

NEWCASTLE ROYAL GRAMMAR SCHOOL

SUE WOODROOFE

Born in North Shields, I have been a teacher for 30 years. Since April 2016, I have been Principal of The Grammar School at Leeds; before that, I was Head of Senior School and then Principal of The British School of Brussels.

My career includes teaching and leadership roles in a range of independent and maintained sector schools, the first two of which were in the North East.

My first degree is in English Language and Literature and I also hold a Master in Educational Leadership.

I have two children, living and working in the South East, and in my spare time I am active in my local church, enjoy the theatre and walks in the Yorkshire Dales.

I love history (which inspires me), current affairs and politics (which often do the opposite!)
