Independent Contractor Test

To sign a contract for services with Franklin Pierce, an individual must meet all parts of the six-part test. If there is any one of the six parts that are not met, the individual does not qualify as an independent contractor and would need to go through the hiring process as an employee. Please circle each number below to indicate the individual meets the independent contractor criteria.

Washington State Six Part Test:

1. Control of work – If the District directs the work details (when, how and where), then the person should be an employee and not put on a personal services contract.
2. Degree of supervision – If supervised, then the person should be an employee.
3. District business – IF work involved is part of the District's normal business, then the person should be an employee.
4. Equipment – If the District furnishes equipment, supplies, etc. for doing the work, then likely an employee.
5. Place of business – When the person maintains a separate business location and has a business license, likely an independent contractor.
6. Duration of work – If the relationship can be terminated by one or both parties, likely an independent contractor. Even part time or seasonal work can be seen as making an employee relationship.
