

ABOUT HEATHER CLAYTON

Heather Clayton has been an educator, leader, speaker, and developer of teams for over 20 years. She has worked in both public and private education systems in both Canada and Australia, as well as serving as an educational consultant, principal of Heather Clayton Consulting, for over 10 years. Travelling across Canada and the US, Heather has presented keynote addresses to groups from 5 - 1,500 people.

Heather's passion for leadership and team development led her to get her MA in Leadership at Royal Roads University. Shortly after completing her Masters in 2010, Heather completed her Executive Coaching certification through Adler and OISE in Toronto, in May 2012 and is certified through the International Coaching Federation. Throughout her career in education, she has seen both leadership potential and its challenges.

As of June 2016, Heather has been focused exclusively on her coaching and team development with leaders and teams in various sectors, including public and private education, as well as police and finance. Recently, she received certification in Systematic Team Coaching, and continues to work with both teams and individuals.

Most recently, Heather is excited to be implementing an 18-month pilot, in 3 school boards, entitled "Innovating Leadership: Building a Coaching Culture". This project both aligns with and is collecting research for conditions that create excellence in Leadership. Heather's passion is doing this work in service of helping leaders and teams to bring their best selves to work every day.
