Our brains are amazing. Once you work with the grain of the brain everything changes.

Andrew Wright

Andrew's spent 25 years working in secondary schools. He's been an acting head, deputy and SENDCO, starting his career a quarter of a century ago as a biology teacher. He also has an MA in education research and is a Specialist Leader in Education. He's passionate about the power of neuroscience to transform students, parents and teachers' understanding of themselves.

Andrew says; "In the last 10 years we've learnt more about the brain than we have in the last 10,000. This knowledge is new to parents and teachers alike. The science is absolutely fascinating. And it transforms what we do. Once you've understood how the brain works it's impossible to return to the naive state. As a result you'll never look at yourself or your children the same way again."

Andrew, and his company, Action Your Potential, are on a mission to take this knowledge and spread the good news far and wide. His aim is nothing less than to transform the experience of being a 21st century teacher, parent and student and in the process help every young person to achieve his or her potential.
