Me, As a Mountain

5 I am not an island.
On my worst day, I am

11 Florida, the ocean tempting me away from the mainland
20 states that are my parents.

25 On the days I feel best,
31 I am the Rocky Mountains,

36 broad as the landscape, filling a window.
43 I command any attention to the horizon.

50 I rise into the air, my hair a
58 mist against the blue of the sky.

65 I rest on the Great Plains.
71 Plateaus and pine forests lift me.

77 They are my parents'
81 broad shoulders I stand on.

86 I try to use them wisely to build
94 myself
95 into a tower of rock, strong and
102 impossibly tall.

Quiet Room

I love the quiet of my room, silent but for the slightest sound of a breeze that stirs the curtains.

Some friends I have would scoff and say,
“Come on, this place is boring!
Where’s the music? Where’s the fun?”

But me, I like a place to think—a place where I can share my thoughts with only me and let my mind wander out the window to the wide, wide world beyond.

Grace wrote the paragraph below to answer the prompt: Reread "Birdfoot's Grampa" and "Growing Up." In your opinion, which poet is more successful in their use of imagery?

I think that the poet of "Birdfoot's Grampa" is more successful in his use of imagery because it appeals to my sense of sight and touch. I felt like I was right there with the characters. The poet describes the little toads that are leaping around on the road as "live drops of rain." In the third stanza, the poet describes the old man's hands as, "leathery hands full / of wet brown life." I can visualize the scene on the side of the road more easily than I can picture the scraped knees in "Growing Up." The poem, "Growing Up," doesn't use as many precise words so I can't picture a "house built on love." The words of "Birdfoot's Grampa" show me the old man's love and respect for nature. It is the many sensory details in "Birdfoot's Grampa" that allow me to visualize the old man standing in the rain holding the tiny toads.

Reread the passage. Follow the directions below.

1. Circle Grace's opinion statement.
2. Draw a box around an example of imagery that Grace uses as a supporting detail.
3. Underline a reason that Grace gives for why "Growing Up" does not have a lot of imagery.
4. Write two prepositions that Grace uses on the line below.
