Instructional Resources for Students

Teachers may issue lists of suggested readings without considering availability of the books through the schools. However, the reading of such books is to have no direct bearing on academic requirements or students' grades in a course.

Required reading, whether in a textbook or other printed materials, may be assigned only when the reading material is available without cost to the students. This regulation also pertains to required summer reading. Each teacher will be responsible for lesson planning consistent with this rule.

Such approval will also be necessary for lists issued to students making suggestions for summertime reading. Summer reading may be required for specific courses.
