Cita de la semana: "Yo prefiero darle cuentas a Dios por una gran gentileza en vez de una gran severidad. ¿No es Dios todo amor? Dios el Padre es el Padre de la misericordia; Dios el Hijo es un Cordero; Dios el Espíritu Santo es una Paloma— es decir, gentileza misma". ~ San Francisco de Sales

WHAT MAKES FOR GOOD AGING? – For many older people, it isn't just the absence of health problems – it's the presence of meaning and connection. Social inclusion, which improves people's ability to take part in society, helps create sustaining ties for older adults, reducing health-care costs and cutting the physical and mental toll of loneliness.

The book, "Aging Well: Solutions to the Most Pressing Global Challenges of Aging," is a new guide by Jean Galiana and William Haseltine. In it, they lay out powerful reasons to consider social inclusion in everything from urban planning to hospice care. The book looks at effective eldercare policies and practices around the world and points to ways to help people age well.

Most of the recommendations are straightforward, such as making long-term care insurance more accessible and coordinate primary care. But the recommendations don't just have to do with costs or care facilities. Instead, words like "purpose" and "resilience" echo throughout the guide. The authors point out several tactics that can help older people find purpose and connections in their lives.

One of them is cohousing, in which people share common spaces and neighborly support. Another, intergenerational learning, engages older people with younger students in universities, schools and care facilities. Even parks can help with social inclusion – outdoor seating encourages generational interaction while giving the elderly a safe place to enjoy their neighborhoods. Social inclusion helps combat loneliness, a condition long linked to poor health.

A 2017 study funded by AARP found that older people who lack social contacts had higher death rates and spent more on health care than their more connected counterparts. Social isolation was associated with an estimated $6.7 billion in additional federal spending. The authors say spaces and communities that include aging people fill "many psychological and social needs of older adults." They call such communities "a powerful antidote to the pervasive systemic ageist stereotypes and prejudices seen around the world," and a chance for people to continue lives filled with meaning, learning and relationships as they age. (Adapted from an item by Erin Blakemore of The Washington Post.) Today, isolation is one of the hottest issues in the realm of elderhood. The topic will be featured in a future issue of Senior Moments.

A PRAYER FOR GROWING OLD – Some of you may have seen this prayer, perhaps more than once. My copy says it's attributed to a 17th century nun, but I'm skeptical because I've seen several versions of it over the years. Nonetheless, here it is again and, because in many ways we're not the same as we were only a few years ago, maybe the words will have more meaning this time around. I like it because it's got a positive vibe and a good dose of humor, which is always a good thing, especially these days! Here it is...

Lord, you know better than I that I'm getting older. Keep me from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion. Release me from trying to straighten out everyone's affairs. Keep my mind free from the recital of endless details; give me wings to get to the point

I ask for grace to listen to the tales of other's pains. Help me to endure the boredom with patience and keep my lips sealed, for my own aches and pains are increasing in number and intensity, and the pleasure of discussing them is becoming sweeter as the years go by.

I dare not ask for improved memory, but for a growing humility and lessening cocksureness when it seems to clash with the memories of others. Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally I may be wrong. Keep me reasonably sweet. I do not want to be a saint (saints are so hard to live with,) but a sour old person is the work of the devil. Make me thoughtful, but not moody; helpful, but not pushy independent, yet able to accept with graciousness favors that others wish to bestow on me.

If I do not approve of some of the changes that have taken place in recent years, give me the wisdom to keep my mouth shut. Lord knows that when the end comes, I would like to have a friend or two left.

ELDER WISDOM – The only real mistake is the one from which we learn nothing. (Henry Ford)
