The Anglo-American School of Moscow offers two diploma possibilities to its students. The International Baccalaureate Diploma is a rigorous program of academic study with course requirements often comparable to first year university courses. The AAS Diploma is a college preparatory program that draws from the IB curriculum while giving the student the option of pursuing some subjects at a higher level of study.

We want to ensure that students admitted to our school are counseled and placed appropriately. Given that we have these two diploma programs and that courses are offered at different levels, it is imperative that you are candid and thorough in your response to the following questions:

Is this student following the most academically rigorous program of study at your school?

What, if any, of the student's courses are being modified in any way and/or where, if at all, is the student receiving extra support beyond the classroom to meet any of his or her course expectations?

Is this student receiving any language support for English? If so, please indicate how much time is given for this support and what in particular has been the focus with this candidate.

Where would you place this student's work ethic and study habits in relation to the students you have taught?

Grade 11-12

Please provide an outline of what is studied in the student's math course and provide the name of the text book(s) being used:

If you organize your math classes by ability groups/levels please indicate at what level this student has been placed.

Please provide the current reading list for the student's English course. Indicate which texts have been studied to date and which texts would normally be studied by the end of the year.

Our English courses are heavily weighted on literary analysis and require students to write comparative literary essays that are 1200-1500 words in length. To what extent does this student's program of study with you emphasize longer writing tasks and how capable do you think this student would be in undertaking such tasks?

Please enclose a recent teacher-assessed writing sample from the student. The piece may be selected by the student but we ask that you explain the conditions under which the work was undertaken (timed, through drafting process, etc.)
