SYNOPSIS

Set among the stories and boulevards of Disney's Hollywood Studios®, this learning experience invites students to think of themselves as a brand. This highly personal journey explores life markers that provide an introspective look at skills and interests, the impact of personal appearance and personal publishing, and the story we are telling others through our actions.

Through an exploration of brand-named products and popular logos, students develop an appreciation for the competitive edge a well-defined brand has in the marketplace. Guided discussion and the iconic American success story of Walt Disney allow students to establish an application connection to brand development in order to distinguish themselves and cultivate professional/personal success. A narrative of current Walt Disney Ambassadors and an image checkup showcase the value of creating a positive first impression. An iceberg activity drives home the reality that decisions are being made about who we are, what we value, and the skills we have based on our outward appearance.

As the author of their life's story, students discover the ease in which their brand can be derailed by personal choices and personal publishing. A select attraction then brings focus on a future that can be full of unexpected twists, turns, and moments that must be navigated to achieve goals. An improvisational exercise promotes students' potential and leads them to discover that with every experience, skills are gained that can be used as stepping stones to create a personal brand and develop their career.

A final attraction experience and challenge activity provides a call to action for students to develop and cultivate an authentic brand and live it out!
