HUMAN SERVICES PATHWAY

SAMPLE FOCUS: Culinary/Food Service

Dual College Credit opportunities
 Industry Certification opportunities

*Half of all American adults have worked in the restaurant industry, and millions have successful professions in this vibrant industry.

While many people associate being a chef with this career area, there are many other careers that are possible, such as restaurant management, food truck entrepreneur, private chef, cooking instructor, caterer, etc.

After High School Options

Employment – Many food service entry-level jobs are available straight out of high school. However, be aware that these may not be living-wage jobs and working your way up from the bottom will take time and hard work.

College/University – Depending on your area of interest a certificate or degree may be necessary. Be sure to take college entrance requirements into account (such as 2 World Language credits and 4 years of math). Get a head start on earning college credits by taking dual credit courses such as Culinary Foundations, Baking & Pastry, and Gourmet Foods.

Military – Your culinary skills translate directly to jobs in the armed services. See todaysmilitary.com for more information.
