In 1968 Rabbi Alfred Wolf saw his vision for Gindling Hilltop Camp come to fruition. Fifty years later, on July 7, the Wolf family, along with more than 400 alumni, campers, counselors, and guests, gathered at Gindling Hilltop to celebrate its golden anniversary. A hardworking committee, chaired by Wendy Prober Cohen, spent months planning the celebration to ensure that the event would be extraordinary.

Along with the camp community, hundreds of guests participated in Shabbat morning services in the chapel overlooking the Pacific Ocean, and then enjoyed a traditional camp BBQ. The day continued with beloved camp activities—the ropes course, archery, swimming, arts and crafts—and time reconnecting with old friends. Several generations of alumni had not been to Hilltop in years and treasured their time sharing camp memories with family and friends. The afternoon ended with a rousing song session that mixed tunes from decades past with cheers from the 2018 Mitzvah campers.

At the conclusion of the event, in honor of Gindling Hilltop’s very first campers, known as the Junior and Senior Pioneers—who spent time planting the trees that today provide shade—Pioneer Park was dedicated.

Gindling Hilltop Camp remains a place that is special to thousands of families, and we look forward to embracing its next fifty years together.

To take us back to Gindling Hilltop’s beginnings, Dan Wolf writes:

My father was Rabbi Alfred Wolf, who founded Camp Hess Kramer and Gindling Hilltop Camp. Kramer and I were born around the same time, so I have no memory of that camp’s origins, but with Hilltop, I was there every step of the way...literally. I vividly remember a day in 1966 when Dad drove me in the camp jeep up to the top of the mountain adjacent to CHK. We walked all over the property, and he pointed out where such landmarks as the dining hall, chapel, and cabins would be. Keep in mind that this was just a barren rolling coastal hill like any other. Quite frankly, I simply...
The month of Elul begins the evening of Friday, August 10—and so too begins the time of preparation for Rosh HaShanah. While we associate Rosh HaShanah with crisp round apples dipped in sweet honey, more significantly it is a serious day of judgment: how we want God to evaluate and judge us is the exact way God expects us to evaluate and judge one another.

Our Torah this month implores “Tzedek, tzedek, tirdof.” Justice, Justice, you shall seek. The entire portion of Shoftim is about righteous judgments, establishing an ethical legal system, and behaving in a way that constitutes a just and moral society. This section of Torah provides the backbone, foundation, and motivation for social justice, compelling us to advocate for the widow, the stranger, the downtrodden, and the oppressed.

The question then arises, Why is the word justice repeated? Renowned poet, philosopher, and Jewish biblical commentator of the Middle Ages Ibn Ezra posits that tzedek is written twice to remind us that we should pursue justice whether it be for one’s loss or for one’s benefit. The repetition also denotes “time after time,” or all the days of your life, for emphasis. In other words, we should seek justice, regardless of the potential outcome, and we should do it for all time. Perpetual justice is one of the core expectations of humanity. Particularly as we approach the sacred holidays, this section of Torah reminds us that our essential calling is to behave in a way that makes us and God proud of a world that is based on actions—actions that, ultimately, are just.

did not see what he saw so clearly. But over the next two years, his vision became a reality, as that mountaintop-like-any-other was transformed into a unique home for living Judaism, where experiencing a “spiritual high” is no mere metaphor.

In 1968—50 years ago—I was a camper during Hilltop’s inaugural season. The camp was still under construction. It was dusty, there was no plumbing, food had to be trucked up. We loved it! We were the proud pioneers who weren’t just consuming what was handed to us but were creating something new, giving it shape for generations to come. And, always, there was that view.

Since then, thousands of campers have taken part in the Hilltop experience, plus thousands more in the off-season. In some ways, I think it’s retained that initial pioneering sensibility. At Hess Kramer, there is a feeling of being sheltered in a protecting canyon. At Hilltop, there is the daily drama of gazing out on a limitless expanse. These remarkable sister camps are so different and so alike. And among the things they share in common: the guiding vision of the man I got to call Dad.

Welcome Karsh Center’s New Associate Director of Volunteer Engagement

Elizabeth Green is the Karsh Center’s newest addition. She began her role as Associate Director of Volunteer Engagement on July 9. See her note below as she introduces herself!

I have been a member of Wilshire Boulevard Temple since 4th grade. Memories of my teacher acting out the Hebrew aleph bet and Sunday morning breaks from class to go to Bagel Café still punctuate my memories of growing up. I celebrated my bat mitzvah and confirmation on the bimah of the Glazer Campus. I have felt the comfort and support of Rabbi Leder’s words at my grandfather’s funeral. I’ll always remember holding my niece in my arms two years ago during her first Rosh HaShanah service in Piness Auditorium, her eyes growing wide as she watched the Torah coming down the aisle.

With this in mind, I’m honored and thrilled to be a part of the Temple as the Karsh Family Social Service Center’s Associate Director of Volunteer Engagement. My hope is to learn about each of you, as you are the people whose skills, passion, kindness, creative thinking, and energy make the Karsh Center all it can be for our Koreatown community. As someone who grew up at the Temple and found a professional home in the nonprofit world, I can’t imagine a limit to what we can accomplish for and with our neighbors.

Beyond attending Northwestern University and spending extended time in Central America, my home has always been Los Angeles. I’m in love with our city and committed to finding solutions to the challenges facing our community. My Master’s in nonprofit leadership and management coupled with experience working with UCLA’s Youth & Family Programs, Westside JCC, and Fostering Media Connections have shown me the impact that can result when individuals come together for common goals. I’m excited to work with each of you and help the Karsh Center feel like a home for every member of our congregation, as well as for our vibrant Koreatown neighbors.

Religious School

Summer News and Notes

It might seem a surprise to some, but the summer months in the Religious School office are both busy and bustling. Often we hear, “Oh, you guys are here?” or “What are you doing here?” The difference during these long summer days is our focus. We spent the early days of summer reviewing and reflecting on the past year, and the majority of our weeks this summer renewing and refocusing our efforts on our b’rit with one another and with our school community. Staff development, curriculum development, systems improvements and effective parent communication were just a few of our deep dives. Joyfully, many of our deep dives have produced big splashes of ideas and implementation that we hope become tangible ripples of exciting energy, enthusiasm, and learning experiences for our students and families.

Helping us are our newest team members, Emily Weisberg, Director of Teen Programs, and Lisa Alpern, Associate Director of Religious School. Having just received her doctorate in Educational Leadership with a focus in Educational Psychology from USC, Emily brings over 15 years of experience in youth leadership education and programming. During the past two years, Lisa has transformed the b’nei mitzvah preparation experience for our students and families. She will continue with that part of her portfolio as well as join the Religious School team as the principal of our Glazer Campus on Sunday mornings. Both Emily and Lisa bring passionate commitment to Jewish education and community building. As we welcome them to our program, we are excited to also welcome so many new families to our school!

While there are still a few weeks left for you to grab your beach towels and revel in the slower summer days, we are busy preparing to welcome you back. Please remember how important it is for you to read your RScoop when it hits your inbox at 4:00 p.m. on the first Sunday of each month. The website includes our calendar for the year, and we are here and available to answer all of your questions. Our first Sunday back on the Irmas Campus is September 16. We begin on the Glazer Campus Sunday, September 23.

Cooking for the Community

Emily Bragin, Brawerman Elementary Alum, recently graduated from Marlborough School and is attending Boston University in the fall. Below, she details the formation of her and Dani Sarraf’s (fellow Brawerman Elementary Alum attending Washington University in St. Louis in the fall) self-started Cooking for the Community club.

At Marlborough School where I recently graduated, Dani Sarraf (Brawerman Elementary Class of 2012 alumna) and I worked hard in the creation of a club called Cooking for the Community. It originated from our shared passions for cooking and helping others in our community. The club started while we were in Grade 7 simply as a means for us—and our friends—to bake easy recipes at school. As we grew older, we wanted the club to mature, to have a greater purpose. So, at the beginning of our sophomore year, it evolved into also becoming a food-based community service.

As it’s grown, Cooking for the Community has enhanced service opportunities available to students at our school, such as adding a cookie-decorating element to brown-bag lunch-making sessions. We’ve also organized snack-pack-making sessions, and the results of these were donated to the Downtown Women’s Center. We also worked with Alexandria House, a shelter for women and children living in poverty. We had the opportunity to go to its facility and cook a large meal for the residents. After cooking the meal, we were able to sit down with the residents, talk with them, and hear their incredible stories.

Recently, Cooking for the Community hosted a brunch at Marlborough’s Head of School’s residence that raised money for L.A. Kitchen, which provides culinary training for formerly incarcerated people. L.A. Kitchen also uses imperfect produce that restaurants would otherwise discard and makes meals to donate to places that aid those in need, such as schools and senior homes. We also visited L.A. Kitchen’s facilities and worked alongside the people in its programs to help them prepare meals.

We’ve enjoyed watching Cooking for the Community grow and mature, as we have, and we’re so proud of creating it at Marlborough. We are grateful to Brawerman for instilling in us the value of giving back to the community.

Choosing Judaism - Innovative Pathway to Conversion

A new class begins October 26 for Choosing Judaism, An 8-Week Immersive Journey to Becoming a Jew. Choosing Judaism is a free, innovative program leading to conversion that was introduced with great success this past Spring. Inspired by the personal journeys of people choosing to become Jews and determined find a way to align the conversion process with busy 21st Century lives, Rabbi Shapiro with your Temple clergy developed Choosing Judaism. The first eight-week immersive session demonstrated a rigorous program that intensifies learning, meaning, and engagement as we welcome participants into the family of Jewish people.

Now that this novel pathway to Judaism is available, please let family members, friends, and acquaintances who may not have been born or raised in a Jewish home know that they have an opportunity to choose Judaism. Contact Denise Magelinick at dmagelinick@wbtl.org for more information.

Jennifer Winberg Cartwright, a member of the first group of Choosing Judaism students, tells her background story and describes her experience.

A Personal Story

“Growing up as a kid, people would ask if I was Jewish, despite my maiden last name. I did a DNA test, and learned I have no Ashkenazi DNA. My only exposure to Judaism growing up in Texas was going to a friend’s bat mitzvah in middle school. It was fun! As fate would have it, I met my now husband while on a vacation trip to New York City in 2011. He came from a large Jewish family from Great Neck, and the first time I met his extended family was at a Passover seder. As the years went by, I went to more Passover seders, began celebrating Chanukah.
Opens Second Session

and when we moved to L.A. in 2013, started going to High Holy Days at Wilshire Boulevard Temple, where his family have been members since he was a kid. After we got married and were discussing starting a family, I decided that I wanted to convert. I wanted to understand my husband’s heritage. I wanted to know the meaning behind the holidays. And I wanted to give our future family the foundation and community my husband had growing up.

When my mother-in-law sent me Rabbi Shapiro’s email about the new conversion program, I was excited. I had a lot to learn (and still do), but Choosing Judaism has been a great way to start my journey. I particularly appreciate the structure of the program—a mix of reading, discussions, lectures, and services. All my questions were addressed. I’ve been taught by every rabbi at the Temple! I even got to go to spend a weekend at camp!

Making Artful Memories

The Early Childhood Centers of Wilshire Boulevard Temple hosted a joint art show in conjunction with Kadima (graduation ceremony) this past June. Our graduating classes, from both the Erika J. Glazer and Mann Family centers, displayed their artwork in Gold Gallery at the Glazer Campus. Each class presented a display of creations made in different art mediums that represented their yearlong study.

One classroom studied cruise ships—how they move, how they’re constructed, parts of a ship, onboard activities. During this exploration of cruise ships, ECC parent and expert engineer, Dorit Haroni visited and led a discussion about how ships sink and float. Then the children embarked on a journey to construct their own cruise ship: one group worked on the exterior, another on the interior, and the last on the ship’s amenities, together ultimately creating a unique model that represents their knowledge gained through the learning process.

Another classroom, referring to themselves as “garden ambassadors,” showcased ideas about taking care of their garden. After observing the garden on several occasions, the children took a particular interest in the pieces of trash scattered among the plant beds. They felt it was important to spread what they learned about how to best care for and protect our school gardens for generations to come. They created a script and video to inform the community of the best practices in caring for the garden. Their ideas reflect the empathy and love they have for the garden, and the overall experience allowed them to utilize their knowledge in a way that empowered them to have an impact on the community. The children truly became the garden ambassadors of our nursery school.

In addition to the collaborative class displays, each graduating child at the Glazer ECC created an individual challah cover; and at the Mann Family ECC, each made a unique mezuzah. These items represent the exploration of Jewish identity that takes place throughout a child’s journey through our schools. As the children move on from our nursery school to enter a new chapter of their lives, we are certain that the challah covers and mezuzot will serve as reminders of who they are, where they came from, and how to carry on the Jewish values and traditions they were introduced to here at Wilshire Boulevard Temple.

LUCY BURTON
August 4, 2018
Lucy is the daughter of Katie Lipsitt and Mark Burton; the granddaughter of JoAnn Burton and the late Julian Burton; Martin Lipsitt and the late Judy Lipsitt.
Family Welcomer: Ben Burton, brother.
Tikkun Olam Project: I volunteer monthly at dog adoptions and make homemade sweet potato biscuits. All proceeds from the biscuits go back to A Purposeful Rescue to help dogs that need medical care or special food.
Why was your Tikkun Olam project meaningful to you? I deeply love animals and want to help them in any way possible.
What do you commit to doing after you become a bat mitzvah to make the world a better place? I want to continue to attend monthly dog adoptions and to be a madrachim, and help out kids in a classroom setting next year.

JOSH KLEIN
August 11, 2018
Josh is the son of Joey and Wendy Klein; the grandson of Harry and Renny Klein; Jacqueline Moss and the late Murray Moss.
Family Welcomers: Ryan and Makenzie Moss, cousins.
Tikkun Olam Project: I provide clothes, blankets, bibs, and caps for the premature babies in the NIC (Neonatal Intensive Care) Unit at Cedars-Sinai. I also plan to donate money from my bar mitzvah to the NIC Unit.
Why was your Tikkun Olam project meaningful to you? I was in the NIC Unit for close to a month, and I am so grateful for everything the doctors, nurses, and caregivers did for me to help me continue on my healthy journey.
What do you commit to doing after you become a bar mitzvah to make the world a better place? I commit to being involved, with my time, effort, and money, to charities that touch my heart and make a difference to the world.

LAUREN MESERVE
August 18, 2018
Lauren is the daughter of Dete and Paul Meserve; the granddaughter of the late Sarah and Gordon Hultmark; the late Franklin and Elisabeth Meserve.
Family Welcomers: Ben and Jacob Meserve, brothers.
Tikkun Olam Project: I’ve been volunteering at Karsh Family Social Service Center for the past year. In addition, I collect toiletries and other personal items to donate to the Karsh Center.
Why was your Tikkun Olam project meaningful to you? Through the Karsh Center, I’ve been able to help those in our community who need groceries from our Food Pantry as well as other important services provided, such as dental care, vision care, counseling, and legal help.
What do you commit to doing after you become a bar mitzvah to make the world a better place? I will continue to volunteer for important social justice organizations like the Karsh Center and find ways to help the homeless and the poor. I also want to help animal rescue organizations care for abandoned animals and find homes for them.

JACOB “JAKE” COHEN
August 18, 2018
Jake is a graduate of Brawerman Elementary School at Wilshire Boulevard Temple.
Jake is the son of Brandon and Karen Cohen; the grandson of Mike and Shelly Cohen; Stewart and Susie Lieberman.
Tikkun Olam Project: Insulin for Life is an international organization that helps people with Type 1 Diabetes who are without medical supplies or resources. I have been sending additional, unused supplies to the organization to share with those who would otherwise be unable to adequately treat their Type 1 Diabetes.
Why was your Tikkun Olam project meaningful to you? I feel fortunate to have the medical support and resources that are not available to others in poorer countries around the world, and this gives me the opportunity to help those less fortunate than myself.
What do you commit to doing after you become a Bar Mitzvah to make the world a better place? I am committed to always helping those less fortunate than myself. In addition to continuing to donate extra insulin supplies as part of my Tikkun Olam Project, I care deeply about helping the homeless. I intend to volunteer my time and energy to causes that will help decrease homelessness, especially for kids, in the Los Angeles area.

JORDANA GOLDSTEIN
August 25, 2018
Jordana is the daughter of Deborah Dragon and Justin Goldstein; the granddaughter of Carol and Leon Dragon; Myrna Silton-Goldstein and Gerald Feifer; David Goldstein.
Family Welcomer: Amelia Goldstein, sister.
Tikkun Olam Project: I have been involved with the Museum of Tolerance, as a docent, and the Los Angeles Museum of the Holocaust (LAMOTH) for the past three years. I recently participated in its Witness Theater program, in which I, and my fellow students, spent time with four survivors learning their stories, and then creating and performing original plays based on what we had learned, to an audience of nearly 600 people. It was an incredible opportunity to educate many about the personal impact the Holocaust had on individuals and families. I am currently working with the LAMOTH to create material for Grades 4–6 students that the museum will be able to share with young visitors and schools.
Why was your Tikkun Olam project meaningful to you? Holocaust education is important to me personally, because two of my great-grandparents are Holocaust survivors. I am lucky enough to know my great-grandfather, and I feel very proud to be a part of ensuring that survivors’ stories are never forgotten.
What do you commit to doing after you become a bat mitzvah to make the world a better place? I definitely plan to continue my relationship with the LAMOTH, being involved with Holocaust education. I also know that the lessons of the Holocaust are important to remember throughout our lives, and I will strive to practice tolerance and open-mindedness, always being an upstander.

Welcome to Our New Cantor, Lisa Peicott

We are happy to officially welcome Cantor Lisa Peicott to Wilshire Boulevard Temple! A classically trained soprano, Cantor Peicott earned her undergraduate and master’s degrees in Music from the UCLA Herb Alpert School of Music and was recently ordained at the Academy for Jewish Religion—California. She joins us after spending the past five years of her cantorial career at Sinai Temple. In her time there, she taught trope and t’filah, led Shabbat and High Holiday services, and created the Sinai Temple Meshorerim choir, composed of Grade 3–7 students. Cantor Peicott was also a pivotal part of Sinai’s b’nei mitzvah program; as a tutor and mentor, she helped students build and maintain stronger connections to their Judaism. We could not be more excited to have Cantor Peicott with us!

Shinshinim, Noam and Tai, join Our Temple Family

We welcome two very special young adults this month: Noam and Tai, two recent Israeli high school graduates, arrive to begin a year of volunteer service as Shinshinim. Traditionally, Shinshinim embodies a crucial component in bridging the gap between diasporic Jews and Israelis. Through a program organized with the Jewish Agency for Israel (JAFI), they will live in our community and work in our schools and camps, serving as ambassadors for Israel. It is an amazing opportunity for them—and for us.

Rabbi David Eshel visited with Noam and Tai and their families earlier this summer in Israel, where he was introduced to their neighborhoods and to their favorite foods. Their arrival here in mid-August also presents an exceptional opportunity for the six families who will host Tai in participating in this unique cultural exchange, please contact Denise Magilnick at dmagilnick@wbtla.org or (424) 208-8930 to inform Rabbi Eshel of your interest.

There will be many ways throughout the year for the rest of our Temple family to welcome Noam and Tai, and we look forward to learning from one another.

Correction: Cantor Susan Caro served Wilshire Boulevard Temple with distinction for five years. A mention of Cantor Peicott as the Temple’s first female cantor in the June/July 2018 Bulletin was incorrect.
