

Serving on an FCIS Evaluation Team

One of the objectives of an FCIS evaluation is to assess a school's financial operations and offer suggestions for improvement in the areas of finance, risk management and advancement. A school's financial health is key to its sustainability as an institution, and the specialized knowledge of an independent school business officer is valuable both to the evaluating team and the school being evaluated. FCIS evaluation team members note that serving on a team is one of the most worthwhile professional development experiences an independent school staff member can undertake. In addition to the rewards of helping another school succeed, team members enjoy networking and learning best practices from other team members and the school.

Participants will:

- Obtain a detailed knowledge of FCIS standards and indicators that pertain to a school's sustainability
- Gain a greater understanding of FCIS accreditation and protocols
- Identify strengths and areas of growth in a school's financial operations
- Work with a team of knowledgeable educators to create a report that will function as a blueprint for the school's future improvement efforts
