About the speaker:

Karen Jordan '91 is a cum laude graduate of Wellesley College and has a master's degree from Stanford University. She, along with her mother and sister, is developing a skincare line called EmmGerri with the first product, a body crème, being based on a recipe her mother created on their kitchen stove.

A writer for the CoStar Group, Karen is also a former television reporter and has worked as a staff writer at The Tennessean and the Los Angeles Business Journal. Her work has appeared in The Atlantic, The Huffington Post, Los Angeles Magazine, LA Weekly and Patch.com as well.

In addition, she has performed as a singer at Staples Center and the House of Blues Sunset Strip and is writing a book based on the life of her great-grandfather, the first African-American doctor in Coweta County, Georgia. More info is available at her website: TheStoryoftheDoctor.com.

Every woman can—and should—make a meaningful contribution to her world. There is a growing recognition that women's empowerment and leadership are crucial to their own advancement, and to worldwide societal change. Wellesley and its alumnae have supported and championed women's intellectual and social development and autonomy for over 100 years.
