Sculpture Tour Map

The Annual Millfield Sculpture Commission is an open competition of international reputation. The brief is for a contemporary sculpture to be incorporated into one of Millfield selected sites.

Millfield School is set in 100 acres of extensive park land with wooded areas and a magnificent outlook towards Glastonbury Tor and the Mendip Hills. It is intended to use the commission together with the landscape to raise the artistic and aesthetic appreciation of passers-by.

In recent years starting in 2005, the winner was Julian Wild with 'System no.11' (No.24). This is a round ball-like structure of steel tubes, welded together into a network of molecular shapes, giving an industrial-like edge to the park. This is located under trees near Keen's Elm on the way to the swimming pool.

The human figure made a welcomed return in 2006 with Richard Jack's 'Family Patterns' (No.25). A mild steel construction with a nod towards Cubism located outside the entrance to the school reception. Also in 2006, the new Music Centre commissioned a relief piece to embellish a large expanse of curving brick wall. Stephen Hitchin's 'Symphony' (No. 26) panels made in Ancaster Stone sweeps the façade like a series of musical notes.

2007's winner was Joanne Berry (No.27) - 'Interactivity' is a series of colourful shapes which cling to the new Music Centre's lift and stairway façade, adding enhancement and interest day and night. The 2007 Autumn term saw a special stone War Memorial Commission by Chris Peterson (No.28) to remember former Millfield students who lost their lives in wars.

2008 sees a purchased sculpture called 'Stepping Out' (No.20) made in stainless steel by Sarah Moore & Jan Roe. This is in a fine elevated position near the dining hall.
