Rosecrance Prevention and Early Intervention Program (PEI)

The Rosecrance PEI Program is an evidence-based alcohol and drug education program designed to provide education, support, and direction to teens and their families who may be at risk of more serious involvement with alcohol and other drugs.

Who would benefit from the program?

Teens who have exhibited recent behavioral changes and their parents may benefit. Those changes may include one or more of the following:

- Increase in school disciplinary actions
- Lower-than-expected grades
- Decreased interest or participation in extracurricular activities
- Increased tardiness/absenteeism
- Use or suspected use of alcohol or other drugs
- Dishonesty regarding personal alcohol or other drug use (or friends' use)
- Less time at home, secrecy or evasiveness concerning whereabouts and activities
- Signs of being under the influence of chemicals (odor on breath or clothing, altered speech, etc.)
- Noticeable change in friends over a short period of time

What are the components of the program?

The PEI Program for teens consists of up to 10 hours of programming including:

- A comprehensive assessment (required)
- Three class sessions (parents attend session three)
- Urine screen (if recommended)
- An individualized exit interview held with the student and parents

What information is provided in the program?

Participation in the Rosecrance PEI Program classes will increase awareness and understanding of the effects of adolescent drug and/or alcohol use on youth and their families.

Attendees will learn:

- Adolescent attitudes toward tobacco, alcohol, and other drug use
- Family communication skills
- Trends and stages of teen drug and/or alcohol abuse
- Characteristics of commonly used drugs
- Stages of adolescent development
- Ways to parent teens who are experimenting with alcohol/drugs
