

Mansfield ISD Fine Arts Academies

Mansfield ISD is excited to launch its new fine arts academies at Brenda Norwood Elementary School and Alma Martinez Intermediate School. The academies will provide students with a rigorous academic environment while encouraging artistic exploration and integration. Students will have the opportunity to delve deeper into four creative disciplines of performance and visual arts: theatre, art, music and dance.

CURRICULUM

What is a fine arts academy?

A fine arts academy places a stronger emphasis on the visual and performing arts than is typically present in a traditional elementary and intermediate school setting.

How will the fine arts academies be different from the traditional elementary and intermediate campuses?

After extensive research, both the elementary and intermediate school fine arts academies will utilize an arts integration approach to delivering instruction. Both of the fine arts academies will expose students to extensive experiences in four creative disciplines: dance, music, theatre and the visual arts. In addition, the arts integration frameworks will allow for frequent collaboration between the core academic program and each of the fine arts disciplines.

What does “arts integration” mean?

Initially designed through a Kennedy Center project more than two decades ago, the arts integration model is an approach to teaching in which students construct and demonstrate understanding through an art form (the use of dance, music, drama and visual arts). The arts integration model allows students to engage in a creative process, connecting an art form and another subject area, which will meet the instructional goals of both academic disciplines.

Will students follow the state educational standards and MISD curriculum?

Yes. By law, Mansfield ISD must teach the state curriculum. In addition, both fine arts academies will follow the district’s curriculum that is aligned to those standards. The methodologies that have been developed for the arts integration framework will be used to implement the curriculum goals of the state and district.

Who can apply for the fine arts academies?

What are the qualifications for students applying to either of the fine arts academies?

Students interested in applying for either of the fine arts academies should have an interest in the visual and performing arts. In addition, students will need to demonstrate academic success in their core academic subjects.

Are there tuition fees for the academy?

No. There are no tuition costs to attend the fine arts academies. However, depending on your child's fine arts discipline of choice, there may be costs associated to participate (musical instruments, dance outfits, etc.)

How are students selected to participate in one of the fine arts academies?

A random lottery will be completed for all students who follow the requirements of the application process. Consideration will be made for equal representation from all areas of the Mansfield ISD.
