What is the Guaranteed Placement Program?

The Guaranteed Placement Program (or GPP) is a career development program designed to supplement a student's formal education.

Established in 1999, the GPP integrates classroom instruction, experiential education, service leadership, and career focused workshops. The program is designed to prepare students looking to enter the workforce or graduate school after graduation and is facilitated through workshops and individual appointments.

The GPP is structured developmentally for all class levels with each year building on the next; students fulfill basic career development requirements in their first and sophomore years. Junior year they get a glimpse of financial fitness and inclusive excellence, along with learning professional etiquette.

In their final semesters, program requirements increase as students begin to focus on skills appropriate to the job search and job interviewing such as: resume and cover letter refinement; interview skills and completing a half-hour mock interview with a 'real' employer, attending a job fair, and of course, conducting an effective job search.

Our Guarantee states that if any student, who fully participates in our program for all four years of their college experience, does not receive a job offer or is not accepted into graduate/professional school within six months of graduation, the University provides that student a paid internship* in their chosen field.

Terms and conditions apply.*

LEARN minus the “L”

What would you do if your student’s advisor said:

“Don’t worry, I will guarantee your student an A in all of her classes” – Professor Smith

Does this sound too good to be true? Does it sound wrong on some level? And if the student is studying to be a nurse for example, does it even sound a little scary? After all, isn’t your student attending Misericordia to learn a specialized subject that s/he will then practice in the real world?

As we all know, knowledge can’t simply be downloaded into a student’s brain. It can’t be given to a student. No one can take a test for your student or attend their clinical for them. Knowledge can’t be purchased.

Each individual must learn his or her subject inside and out, and she/he must do whatever it takes in order to do so; she/he might study every day for hours, attend tutoring, or meet with a professor if extra help is needed. She/he must meet deadlines, spend hours and weeks at an internship, she/he might even need to spend more time studying than his or her classmates.

In other words, knowledge is not given to students, it is earned by them.

This tedious process of earning knowledge ensures that students will be able to apply their knowledge upon graduation, independently, without the help of a professor or parent, and without looking at notes. Some will even need to apply their knowledge in only a moment’s notice: How would you feel if your nurse took out a “cheat sheet” before giving you a needle?

This same notion applies to career development and to the Guaranteed Placement Program

We can’t simply download information into students’ brains about how to conduct themselves as professionals in the ‘real world.’ It is a learning process that must be experienced in order to be assessed, processed, and then used later in the world of work.

Because of the need to experience learning, students are not given a guarantee upon joining the GPP, they are given the ability to earn the guarantee.

Students Earn the Guarantee By:

- Attending the designated career workshop during the semester and year that it is required in the program.
- Meeting deadlines such as: submitting materials, scheduling and attending appointments well before a required deadline, meeting with a career advisor, arriving on time for workshops and appointments and remaining until the end.
- Maintaining professional communication with the career center.

Who is Eligible for the GPP Program?

Students who graduate within (i) four (4) years with a Bachelor of Science or Bachelor of Arts degree, or (ii) five (5) years with a Master of Science degree in Occupational Therapy, or Speech and Language Pathology or (iii) six and one third (6.33) years with an Entry Level Occupational Therapy Doctoral, or (iv) six and a half (6.5) years with a Doctor of Physical Therapy from the time the Student enrolls at the University in the Fall semester of 2019 or Spring semester of 2020 as a full-time first year student or as a fulltime transfer student with less than 15 credits. To see what options are available to students who transfer into Misericordia with 15 or more credits, please see “GPP Levels Program” at the end of this document.

How Do Students Join the GPP Program?

Students learn about the GPP Program during a presentation that is scheduled as part of their First Year Experience (FYE) class. During this class, students learn everything there is to know about the GPP Program and they are asked to sign the GPP contract at that time. Eligible transfer students will receive a letter from the career center upon arrival to the university informing them of the GPP and inviting them to our office to discuss the program. Students must sign up for the GPP by the designated deadline. Students are not eligible to join the regular GPP program at any other time.

Why was my student “kicked out” of the GPP program – he only missed one workshop?

The GPP program requires that students attend a career development workshop each semester as well as complete additional requirements in their senior year. Once students fail to complete a requirement(s) during the semester, they have broken their part of the GPP contract with the school and have made themselves ineligible for the guaranteed internship.

At the end of each semester, the career center reviews the GPP database to see which students completed the workshop and/or the requirements by the deadline designated in that semester. Students who have not completed the requirement are sent a letter alerting them that they have become ineligible for the guarantee, however, they are invited to continue in a structured career development program called the GPP Levels Program. Information on the GPP Levels Program is at the end of this document.

Why is the GPP Workshop-Based?

The GPP was conceived as a workshop-based program for two main reasons:

The workshop setting provides the opportunity for students to learn from their peers’ questions and also allows for learning by interaction. The workshops feature learning activities that are meant to be experienced in a group setting; the interactivity aspect of the workshop with the workshop facilitator and with their peers is a crucial component. Since this type of interactivity can only be achieved in a workshop setting, the workshop cannot be made up in a one-on-one appointment.

Because of the large number of students in the GPP Program (500-1,000 students at any given time), the GPP can only be offered in a workshop-format. The career center employs 3 full time career advisors who oversee not only the GPP program, but who conduct non-GPP related individualized career advising appointments, classroom career-related presentations, graduate school advising, internship advising, employer visits to campus, among many other responsibilities for the entire student body of all 3,000+ students at Misericordia University (most of whom are non-GPP students) as well as alumni.

It is a workshop-based program and not an individualized program. If students are unable to attend the GPP workshops, they cannot expect to receive a one-on-one appointment to “make-up” a missed GPP workshop.

GPP Workshop Rules

Why do we have GPP Program rules? To ensure that students are aware of what is required of them to successfully complete the GPP, to encourage honesty, respect, and integrity, and to create a criterion by which every student in the program is treated equally.

The GPP rules also model professional norms that students will encounter in the working world. Just as the workplace into which your student will eventually enter has rules, so does the GPP program. In fact, the rules of the GPP are modeled on workplace professionalism.

Students are required to sign themselves in on the sign in sheet at the workshop in order to receive credit for attending the workshop. The student’s signature is proof that they attended a workshop. There can be anywhere from 500 to over 1,000 students in the GPP program at any given time and the career center staff does not know the name and face of each and every participant. The student’s signature is what we use to enter their participation into our database.

Student may only sign themselves into a workshop. If a student signs another student into the workshop, then the student and the name of the student they signed in must both meet with the Dean of Students.

Students must attend the required workshops from start to finish. If a student arrives late to a workshop or leaves early, it is considered not completing that workshop requirement. Students are given notification of workshop dates, locations, and times of the GPP workshops well in advance. This should give students enough time to flex work schedules, ask permission to leave a practice or meeting early or to arrive late, notify club members of late arrival or absence, communicate with professors, lab partners or anyone else.

For some workshops, students must “reserve” their seat. Each of the workshops are hosting in a classroom or meeting room setting where there are a limited number of seats. For these, students will be denied access to the workshop if the workshop is already full and the student did not reserve his seat beforehand.

GPP Deadlines

The GPP Program is strict in that students are not granted any “misses” on workshops and/or meetings, and all requirements must be met by their stated deadlines. If a student misses a deadline, they have broken the GPP contract with Misericordia University and are no longer eligible for the regular GPP Program. They may continue a structured professional development program by joining the GPP Levels program.

Requirements of the GPP

Below are the requirements of the GPP program. As you can see each semester has a requirement with the senior semesters having multiple requirements. The GPP was structured this way intentionally, starting the student out slow and then placing the most activity where it appropriately belongs in senior year when students must begin their job search or their preparation for graduate school.

Career Center Responsibilities for the GPP Program

The career center is responsible for:

- Providing multiple dates for each workshop.
- Notifying students of GPP workshop requirements for each semester. The career center does this by sending an e-mail to the student's MU e-mail account before the semester begins as well as by sending an announcement in the beginning of each semester through the myMU e-mail.

The career center is NOT responsible for:

- Personally reminding each student of the semester requirements and workshop dates
- Reminding students over and over again about workshop dates
- Coercing students to attend required workshops
- Reminding your student if they have not attended a workshop

Student Responsibilities for the GPP

Students are expected to read their myMU e-mails regarding the GPP.

Students are expected to make note of the dates and make any arrangements necessary to be at the GPP workshops in their entirety.

Students are expected to notify their work supervisor, work study supervisor, club members, coach, etc. well in advance if they need to flex or rearrange a work schedule, club meeting, or practice in order to attend a GPP workshop.

Students are expected to sign themselves in at each GPP workshop – this serves as proof that they attended the workshop. Those who do not sign in will not receive credit for attendance.

Students are expected to actively participate in the GPP and therefore actively participate in their own career development; passive participation in the GPP will not get them a job upon graduation from the program.

Steps Parents can take to encourage their student's success in the GPP program

- Encourage your student to read their myMU e-mails, as this is the way the career center notifies students of all GPP workshop dates.
- Encourage your student to sign up for a spot in each semester's required GPP workshop early and to mark the date and time on his/her calendar or set a reminder on her smart phone.
- Encourage your student to engage in timely communication with coaches, campus club members, faculty, a work study supervisor, or boss if she needs to flex or adjust his/her schedule to attend a workshop.
- Encourage your student to seek an internship early on in her college career if an internship (or clinical, student teaching, fieldwork, practicum) is not a required part of her major's curriculum.
- Help your student to realize that the GPP is there to guide him/her and that they should take an active approach to the program; remind her that ultimately, she is the one who must do her own job search and take the steps necessary to attain a job; the career center and the GPP are there to educate and guide her in the process and (through the GPP) help to build her confidence in herself as a professional, but she is ultimately the one who needs to be proactive and assertive in her job search.

How the career center handles calls from parents regarding their student's GPP issues

Occasionally the career center will receive a call from parents regarding GPP issues. Below is how the career center proceeds when we are contacted by a parent regarding a GPP issues. Please note: The career center will not discuss any GPP issues unless the student in question is present during the discussion. Also, because of FERPA, we cannot discuss GPP matters unless your student has signed a release form with the registrar's office.

- The career center will contact the student in question via e-mail and ask if the individual who called us is indeed the student's parent or guardian.
- If so, the student will be asked to schedule a meeting time between her parents, herself and the career center for a tele-conference or an in-person, depending on the parents' location.
- If there is another individual such as a coach or faculty member who may add information to the GPP issue, those individuals may be contacted and asked to participate in the meeting as well.
- The matter will be discussed in this meeting.

GPP Contract

Students must sign the contract if they wish to join the GPP program. The contract and the matrix spell out the student's responsibilities and the university's responsibilities. Students who do not wish to join the program are also required to sign the contract and check the box stating that they do not wish to participate.

My son/daughter completed the GPP and is graduating in May, now what happens?

Students must begin conducting their job search well before graduation. So, really the student's job at this point is to be job searching, networking, and seeking employment from 9 am – 5 pm every day! Now that they have graduated, job searching should be their full time job!

Each GPP student is required to send back a Profile Form (see the sample below) which must be returned to the career center by August 31st. Since the end of August is 3 months after graduation, this form informs the career center of the student's employment/graduate school status and progress.
