

Student Work

STUDENT WRITING

It all started when a baby wave was formed in the Atlantic ocean near Africa. Soon it became none other than the monster hurricane called Harvey and traveled across the ocean to the city of Houston. While Houstonians slept cozily in their beds monster Harvey engulfed the city.

Excerpt from Atharv Gupta's short story, Houston's Harvey Heroes

We are proud of our St. Mark's writers! Across our community, students are writing short stories, poems, and essays.

Houston Public Media reports that, "nearly 350 students from across greater Houston experienced the art of writing and illustrating their own story as part of Houston Public Media's annual PBS KIDS Writers Contest. This year marked 23 years of fostering an appreciation for learning and creative writing through this early childhood literary competition.

On Saturday, May 18, thirty-six children were celebrated as finalists at an awards ceremony at The Children's Museum of Houston." The first-place winner for 2nd grade was none other than Atharv Gupta, '25, who wrote a short story called Houston's Harvey Heroes.

Atharv Gupta, '25, far left, winning the PBS Kids Writers Contest

