyes using multiple colors. They then decided on a color to paint their given square. Their bullseyes appear to be melting out of the grid. This bright and colorful framed canvas would be a wonderful addition to any child's room or a pop of color to your current neutral space. Size: 24" x 24".

Minimum Bid: $500.00

Donated By: Children in Ms. Irene and Ms. Erminia's Class

126 Journey through Sound Value: Priceless

In music and art, students were learning about the concept of parts vs whole. They discussed how the world is broken up into continents and those continents are broken into countries, states and cities, and finally to towns and neighborhoods. In art class, Upper Elementary students researched their addresses from their home to Red Oaks on Google Maps. They then took those images and used them to sketch out the lines and roads on a rubber block used for printmaking. Alone, they are individual routes the students take to reach Red Oaks everyday; combined, they are the students that make up our school. These beautiful framed prints would be a wonderful centerpiece in any room.

22"x30" print in a 28x36 frame. (Blue and Orange)

Group A: Andrew Ikhelson, Aarav Jain, Amelia McArthur, Nico Rodriguez Ananin, Ahaan Vaidya, Bella Mintzer, Schuyler Abramson, Arthur Bouchacourt, Catie Clark, Jonah Chirnomas, Erin Crickenberger, Annabelle Elie, Balazs Kontes, Alexa McNutt
