Title: My love!

My heart is all aflutter. It's beating so erratically that I am not sure my chest will contain it! It might explode into 1 million pieces with the joy I have experienced today. My word! He is so handsome, so brave, so manly, so perfect in every way! His eyes are like diamonds, sparkling with laughter and merriment. His hair is like a raven's back, black and iridescent in the morning sun! I think I am in love!

I spoke to him. His voice warm and calming, he reassured me that he felt as I did. I basked in the velvety softness of his declarations of affection. I could barely speak for sheer happiness.

There is only one problem... the crimson blood that flows through his perfectly sculpted physique is born of my mortal enemy! He is a Montague! How can this be so? I do not care about such trivial matters, but my father will never accept this! He plans for me to marry someone "suitable"- some boring, wet lettuce of a creature who will fade into insignificance in the glow that emits from Mr Perfection, Romeo! How can we be together, when our families are so at war?
