Hello Second Grade Families,

We hope that everyone is doing well. We know that families, teachers, and students are making the best of a challenging situation. Students: keep practicing so you remember all the wonderful learning you've done this year. We miss you so much and are here for you if you need us!

Here are the activities we put together for you this week. These activities can be done independently, but if there are any questions, each of your teachers is available to answer questions and/or help via email.

MATH:

Work on two sheets to practice telling time on analog and digital clocks. Remember to keep track of the hour hand and minute hand on the analog clock! Hint: the hour hand is the shorter hand. Then, choose a day to log your daily activities on the time log.

You can also access “Math-A-Day” activities provided by Bridges at their website:

READING/WRITING:

If we were in school together right now, we would be working on writing poetry. Do you remember when we have talked about the genres of books we read? One of the types of nonfiction books we talked about was biographies, or books written about real people. A specific kind of biography is one written by the author about the author. These are called autobiographies. This week, we would like you to try writing an autobiographical poem- written by you about YOU! All you need is a pencil and paper.

SOCIAL STUDIES:

This year we've learned what a community is, the different communities we belong to (classroom, school, family, neighborhood, city), and our roles within our communities. This activity has students practicing some of the ways we've identified and appreciated others in our varying communities.

Stay healthy and safe.
