To members of the Austin Seminary Community

Dear Seminary Community,

In an abundance of caution, Austin Seminary is cancelling all classes today, Friday, March 13. The President's Cabinet will meet again today to discuss the changing plans for our shared life going forward.

Employees should be planning on how work can be accomplished in the event of an extended closure. This may mean deciding what information or tools are needed to be gathered today to take home. Later today, at the earliest convenience, we will provide information of how to help you in this transition.

In addition, Southern foods has disinfected the kitchen and closed down the kitchen a bit early today so there will be no lunch provided. As a reminder Southern Foods is also closed next week for spring break.

Please continue to monitor our primary modes of communication—email, website, and text messages—for updates.
