Letter from the HEAD OF SCHOOL

Dear Friends,

This Report on Philanthropy chronicles the remarkable support that you have provided to the School during an extraordinary year. Sidwell Friends has endured many challenges over our long history, but never have we had to carry the compounded emotional weight of a pandemic, an economic crisis, and the enduring specter of racism.

As always, you have rallied around our mission: pledging financial resources, volunteering time, and sharing truths that have taught us where we need to strengthen our efforts. I am profoundly grateful for your service, which makes us an extraordinary learning community after the manner of Friends.

What lessons have we learned over the past year?

Resilience. When we began the Distance Learning Program in March, we embarked on an uncertain journey. Teachers courageously adapted to the new environment, making tremendous sacrifices to continue to serve and inspire students. Staff members improvised new systems and ways to economize. Students responded by making masks for healthcare workers and conducting food drives. No matter the challenge, Sidwell Friends rises to the occasion.

Generosity. Parents, alumni, faculty, and staff invested time to maintain culture and programs despite distance by connecting on text chains and participating in virtual celebrations and Meetings for Worship. When the pandemic forced us to cancel A Night for Scholars, the community responded to an urgent call to action, raising more than $400,000 online in 48 hours so that the School could extend additional aid for families affected by COVID-19 (see page 25).

Transparency and Focus. The Board's decision to accept a Paycheck Protection Program Loan (PPP) demonstrated remarkable commitment to our faculty and staff and, by extension, our students. The decision was not without controversy, and the response from some alumni illustrated that the School needs to be proactive in communicating the key components of our financial model. We also learned that 13 Friends schools accepted PPP loans worth $1 million or more—a disproportionate representation among independent schools that accepted loans. That is because Friends schools have comparably modest endowments and a reliance on tuition that makes our institutions more vulnerable to potential shifts in enrollment patterns. In fact, our need for the loan was grounded in long-standing Quaker tradition that sought to provide immediate relief rather than long-term strategies for financial aid. We must focus on building enduring financial strength, because without a sizable endowment, it is difficult to weather the storm.

Truth-Seeking and Truth-Telling. We are thankful to those alumni, parents, and students who, in the wake of racist violence against Black Americans, identified moments when the School failed to deliver on its mission of equality. We appreciate their willingness to speak their truth.

We listened, reaffirming to this community our commitment to creating an equitable, anti-racist environment for all of our students. Our newly established partnership with Howard University promises to support our work in equity and justice. So, too, have donors, who have been quick to augment these efforts by giving generously toward endowing the faculty chair in African and African American Studies (see page 11). Donors also continue to fund the Upton Street renovations, where the Center for Ethical Leadership will give students an opportunity to engage more deeply in social justice work, and the Center for Teaching and Learning will expand our equity, justice, and community commitment through professional and curricular development.

Continuing Revelation. Sidwell Friends must always embrace the Quaker framework of continuing revelation by demonstrating a willingness to learn from the past and embrace the challenge of creating a better future. We must never stop reimagining our School. Your generosity, which moves us toward our long-term campus development and financial goals, animates the essential values of resilience, truth-seeking, and truth-telling in our community. And it ceaselessly inspires us to do both more and better, today and tomorrow.

In friendship and with gratitude,

BRYAN GARMAN
Head of School

Letter from the CLERK OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Dear Friends,

During the past several months, the Sidwell Friends community and wider world have been confronted with uncertainty and a myriad of challenges wrought by rapidly changing global events.

While the confluence of health, economic, and social justice crises were unanticipated, the Board of Trustees is honored to work alongside you in supporting our students, faculty, staff, and families through these unprecedented times.

We have been inspired by your generosity over the past year, and by the many ways our community has united in support of one another and friends in need.

The events of this year have affirmed the importance of our current comprehensive campaign as a beacon guiding us toward our long-term vision for the School. The Annual Fund, a core component of this campaign, enabled us to rapidly direct funds toward online technologies and additional financial aid so that all students could continue learning, even as campuses closed. As recent demonstrations have brought into relief the racial injustices and inequities woven into our institution, campaign donors are helping us lay the groundwork for the compassionate and anti-racist initiatives we are implementing.

On behalf of my fellow trustees and the entire community, thank you for rising to the challenge of this moment. The extraordinary generosity recognized on the following pages is a testament to your belief in the School, and we are truly grateful.

Thank you for your ongoing commitment to Sidwell Friends.

In friendship,

David Milner '86
Clerk of the Board of Trustees

Letter from the CLERK OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

Dear Friends,

During the 2019/20 year, Sidwell Friends continued to practice disciplined management of operations and oversight of the endowment in order to provide the resources necessary to support an extraordinary independent school program. The COVID-19 pandemic and associated economic uncertainty presented a significant financial-management challenge that we continue to navigate. Sidwell Friends partially offset unforeseen additional expenses associated with the pandemic by meaningfully reducing operating expenses. As mentioned in earlier communications, the School faced additional limitations from restrictions on the use of the endowment coupled with the current debt commitments.

I am grateful to my fellow trustees and the dedicated volunteers and professional staff who provided extraordinary leadership and expertise during this time. Our highest priorities have been to maintain a robust and safe learning environment for all of our students and to provide continued employment and access to healthcare during this pandemic for our faculty and staff. Ensuring that these priorities are met has required unusual actions that received intense deliberation. We appreciate the tremendous impact the PPP Loan provided during our last fiscal year: It supported our commitment to full employment.

Sidwell Friends will continue to steer through the increasingly complex and ever-changing landscape of the 2020/21 year. Our ultimate success this year and into the future will depend on the ongoing commitment and generous philanthropy of all of the School's stakeholders: parents of current students, alumni and their parents, faculty, staff, and friends.

Included in this report is the list of named endowed funds that provide perpetual support for programs such as financial aid and faculty compensation. We are grateful to these donors and to all Annual Fund donors for their gifts for current operations; through their generosity, they are ensuring that the robust learning experience we prize continues for all students in this next year and for generations to come.

With appreciation,

Michael Pickrum P'19, P'21

With our GRATITUDE

When students, parents, faculty, and staff look back at the 2019/20 school year, they will remember the stunning ways in which a pandemic transformed our communities, our nation, and our planet. They will remember the demands for racial equity and justice that echoed through the smallest towns and largest cities in this country.

And they will remember your generosity, which enabled Sidwell Friends to transition—seemingly overnight—to a virtual campus. You ensured that as physical environments changed, teaching and learning continued in digital classrooms and online platforms. You supported families who, facing unexpected financial hardships, sought financial aid. You bolstered student service projects so that they could continue to live their Quaker values when their communities needed them most.

From the joyous first day, when students surged onto campus full of energy and excitement, to the poignant online graduation and moving-up ceremonies that marked the end of an extraordinary year, you were there, fueling the mission and vision of the School. This year has reinforced what we've always known: You strengthen the Sidwell Friends community through your generosity of spirit.

Thank you for empowering students to let their lives speak with service and significance, even in the most challenging of times.

LEADERSHIP GIVING

Thank you to the philanthropic leaders whose generosity inspires others and enables Sidwell Friends to fulfill its mission. You build the School's financial strength by ensuring that Sidwell Friends has diversified sources of income and can rely less on tuition for operating expenses and high-priority programs. Your philanthropy matters; whether you are providing long-term investments or current-year funds, you generate support for the School's most urgent needs. We are grateful for your leadership within the School's philanthropic community.

We have been inspired to give to Sidwell Friends because we have been blown away by the quality of the faculty; we want the School to have the means to retain them, properly compensate them, and give them opportunities to stay at the top of the profession. We are also incredibly excited about opportunities like the Center for Ethical Leadership, which will allow the School to engage with the broader community and ensure that the values that have helped shape our daughter are more firmly entrenched for others as she leaves Sidwell Friends.

Windows, Mirrors, and Buried Histories

A new effort to decolonize the curriculum with the African and African American Studies Chair

“Our history did not start with slavery, and our future did not die with Dr. Martin Luther King.”

This is how DeDe Lea’s (P ’22, ’25) history lesson begins. And when Lea talks about African and African American history and culture, you begin to recognize the limitations of conventional narratives taught in schools. She reminds you that the Moors ruled in the Iberian peninsula for over 700 years—nearly three times as long as the United States has been a country. She rattles off the names of paradigm-shifting African American doctors, inventors, entrepreneurs, politicians, and philanthropists. She describes African kings and queens ruling over civilizations whose influence can still be felt around the world.

Lea also notes the danger of erasure, as she recounts the story of a young man who grew up in the Greenwood area of Tulsa—the affluent Black neighborhood that was once the site of Black Wall Street—without ever learning of the sweeping racial violence that razed that community in 1921.

In this and most African studies, Upper School principal Mamadou Guèye sees the “distorting lens of colonialism” at work: “The curriculum that is taught in so many institutions was not written by Africans or people of African descent. Before colonization, before enslavement, there was an Africa with deeply rooted traditions, languages, and cultures that are not being taught.”

DeDe and Dallas Lea feel an urgency to address the problem of distorted and buried histories.

“There’s a Zimbabwean proverb: ‘Until the lion tells his side of the story, the tale of the hunt will always glorify the hunter,’” DeDe Lea shared. “Well, the lion has arrived.”

The Lea Family: Daniel '25, Dede, Dallas, and Dallas '22.

Along with Simone and Wayne Frederick (P ’24), the Leas began by proposing an endowed African and African American Studies Chair in 2018. Simone Frederick explains why: “Our kids have often questioned why they didn’t learn more about the African American experience and history at school, so we felt it necessary to make it a reality for them and students that follow.”

As it turned out, Head of School Bryan Garman had been considering such a position to achieve the School’s strategic goals of inspiring ethical leadership and welcoming a wider community.

“The Leas and the Fredericks are generous, thoughtful people who appreciate the need to teach African and African American history and culture, who know that our understanding of the past shapes the present,” Garman said. “They recognize that our students cannot be responsible, well-informed citizens without knowing this history and the impact it has had on society.”

Like the Señora Guillermina Medrano de Supervía Endowed Chair for Spanish and Latin American Studies, the African and African American Studies Chair is one of the strategic initiatives the School is expediting to “take clear and purposeful steps to build a compassionate and anti-racist community.” In addition to this endowed chair, the School has formed both a partnership with Howard University to elevate the teaching of race, social justice, and democracy throughout the divisions; and a complementary African and African American Studies Advisory Council populated by parents and alumni with expertise in this area.

Frederick noted that “this chair is especially significant in the current environment, where racial discourse is of paramount importance.”

“If we hope to unravel the threads of racism and racist violence built into the fundamental economic structures of this country, we need to help our students to recognize, in age-appropriate ways, how they became systematically entangled,” Garman added.

In order to jumpstart these goals and generate momentum for the endowed African and African American Studies Chair, the Leas and the Fredericks provided foundational funding for the position. Now, they hope that others in the Sidwell Friends community who care deeply about elevating African and African American voices will likewise commit to fully funding this position.

“Members of the community have expressed a desire for something like this for some time,” said Frederick. “Now they can help us make it a reality by contributing to this endowed chair so that faculty, staff, and students can continue to be educated on this topic for years to come.”

“Endowing the African and African American Studies Chair underscores its centrality to our academic programs and affirms that every Sidwell Friends student needs to graduate with an understanding of these perspectives and histories,” Garman said. “Like the Leas and Fredericks, those contributing funds for these positions are making certain that our commitment to teaching these essential areas of study will have permanent financial support.”

Once fully funded, the chair will guide the School in developing decolonized curricula that will open windows onto unexplored cultures and transform all students into global citizens and leaders. And just as importantly, it will hold mirrors for African and African American students to see themselves reflected in historical narratives that have long denied voices, agency, and representation to people of African descent.

“It’s important to the health of African and African American students at Sidwell Friends to know and understand their rich history and lineage, and to recognize how much our cultures have contributed to the world,” Dallas Lea said.

Wayne A.I. Frederick (P' 24), president of Howard University and Sidwell Friends trustee, speaks with Head of School Bryan Garman before signing the partnership agreement between Howard and Sidwell Friends that will elevate the teaching of race, social justice, and democracy throughout the School's divisions. To learn more about this partnership, go to sidwell.edu/howard.

When Guèye considers the growth of the Chinese Studies Program over the past few decades, he imagines what a world-class African and African American Studies initiative will look like at Sidwell Friends. “There’s limitless potential for where this program can go,” Guèye said. “And it starts with the chair, who will help recruit a diverse faculty and train our teachers in decolonizing minds, decolonizing the curriculum, and demystifying the Eurocentric framework in research. The chair will set the direction and develop the program in an age-appropriate way, across divisions and over the course of many years.”

The Leas and the Fredericks, too, imagine how a program helmed by the African and African American Studies Chair can become a model for secondary schools across the country. Yet DeDe and Dallas Lea also can see that influence spreading through the students and alumni who will benefit from this program.

“Our hope is that all students will leave Sidwell Friends with a better appreciation of African and African American history,” DeDe Lea said. “When they’re in a room with people who aren’t as historically versed or culturally competent, Sidwell Friends students can say, ‘Let me tell you what actually happened.’”

If you are interested in making a gift to help fully fund the African and African American Chair at Sidwell Friends, please contact Mary K. Carrasco, Assistant Head of School for Advancement at carrascom@sidwell.edu.

THE SECOND CENTURY SOCIETY

Marriage. Children. New jobs. New communities. More laugh lines and gray hair. Road trips and travel around the world. Retirement. So much can happen in a decade, but Second Century Society members' dedication to Sidwell Friends remains constant. Thank you for making a difference in the lives of Sidwell Friends students by giving for 10 or more consecutive years.

I have had the opportunity to observe and participate in Sidwell Friends for decades as a parent, trustee, and community member. This close look has strengthened my faith in Sidwell Friends' commitment to quality education for a diverse community and its ability to nurture young lives. I hope my gift helps Sidwell Friends continue its journey as a place respectful of all people and our planet, where faculty and staff as well as students are constantly learning. Our future will require diverse groups of people working together harmoniously in imaginative ways. It is inspiring to see Sidwell Friends empowering young minds to search for their roles as contributors to the greater good.

THOMAS AND FRANCES SIDWELL SOCIETY

The Thomas and Frances Sidwell Society recognizes the more than 150 individuals who have made the thoughtful decision of including Sidwell Friends School in their estate plans. Modern-day bequests follow in the tradition of Thomas Sidwell, who survived his wife, Frances, and left his estate in the care of the Sidwell Friends Board of Trustees in 1936. Bequests, charitable trusts, gift annuities, and other planned-giving arrangements continue to bolster the School's financial stability and have significant bearing on every aspect of the work and future of Sidwell Friends.

Extending a legacy of ethical leadership through the
Robert L. Smith Family Scholar Program

Newcomers to Sidwell Friends School hear “RLS” thrown about often; it’s shorthand for a place where the community gathers for assemblies, talent shows, and, of course, Meeting for Worship. But the Robert L. Smith Meeting Room bears more than Robert Smith’s name—or his initials. It is, in a way, a representation of his essence and commitment to Sidwell Friends and Quaker values.

“I think that Bob’s legacy in a lot of ways is embodied in the Meeting Room, which is the spiritual center of the School,” said Head of School Bryan Garman. “But it’s also emblematic in the mission of the School in the sense that it is consistent with the testimony of environmental stewardship. It’s a place where we worship, but the way it’s constructed speaks to the School values as well.”

Now, thanks to a recent $2 million endowment from an anonymous donor, the values that Smith so embodied will be recognized forever through the Robert L. Smith Family Scholar Program. It is an opportunity for Sidwell Friends to honor Robert Smith’s legacy by promoting the role of Quaker values in the school community and to create a more inclusive experience for all students by reflecting the broader community.

Robert L. Smith Family Scholars will be Upper School students who demonstrate financial need, as well as academic promise; intellectual and social curiosity; a family supportive of their rigorous education; and an interest in solving problems and service to others. Their scholarships will cover their full tuition, as well as additional, non-tuition needs that will allow students to participate fully in the life of the School: book and technology fees; home internet access; School-related travel; costs related to college visits; even prom tickets and yearbooks.

“Scholarships allow Sidwell Friends to open its doors to a broader spectrum of students,” Smith said, noting that more than just those receiving the scholarships benefit from their award. “Diversity in its every dimension—including economic diversity—enriches the learning and experience of every student. We learn best and we learn most from those who bring different experiences and perspectives.”

Like the Mari Schleuning Scholarship Fund, which also provides comprehensive scholarships to an Upper School cohort, the Robert L. Smith Family Scholar Program supports the School in achieving the goals in its strategic plan. “One of the core goals of the Strategic Plan is to ‘inspire ethical leadership’ through new programs that will explore this challenge in the Quaker tradition,” said Geoffrey Smith ’77, Robert Smith’s son and a current Sidwell Friends trustee. “These programs will become valuable resources as the School pursues new approaches to teaching anti-racism and social justice, and inspiring students to become truth-seekers and peacemakers throughout their lives.”

In promoting equity, justice, and Quaker values, the Robert L. Smith Family Scholar program evokes Smith’s earliest days at Sidwell Friends. Smith arrived at the School in 1965 and found challenges that no other head of school faced. The School’s facilities were crumbling, there was crushing debt, and salaries were low. On a larger scale, protests for civil rights and racial justice were sweeping across the country, the Vietnam War was ramping up, and the counterculture movement was challenging the ways Americans thought—all this as the Board of Trustees grappled with fully integrating the School.

“I think they were afraid to confront the issue,” Smith later wrote of his interview for the head of school position in his 1999 book A Quaker Book of Wisdom. “The Board was deeply conservative and still very tentative about integration.” After the School partially integrated in 1956 and fully integrated in 1964, with the first Black students enrolling in the Upper School, Smith presided over the graduation of the first five Black alumni in 1967.

“He was a transformational head, in the sense that he was head of school during a very turbulent time,” said Garman. “Bob had a very important impact on making sure the School was focused on questions of social justice. He knew that Quakerism brought a complexity to issues—and I think he reveled in the complexity and in the complicated nature of learning.”

Smith’s daughter echoed the sentiment. “Dad was deeply committed to reinforcing and solidifying the Quaker tradition of Sidwell Friends School,” said Katie Smith Sloan ’73. “He believed deeply in the basic humanistic Quaker precepts of valuing racial and gender equality, promoting social justice, and advocating for nonviolence. These beliefs guided his leadership as head of school.”

During his tenure, Smith refocused Sidwell Friends on the Quaker values upon which the School was founded, while recognizing that those values can—and should—shift. “A good school is one that is constantly engaged in self-examination, in improving itself, in becoming wiser in its ability to both teach and inspire,” he wrote in A Quaker Book of Wisdom.

“Every principle of Quakerism, every interaction, every concept of justice was open to interrogation,” Garman said. “He really embodied that personal responsibility of Quakerism to find your own truth around any given issue, and that’s really part of the DNA of the School.”

“It is an honor and a privilege” to have a scholarship that bears his name, said Robert Smith. “I hope that Smith Family Scholars will take away from their experience an understanding that there is that of God in everyone, and that for Quakers this has been a springboard for action and an ideal that inspires the active pursuit of peace and social justice.”

ANNUAL FUND

The Annual Fund is the cornerstone of all fundraising efforts for Sidwell Friends. Together, alumni, parents, parents of alumni, grandparents, trustees, faculty, staff, and friends purposefully unite through gifts that benefit every student, every day.

As Annual Fund donors, members of the Sidwell Friends community continually reveal the power of collective giving as you make your individual Annual Fund gifts. You provide unrestricted, flexible support for the educational experiences we value most: from faculty salaries, to new curriculum initiatives; from financial aid, to educational trips; from technology maintenance and upgrades, to athletic facilities and equipment. During this year's unprecedented challenges, your Annual Fund gifts enabled Sidwell Friends to rapidly direct funds to the School's most urgent needs, including financial aid, new technologies, and protective equipment. More than ever, we are grateful for your annual giving.

Something Old, Something New

Volunteers bring Fund-a-Scholar to the digital realm

When the School closed its campuses in March and postponed its annual A Night for Scholars, rumbles from the Sidwell Friends community began: What about the families with financial aid needs—needs that might grow during a pandemic and an economic downturn? How can we make sure that we are taking care of everyone in our community without the annual Fund-a-Scholar fundraising effort?

From the community's concern, 48 Hours for Scholars was born.

The plan was simple: Over a two-day period, Sidwell Friends parents, grandparents, alumni and their parents, faculty and staff, and other friends of the School would make gifts that would go directly toward financial aid. The School could look to past alumni challenges and parent text-a-thons as models for how to successfully overcome the difficulties that social distancing presented.

And the engine driving this campaign? Volunteers, who were more motivated than ever to make calls, send texts, and email community members to encourage their generosity.

"I have worked on A Night for Scholars from the time our family joined the Sidwell community," Maggie Prieto (P '14, '16, '20) said. Prieto was one of several A Night for Scholars volunteers who immediately rolled up their sleeves to help with the two-day effort.

"All of us in the community benefit from the diversity of experience, thought, and insight brought by members who come from as many different backgrounds as we find in our metro area," Prieto explained. "We know that a Sidwell Friends education is not accessible to many, and financial aid is one way to make it more accessible."

On May 27, as the 48-hour period began, volunteers set their sights on a fundraising goal of $250,000, which is what they had hoped to raise during this year's A Night for Scholars.

By the end of the first day, they were closing in rapidly on their goal. That's when they realized they might have underestimated just how determined their friends and former classmates were to support one another.

"Sidwell Friends is a special place to me, and I was fortunate enough to spend my entire childhood—14 years—as a Sidwell Friends student. As I reached out to other alumni, many of them felt similarly and chose to donate as well,"

Lindsay Johnson '07 said.

Some alumni shared on social media how others' generosity made their own educational experience possible. "It was only through the significant generosity of countless families that my brother and I were able to attend Sidwell Friends," Bruce Altevogt '94 (P '28, '30) wrote. "Now, as a parent, I can't imagine my kids having 23 percent of their friends—the current percentage of students who receive an average of $28,000 a year in aid—not being able to attend."

On the 48 Hours for Scholars website, where community members were making their gifts toward financial aid, donors offered matching funds to encourage community members they may never have met to give generously. Through good-natured challenges and "competitions" among current parents, alumni, and parents of alumni, the Sidwell Friends community channeled the spirit of unity they feel during A Night for Scholars: watching the Fund-a-Scholar total tick higher during the paddle raising, cheering one another on, working together to create opportunities for all students.

Social media posts leading up to and during the two days of giving generated enthusiasm from the community.

Outside of Maryland and Virginia, California (19) and New York (16) generated the most gifts.

When Judith Barnett (GP '26, '29) learned how important 48 Hours for Scholars was for families in need, she, Joanne Smith (GP '29, '31), and Aggie Aurbach (P '81, '86, GP '20, '22) rallied the Grandparents Steering Committee to match contributions on the second day: “We raised about $15,000 in just one day!” In response to this challenge, one grandparent, who had made her first gift to Sidwell Friends at the start of the campaign, doubled down with a second gift.

After the frenzy of generosity was over, the 36 volunteers whose efforts made 48 Hours for Scholars a success marveled at the results: $438,720 donated by 869 donors over two days. For some, the diversity of participants—alumni in the Class of 1958, students in the Class of 2030, parents from the Classes of 2000 and 2010 celebrating their children’s Reunion years—was as significant as the total amount raised.

“The high participation rate during our first 48-hour virtual challenge showed a strong commitment to the School’s mission, excellence, and compassion by the broad Sidwell Friends community,” Joanna Wang and Kevin Lu (P '22 and '24) said. “Together, we have just blazed a new trail for our scholars—and may they thrive in our community.”

As Prieto noted, this new incarnation of one of the School’s signature fundraising efforts for financial aid might just have a place even when campus reopens for good:

“I am gratified that 48 Hours for Scholars was so successful. #newfundraisingmodel!”

So much of what I do now in my profession, I learned from my time at Sidwell Friends: writing persuasively, putting forward ideas, respecting others, working as a team, handling adversity. I am inspired to give because I believe deeply in the mission of Sidwell Friends, and in the diversity, equity, and inclusion efforts the School is implementing. It's exciting to envision the School in five or 10 years.

I give to Sidwell Friends because the financial aid program ensures that the School's academic and co-curricular resources flow into communities across the DC region, regardless of socioeconomic status. I hope that my contributions as a donor and fundraiser help bridge the gap between deserving future leaders and a world-class education. As today's students become tomorrow's leaders, they will rely on the core beliefs they learned here. I look forward to seeing how the School's recent, unequivocal commitment to identifying and addressing racism, bigotry, and prejudice on campus—specifically anti-Blackness—will be implemented in the culture and curriculum.

Every year, I give to Sidwell Friends because the teachers, staff, and community raise our students to value how powerful their voices can be! The School instills in students the belief that an individual can make real change, tackle a problem head on, and be persistent until the change comes about. I am so proud of how my classmates, alumni, and current students take leadership seriously, think critically, and engage thoughtfully on the biggest issues facing our world today.

Upper School students dive into an edition of Horizon.

The Beat Goes On

How the Hutt family keeps the presses printing at Horizon

As COVID-19 shuttered the Upper School, the editors of Horizon faced a dilemma. With their board room locked, their reporters and editorial staff working in isolation, and their distribution methods interrupted, Horizon staff would have to make the leap to the digital realm and publish the first digital edition of the newspaper.

“Now, more than ever, we need journalism to keep us connected and informed,” editors-in-chief Abbey Kim '21 and Ben Fagell '20 wrote on May 7, 2020, in the online launch.

Peter '80, Kathy '79, and Everett '88 fondly remember their Sidwell Friends experiences, especially those on Horizon.

It's a sentiment shared by Peter Hutt '80 (P'15, '16, '19), who—along with his siblings Kathy '79, Sarah '82, and Everett '88—found purpose and passion while working on the school newspaper.

“When you produce news, you become a more educated consumer of it,” Peter Hutt reflected. “In some ways, it's harder than it was 30 years ago, but I still see Horizon students going through the process I did.”

For Hutt and his siblings, that included learning to follow leads, discern truth, and incorporate interviews into compelling narratives. It was a place to learn the ropes as freshmen and mentor younger students as seniors.

Although Kathy was the only Hutt sibling to become a professional journalist, “my parents were taken with the effect it had on all of us,” Peter Hutt recalled.

Peter Barton Hutt and Eleanor Hutt endowed the Hutt Family Fund in 1988 in support of the school newspaper, noting that “Horizon serves an important role in teaching academic skills, moral values, and the principles of democracy in a free society.” With income generated from both their initial gifts and additional contributions they have made since, including multiple gifts and pledges in 2020, members of the Hutt family have funded Horizon equipment, training, technologies, and distribution for over three decades.

The Hutt Family Fund also ensures that significant resources are directed annually to other Upper School activities. “In a way, it doesn't even matter what the activities are,” Hutt explained.

“Students need to have something to feel passionate about, something they do because they are deeply interested, not because the activities are easy or good for résumés.”

As Horizon's editors, reporters, and photographers begin to make the transitions to an online publication, there is still uncertainty about what lies ahead for the campus. What is certain is that Horizon will continue to publish as long as there are students eager to report, thanks to the Hutt family's investment.

And that's good news for Hutt, who still picks up a copy when he can: “I usually turn to the Letters to the Editors and the editorials, right after reading the front page. That's how you really get a feel for the life of the School.”

Sarah Hutt '82 and classmates work with Ellis Turner on an edition of Horizon.

It is an honor to give back to an institution and community that has given our family the life-long gifts of education, friendship, and foundational values. As an alumna, I have had the genuine privilege of experiencing a Sidwell Friends education first-hand. As a parent watching my own children learn and grow, I now have insight into the extraordinary leadership team, operational excellence, and profound care that goes in to delivering a Sidwell Friends education and helping students realize their singular and collective purpose and potential. The essence and mission of the School is shaping our students to not only meet this moment, but all those to come—with ethical leadership grounded in uncompromising integrity, commitment to equity and justice, searching curiosity, and critical thinking balanced by optimism.

We are inspired to support Sidwell Friends because of its unique pedagogical environment and longstanding commitment to exemplary social-equity values. As a family of color, we believe it is crucial that our children be inculcated with deep and lasting ethical precepts—particularly at this critical juncture in our children’s intellectual, social, and moral development, and in our nation’s history. An institution that provides both a superb education and exemplary civic values creates a priceless, lifelong benefit for individuals and society. That is what excites us most about Sidwell Friends: the nurturing, preservation, and consistent provision of these values to future generations of children. Only through the efforts of institutions such as Sidwell Friends will we continue to create candidates who have the capacity to act in the best interest of others as future leaders.

Looking at my adult children, both of whom were lifers at Sidwell Friends, I still see the ongoing influence of the School in the ways they respect others, are guided by a desire to improve society, and speak out about injustices. The School's focus on interdisciplinary studies and ethical leadership assures me that Sidwell Friends remains a unique learning environment that can shape society through a relevant and value-based educational experience.

Every year, I hope my gift helps at least one student have an opportunity to find something they will enjoy doing or revisit something they have found challenging before. I believe if we present opportunities for them to learn through different experiences, interactions, and education, it will equip them to express themselves comfortably to others.

We give to help Sidwell Friends support professional development and competitive salaries for faculty and staff, while also keeping its commitment to need-based financial aid for students. I am delighted that Sidwell Friends plans to bring all three divisions of the School to a unified campus. This will be a big step in strengthening interdivisional collaboration of faculty, staff, and students that will create a stronger learning environment and community.

Confidence AND Competence

How the Honorable Ann Winkelman Brown '55
Ethical Leadership Program Fund
gives bold, empathetic leaders a voice

For decades, the spring trip to Echo Hill Outdoor School has been a mainstay of the 4th grade experience—a place where students can put into practice the values of environmental stewardship they have explored throughout the school year.

Seeing 4th graders engage as environmental leaders during this annual trip inspired their teachers to think about new ways to empower students as they transitioned out of Lower School.

What if students had projects in which they could apply the skills, knowledge, and values they developed throughout Lower School to issues of environmental stewardship beyond Echo Hill? And what if they could apply them to other issues of equity and justice that captured their imaginations, such as those they explored in social justice groups and book club discussions?

Enter Ann Winkelman Brown '55 (P '80, '83), who is bringing the 4th grade team's vision to life through her endowed gift commitment. The Honorable Ann Winkelman Brown '55 Ethical Leadership Program Fund is designed to create leadership and civic engagement opportunities for students to listen deeply, act ethically, and live peacefully—beginning with the 4th grade capstone projects, an anchor program for the Center for Ethical Leadership. Like Senior Projects, these ethical leadership experiences will enable students to advocate competently and confidently for issues they find meaningful.

This new chapter in Brown's 71-year history with Sidwell Friends aligns with her previous experiences as a student, parent, and philanthropic leader at the School. Upon entering Sidwell Friends in 6th grade, she felt empowered by the School's "wonderfully, intellectually stimulating" atmosphere. She began to understand ethical leadership through early interactions with her "political, active, smart, and funny" classmates and teachers like Richard Abell, the 8th grade social studies teacher who introduced Brown to politics and advocacy.

At Meeting for Worship, she realized that anyone could emerge as a leader: "You heard ethical leadership from everyone standing up in Meetings: people who were speaking honestly, without it being from a pulpit or ritualized."

Perhaps it's only appropriate that Brown first met Lower School Principal Adele Paynter at an event for Hilary (P '97) and Chelsea ('97) Clinton's The Book of Gutsy Women.

The conversation on stage about female empowerment and ethical leadership paralleled the discussion between Brown and Paynter, who discussed how to best encourage Lower School students to flex their leadership muscles.

"I was particularly impressed by this program that was going to start really young, and would allow students to be creative and imaginative," Brown recalled. "My children [Cathy '80 and Laura '83] were Sidwell Friends lifers, and I know how important it is for students to learn about and practice leadership from a young age."

When Paynter speaks about this program, it's easy to understand why Brown was captivated. "This is a beautiful opportunity at the end of this portion of a child's journey for them to take all of their learning that they've had and put it into action in a project that gives them voice, agency, and power," Paynter said.

"In providing a Quaker education, our job is to prepare students so that they can go into the world, do good, and make the world a more just place."

This program is a chance for the 4th grade team—Kathryn Bauman-Hill (P '18, '26), Tere Cuesta, Barbara Davison (P '97, '01), Courtney Reynolds, Jami Tomik, and Edith Zhang '81 (P '17, '22)—to do that. "Our goal is to help students develop the knowledge, skills, and mindsets they need to be bold, empathic leaders who can take action on behalf of our common humanity," Reynolds said. "The world will continue to change, but we hope the values and virtues we nurture throughout students' Lower School experiences become deeply rooted in students' hearts and minds."

Fourth grade is an ideal time for these projects. Developmentally, students are focused on issues of fairness, justice, and equality in all aspects of their lives. They are more independent. They can develop inquiries, collect information from databases, and do basic research to answer their bigger questions.

"You see this in our food, educational, and social justice service learning groups," Tomik said. "They are activists and passionate about making a difference in the world."

"They don't need us to be next to them as they plan out the steps of their projects; they can drive it and it becomes theirs," Zhang added. "And that's what we want. We want kids who are walking the talk. It will be a powerful experience at the end of their time in Lower School, yes, but in the global view of their K-12 education, this demonstrates to them that they don't have to wait until they finish school to let their lives speak."

Over the summer, the 4th grade teachers collaborated to begin developing the curricula that will move this program from an idea to a reality. Bringing a learner's mindset to the challenge, they researched best practices in service and experiential learning; identified the key Learnings—to Know, to Do, to Be, and to Live with Others—that students will need to take action; and assessed their existing curricula through a Quaker lens of simplicity, so that the 4th grade educational experience flows purposefully toward this culminating project.

"The beauty of the yearlong program is that it's not limited to a culminating ethical leadership experience," Cuesta shared. "We are developing students as people so they can be ethical leaders, and as they apply their learning in a meaningful and authentic way through these projects, they will strengthen their belief in their own agency."

As the program launches, students will be encouraged to create a more just world through projects that speak to them. "This will tie in well to the Quaker testimonies they've explored throughout Lower School, the China curriculum of 4th grade, and the sustainability and stewardship lessons they explore in our gardening program," Bauman-Hill said.

Next up for this team is creating windows for students to glimpse unexpected opportunities. That's where alumni and parents can get involved. "There's a whole world of people we'd love to have come in and talk to our students," Reynolds said. "We are interested in mining our community for expertise and experiences they can share with students."

Of course, the 4th grade teachers are thankful for the involvement of one alumna in particular. "What Ann Winkelman Brown has done with her gift is gigantic," Zhang said. "It gives their projects importance. It makes them public. It shows the students that their voices matter, that people are listening to them and investing in their ideas."

And what are Brown's hopes for the program, in its first year and beyond?

"I am just hoping they are going to invite me out to see it at various stages! I'm always looking for a reason to visit Sidwell Friends."

Interested in getting involved in this program?

Here are a few ways you can support 4th Grade students as they develop their culminating projects:

- 1 Make a gift and support their education—every student, every day.
- 2 Share your expertise and help students hone their projects' scope and presentation.
- 3 Offer "windows" for students to glimpse possible areas for action.

ENDOWMENT

The Sidwell Friends Endowment sustains the stewardship of resources and our legacy for academic excellence. This critical foundation allows the School to attract and retain talented and diverse faculty; provide exceptional academic, arts, and athletic programs; and offer meaningful scholarship opportunities. Through investment, the endowment generates a steady and permanent source of income to advance the School's mission, which, in turn, supports not only the people, programs, and activities of Sidwell Friends, but grows long-term financial sustainability.

The Adler Family Fund

The Adler Family Fund was established in 2002 to support faculty salaries with a preference that the recipient be an Upper School teacher.

The African and African American Studies Endowed Faculty Chair

Sidwell Friends School seeks to endow a faculty chair in African and African American Studies, which will ensure that a gifted teacher with deep expertise in these fields is always a member of the faculty and available to students, peers, and parents. The establishment of this Chair will underscore the importance of these academic fields to the School and will enable the School to recruit highly qualified educators to this and other positions.

FRIENDS

The Sidwell Friends campuses changed in the spring of the 2019/20 year: empty hallways, still playgrounds, quiet lunchrooms. Meanwhile, bedrooms turned into classrooms and dining rooms into art studios.

Still, the spirit of community endured as students, alumni, parents, faculty, and staff found new ways to sustain relationships across distance and carried on the Sidwell Friends tradition of service.

Gabi '25 motivated her friends to help her reach an ambitious goal: making 15,000 miniature bars of soap to be distributed to hospitals, a short-term housing facility, and a youth homeless shelter.

Theo '24 packed “Hunger Halting Hero Kits,” which contained nonperishable foods that Cornerstones, a Virginia-based nonprofit supporting people in need, distributed to area residents facing food insecurity.

Camilla '32 and Georgina '30 continued long-standing Lower School service by making sandwiches and lunches—around 35 per week—for Martha’s Table to distribute to hungry DC-area residents. Later, Martha’s Table CEO Kim Ford '99 accepted five carloads of nonperishable donations that Sidwell Friends volunteers collected during the end-of-year dropoff of supplies and equipment.

Vidisha Dehejia Patel '81—a therapist specializing in children and young adults, as well as stress reduction—appeared on the Lives That Speak podcast to discuss how the COVID-19 pandemic affects the mental health of students and parents, and to offer suggestions to parents on coping in this difficult time.

Faced with the sudden end of their promising season, members of the robotics team Luke Primis '20, Kamran Rowhani '21, and Ian Palk '20 used 3D printers to produce face shields for medical and emergency personnel throughout the region.

Sophia '25 spent her spring break (and beyond) stitching cloth masks that she later distributed to medical centers and homeless shelters.

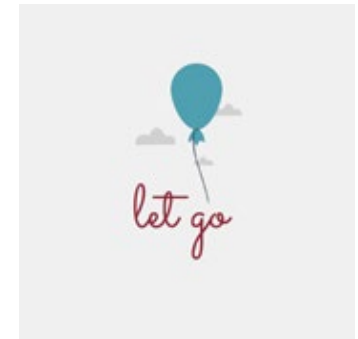

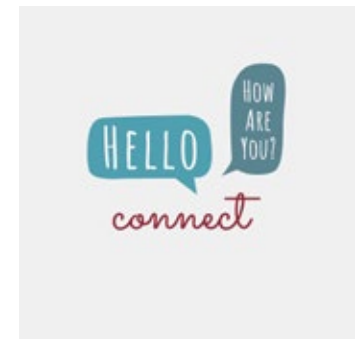

Aleksandr Kuzmenchuk '20

Families from the Class of 2021 delivered congratulations and yard signs to graduating seniors. Inspired by the juniors, about a dozen families from the Class of 2025 delivered balloons and Sidwell Friends foxes to 8th graders before their digital Moving Up ceremony.

In lieu of a formal graduation ceremony, Upper School Principal Mamadou Guèye surprised the Class of 2020 by personally delivering their diplomas to their homes.

Upon learning his 70th class Reunion was postponed, Toby Riley '50 called, emailed, and wrote letters to check in on every member of his class. Over a period of two weeks, he organized and hosted three virtual Reunions.

Trustee, teacher, and Friend Judy Brown (P '04) generated a series of quarantine queries for social media to help community members center and process their experiences.

CELEBRATING OUR VOLUNTEERS

Sidwell Friends is honored to host a dedicated network of volunteers who keep the School connected and engaged. From Next-to-New Sale champions to Alumni Leadership Giving Committee members, volunteers dedicate expertise, time, and effort to create transformative educational experiences for students. By educating and inspiring others to support the School, volunteers promote growth in this dynamic and nurturing learning community.

We have loved being part of this community of teachers, students, and parents for the past 15 years. Our children found incredible mentors in teachers and coaches who have taught them lessons that they will carry with them for the rest of their lives. The School's Quaker values have become a part of our children's everyday decisions and choices. The current pandemic has left so many of our children with a sense of uncertainty about the future, but we have seen that Sidwell Friends has the creativity and imagination to make sure that its students are prepared to meet the challenges of a world that is changing so quickly.

As part of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Day of Service, families from all divisions assembled meals for Martha's Table.

Thank You

Our Report on Philanthropy provides a glimpse of the exceptional dedication that you and others in the Sidwell Friends community have shown the School, for last year's students and those to come. We are grateful to the alumni, parents, parents of alumni, grandparents, trustees, faculty, staff, and friends whose investment has elevated the Sidwell Friends experience.

The School Advancement Office strives to ensure the information within this report is accurate and complete. If there are errors or omissions, please accept our sincerest apologies and contact Assistant Director of Stewardship Rachel Hickman at 202.537.8119 or hickmanr@sidwell.edu so we can correct our records.
