Dear Parents:

You may already have a Tangram set at home. If you don't then look at the folder on How to Make a Tangram at Home. Once you have it ready your child and perhaps you are in for a treat! These suggested activities should provide hours of fun while engaging your child's sensorial perception skills. A suggestion would be to print out or display on your device screen one image of your child's choice from a page. When your child is done with it then you can show them more.

There are two variations to each series. Start off with the first in each series. When your child is able to do them independently, you can then challenge him/her to the second variation in each series. This one does not have the planes differentiated.

Hope your child and you have fun!
