

A Walk in the Grasslands

Grasslands can be found all over the world. Grasslands do not get the amount of rainfall needed for a forest to grow. Still, it is not always dry in the grasslands. Because of this, grass can grow there.

All kinds of animals can be found in the grasslands. In the North America grasslands, you might hear a coyote call out, or see a deer walk up. In Africa, you might see a rhino open its jaws with a yawn. In South America, you might see a bush dog hauling its pups.

When rain falls on grasslands, up spring flowers both small and tall. Because grassland soils is so deep and rich, a lot of things grow well there. So, grasslands can be useful for animals, but also for humans!