The Nightingale-Bamford School Library Newsletter

Your monthly connection to what's new in the libraries!

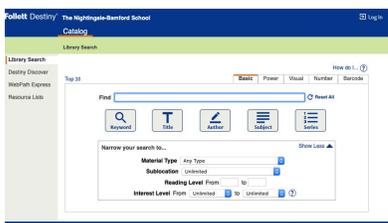

Hello from the Nightingale Libraries!

November is National Novel Writing Month (NaNoWriMo) and we at the Nightingale Libraries will take any opportunity to celebrate the written word, the immense pleasure of reading, the power of the imagination, and the rich array of resources available in our libraries. This newsletter includes resources to help you find a book to keep you company during these crisp fall days.

Visit our New Books LibGuide to explore new acquisitions now available in the libraries. We've included a few highlights below:

Other resources to help you find your next full-length read:

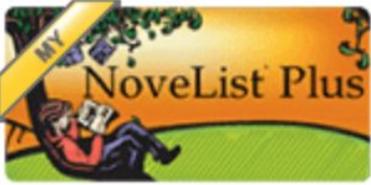

The Library Catalog

Access the Library catalog online to browse of full collection of print and ebooks.

Sora

Download the Sora app to access the library's ebook collection. Connect your public library account for access to an even greater number of titles.

Novelist

Get reader's advisory with Novelist Plus, a tool that helps you find books to match your personal preferences based on genre, theme, and more.

No time for novels? Check out these shorter reading options:

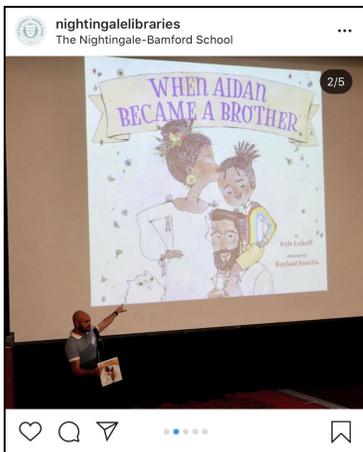

Flipster

Use Flipster for access to current publications including The New Yorker, The Atlantic, and Yoga Journal.

Oxford English Dictionary

Word lovers can use the OED to explore recently added words such as fake news and Manhatthanhenge, browse words by usage and origin, or discover periods of word popularity through the timeline feature.

@NightingaleLibraries on Instagram

Remember to follow the Nightingale Libraries Instagram for regular updates related to all things reading and inquiry here at Nightingale. In the past month, we've shared faculty recommendations, student-created displays, a recent visit from author Kyle Lukoff, and Class I's participation in the Global Read Aloud. Join us and get the most up to date information about what's happening and what's available in and around the libraries.

See you in the stacks,
